SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay mail brings us our usual files of papers, from Calcutta to the 7th, and Bombay to the 13th of December.

The Viceroy and the Lieut.-governor of Bengal had arrived at Calcutta from the North-west, and according to a report circulated by a Calcutta paper, departures from that city, on the part of high officials, will not be so frequent for the future as they have been in the past. It is stated "upon reliable authority" that the Secretary of State for India has ordered that after 1868 the annual official rush to the hills is to be discontinued—great men enjoying great salaries are to remain in or about Calcutta, and take the bitters of official life with the sweets thereof.

The Lieut.-Governor of the North-west Provinces had left Allahabad on a tour, from which he was not expected to return until just before his departure for the Hills. The local Pioneer does not like the prolonged absence of "the Court." "It seems," says that journal, "rather a hard fate that the seat of Government in these provinces should enjoy so little of the presence of its ruler, but we are not prepared to say that we think his Honour's apparent distastes for this station altogether without cause, as apart from its general unattractiveness as a residence, the house accommodation at his disposal is altogether insufficient for his wants. We believe it to be a fact, that when he is accompanied here by his family, he is absolutely unable to find room in his house even for his Private Secretary and Aide-de-Camp."

It is satisfactory to find that railway communication is so improving that it was expected that the entire distance between Calcutta and Bombay will be accomplished by the end of the year in four days.

News had been received of the arrival of the British mission at Burmah. Particulars will be found elsewhere.

It was expected that Mr. Massey would bring forward his annual budget in February.

The Friend of India gives the Viceroy credit for having insisted on the nomination of two co-adjutors to Mr. Dampier on the Famine Enquiry Mission, thereby removing the "family party" aspect which it wore under the management proposed by Sir Cecil Beadon. Our contemporary adds significantly:—"We are gratified by having our doubts as to the prime mover in the change dispelled, as it will be an evil day for Indian public morality when the Head of the State will only take arms against a gross abuse of power in high places by pressure from without."

The Viceroy has not gained the thanks of the uncovenanted servants by his rejection of a petition made by certain parties among them in receipt of Rs. 200 a month and under. The Daily News says:—"The petitioners solicited a permanent and not temporary increase, and their chief ground for the memorial was the enhanced price of provisions and all articles of living and clothing, as well as of all the necessities of life. The reasons assigned by his Excellency in rejecting the memorial are that this increase in all the necessities of life has been gradual year by year, and not sudden. Consequently, the incomes of the clerks have not been at once affected, and they should be able to bear the pressure since it has come slowly upon them. His Excellency has also stated that the number of individuals who have acquired a knowledge of the English language has greatly increased, and that the competition being so large, as a natural consequence the scale of salaries cannot increase, as the supply being larger than the demand (the well-known and often quoted proverb, which has ruined the province of Orissa) it cannot be expected that the Government would unnaturally raise the incomes, when they could get cheaper clerks. This mode of reasoning has not satisfied the clerks. Nor does it appear to us to be at all valid."

From Bombay we hear of several mishaps to P. and O. steamers. First on the list is the Baroda, which was to have brought on the English mails of the 18th November from Suez. A flaw was detected in the after crank of her shaft, and that she could not therefore take her regular turn. The mails were consequently taken on by another steamer. The disabled steamer was to be fitted with a new shaft at Suez. The steamers Norna and Mongolia, with the Calcutta and Madras mails, met with accidents also, and had to be towed back into Galle, where the mails and passengers of the former steamer were transferred to the Madras, which vessel conveyed them to Calcutta, where they arrived on the 30th November. Arrangements were then made for the Madras leaving again to pick up the Norna and to tow her into Bombay. Another steamer was to be despatched to take on the mails and passengers of the Mongolia to their destination.

It is announced that the P. and O. Company have at length decided to establish a weekly line of communication between Bombay and Suez from the 14th of this month. One of the Bombay papers, referring to this subject, says:—"A notification bearing the signature of Mr. Babajee Suddoba, officiating Postmaster of Bombay, was issued yesterday, giving the dates on which the extra P. and O. steamers were to leave for Suez, regarding which he says that "as the steamers are timed to arrive at Suez one day before the Calcutta steamer, in order to insure the mails being taken on, the service will in reality be a weekly service for India." How far it will be worthy of the name of a weekly mail a glance at the dates will show.

The post by the extra steamers, it will be seen, is to close alternately $3\frac{1}{2}$ and $2\frac{1}{2}$ days after the regular mail, and thus while the steamers will be of great advantage as an extra service, they will fall a very long way short of the requirements of a weekly mail, and we doubt if in Bombay the service will be looked upon as other than a species of "after-packet" to the regular mail. The departure of the extra steamers are necessarily subservient to the Calcutta mails, and until all the Indian mails are forwarded via Bombay the irregularity in the departure of these steamers will be unavoidable.

A telegram received in Bombay from agents at Galle stated that the Cashmere, with a broken shaft, was at Mulletivor on the 27th Nov., and that the Punjab had gone to her assistance. The Cashmere, it seems, left Bombay on the 15th Nov. The Punjab appears to have started to her assistance immediately after she had towed the Mongolia into Galle harbour. It is singular that the three steamers Norna, Mongolia and Cashmere should have all broken down in the same neighbourhood, and within a few days of each other. Mulletivor, where the Cashmere was lying, is a few miles north of Trincomalee.

One of the pleasantest events since the departure of the previous mail was a grand banquet in honour of St. Andrew's Day. The proceedings were, of course, very Scotch and very enthusiastic.

It is stated that Government have sanctioned a scheme suggested by Sir Robert Napier for stationing the whole of the European and Native troops belonging to Bombay at Upper Colaba. The proposal to form a camp of exercise at Poona had been abandoned, under orders from authority.

Letters had been received in Bombay from Zanzibar, containing interesting though somewhat unpleasant intelligence of the progress of Dr. Livingstone. Four or five of the natives of India who accompanied the doctor, as a part of his escort, had returned from the interior emaciated and fever-stricken. These report that the expedition had proceeded as far as Mataka, a populous town two days' journey from Lake Nyassa, when it broke down under sickness and heavy burthen—all the animals taken by Dr. Livingstone from India having died. No letter had been received at Zanzibar from the doctor, but one was daily expected by the hands of some Arab traders travelling from the lake districts down to the coast.

Colonel Marriott had been appointed a member of the Bombay Council.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta mail, which may be expected in London on Friday next.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, January 5, 1867.

RETROSPECT OF THE YEAR.

THE old year has passed away with not the best of reputations. The "parting kick" given to it by Punch represents with too much reason the general appreciation of its deserts. And there seems no reason for supposing India an exception to the rule. If she has been spared the horrors of war during the greater part of the period, she has experienced some of the worst horrors of peace in the shape of famine and commercial distress, and has been visited with more than the average amount of disease incidental to the climate.

The Bhootan war ended just when the year began; but the treaty was very far from being a glorious one, and its most exceptionable condition—that in reference to the guns—was made a matter of such difficulty that there was no certainty of peace until the spring. The guns once given up and the Dooars annexed, the force was withdrawn, and we were happily enabled to become "better strangers" with, perhaps, the most pestilential country into which we have ever carried our arms. Of the part taken by Messrs. Beadon and Eden in bringing these troubles upon us we need not remind our readers. Sir John Lawrence's fault lay in allowing himself to be led by his subordinate; so of course Sir John had to take the responsibility, and Mr. Beadon, who had done all the mischief that was not done by Mr. Eden, was made a Knight of the Star of India.

Early in the year came some important official changes both in India and the department at home. Sir Robert Napier took the place of Sir Charles Straubenzee as Commander-in-Chief at Bombay; Lord Napier succeeded Sir William Denison as Governor of Madras; and Lord de Grey and Ripon assumed the reins in Victoria-street upon the retirement of Sir Charles Wood, who was at the same time raised to the peerage with the title of Viscount Halifax. Sir Charles Wood had long been proverbially unpopular, but his administrative powers were acknowledged even by his political opponents, who paid him a very handsome tribute upon this score. As any official who thwarts his own countrymen in India is supposed to be in the interests of the people of the soil, the retiring Secretary of State received some very handsome native addresses upon this occasion.

A "little war" upon the north-west frontier, which had attracted so little attention that few knew what it was all about, was brought to a conclusion before the beginning of the hot weather. The whole frontier, from Swat to Tonk, was in a state of ferment, owing partly to the Bonair expedition and its doubtful results, and partly to the anarchy prevailing in Afghanistan. The Swatees, as usual, were the ringleaders; they kept the whole Yusufzaie district in a state of commotion, and made Peshawur a den of murderers. The patience of the Government being at last fairly worn out, an expedition was despatched to take coercive measures, and the "little war" was over before most people knew that it had begun. The object being accomplished tranquillity was restored.

There were some disturbances in the Persian Gulf early in the year, promoted mainly by the Wahabees, who used Syud Selim, the eldest son of their late Sultan, as their tool. This Syud Selim, after murdering his father while he slept, imprisoned his uncle Toorkee, and aspired to the throne. To protect British interests, as well as to inflict punishment upon the troublesome tribes, it was found necessary to send some ships of war to the Gulf. The result was successful, as far as our own objects were concerned.

Some disturbances of a different kind agitated society in Bombay. Mr. Chisholm Anstey, who was appointed an officiating judge of the High Court, made himself so obnoxious by the severe punishments which he dealt out to fraudulent speculators as to arouse a strong feeling against him; and the delinquents being principally natives, an attempt was made to give his conduct a political signification. Mr. Anstey had, during his career in Bombay, always been on the best terms with the native community, by whom he was largely employed; but he wounded them now in the most sensitive part, and all past relations were forgotten. A quarrel with one of the attorneys of the court intensified the bitter feelings on both sides; and, at the instigation, it is alleged, of some of Mr. Anstey's countrymen, a native petition for his removal from the Bench was extensively signed and duly sent home. It eventually met with a refusal, accompanied by a well deserved rebuke; but it is observable that Mr. Anstey was allowed to retire on the expiration of his officiating term. In addition to the natives, it is beyond doubt that a large proportion of the Bar, whose members he treated with some sternness for professional laxities which had hitherto escaped censure, were against him; and it can scarcely be supposed that the other occupants of the Bench were much in his favour, since it was plain that if Mr. Anstey did no more than his duty, his colleagues could not have been doing all of theirs. It is to be remembered, too, that however harsh his acts, Mr. Anstey was almost uniformly right as to the question at issue. In this, as in other periods of his career, he showed himself an example of the dangerous effects of too much zeal. Ultimately, after his retirement from the Bench, there was a general agreement among the attorneys not to employ him at the Bar; so, after an unpromising attempt to battle against these odds, Mr. Anstey left India.

Towards the end of March Mr. Massey brought forward his budget. The Finance Minister had not won favourable opinions by his measure for amending the Paper Currency by depriving merchants of the privilege of receiving currency notes in exchange for bullion, and his mode of dealing with the finances had not the effect of raising his reputation with the public. The general feeling induced was one of disappointment. Though the deficit was not a large one, and Mr. Massey objected to premature taxation as "pusillanimous," there was an unpleasant significance in his warning that if matters did not improve there would be nothing for it but "new and searching taxation." His professed policy of postponing any financial reform, and refusing to spend a penny upon public works until every other demand had been satisfied, was very strongly condemned.

The attention of the public, however, was soon diverted from the possible consequences of Mr. Massey's shortcomings by a crisis of an alarming kind, which it was necessary to meet at once. There had been scarcity for some months past, in Madras as well as in Bengal, of a more or less threatening character. In the former Presidency its worst effects were averted by the prompt action of Lord Napier, who at once made a tour in the afflicted districts, saw for himself the actual state of things, and directed practical remedies which were immediately put in force. In Bengal an exactly contrary course was pursued. Sir Cecil Beadon stayed at Darjeeling, and trusting himself to his subordinates, caused Sir John Lawrence to believe that the pressure was of an unimportant and passing character, so that such measures of relief as were adopted were entrusted to the Board of Revenue, which performed the work in the approved "how not to do it" style. Those who warned the local government of the danger impending met with nothing but rebuke, their offers of assistance being refused. In May the distress arrived at such a height that concealment became impossible. Throughout the largest portions of Bengal and Orissa the people were dying by thousands, and the relief afforded by the local committees was found utterly inadequate to stem the tide of destruction. Nothing but feebleness and inefficiency marked the conduct of authority; and it was only after repeated remonstrances upon the subject that the Government thought fit to apply the large unexpended balance of the North-West Famine Fund for the present emergency. By June the affliction was invading Calcutta itself, the starving population of the suffering districts flying thither in crowds for succour; and those who reached the city were, it must be allowed, provided for in an effectual manner, on an organised system, very energetically carried out.

And now came a difficulty of another kind. The commercial crisis in this country, culminating in the failure of Agra and Masterman's Bank, produced its natural effect in India, where over-speculation had already reduced public credit to a very precarious condition. For months since the news of the latter catastrophe was first flashed by telegraph to Bombay, the failure of house after house and company after company has been announced by every mail. Latterly values have partially rallied, both in railway and finance undertakings, and it is expected that we shall have now at least an appearance of tranquillity. The effects of the failure of the Agra Bank, however, though disastrous to a painful extent, have not been quite so bad as was at first anticipated; and a scheme for resuscitating the Indian part of the business met with warm support, so that to this extent the bank is once more in working order, and with apparent prospect of success.

Early in July, upon the construction of Lord Derby's Ministry, Lord Cranborne became the Secretary of State for India in place of Lord de Grey and Ripon. The successor of Lord Halifax had given promise of a career of at least respectable utility; but there was but one feeling among those who knew both Lord Cranborne and India, that the latter was in strong and trustworthy hands. Nor were the most sanguine expectations of the change doomed to disappointment even for a time. Before Lord Cranborne had been a week in office he brought forward the Indian Budget—rather earlier than it was usual to bring it forward in the ordinary course of things. And not only was his lordship thus prompt, but he entered fully into the several questions involved, and evinced a mastery over his subject matter which took his hearers and readers fairly by surprise. The results, moreover, considering the difficult conditions of the case, were of a highly satisfactory character, and his lordship gained especial honour for the main principles of his policy, which he announced in a phrase which has become a watchword—"Peace and Public Works." Altogether, the statement was of a most gratifying character, and elicited encomiums from all parties in the House.

A few days afterwards the new Secretary of State made an additional success by the settlement of the long-vexed question of the claims of the Indian officers, in such a manner as to put cavil out of the question, and to leave the "grievance committee" with their "occupation gone," for the very satisfactory reason that their labours were crowned with success. As regards one part of the concessions Lord Cranborne had been anticipated by Lord de Grey, but in their greatest extent they were the work as well as the act of the Conservative Minister.

In dealing with the famine Lord Cranborne was equally energetic. In reply to messages for aid from home—hitherto declared unnecessary, but now made in all haste through the telegraph—his lordship gave the Viceroy full powers to raise whatever funds might be wanted for effectual and comprehensive relief; and, acting upon assurances also given him, with an inconsistency which has not been explained, he withheld his official encouragement to the formation of a Relief Fund in this country, except in the event of a further emergency. That such a contingency will arise is not now expected; for although the famine is far from over the authorities upon the spot are earnestly at work, and the coming crops are expected to fulfil all further requirements. It is anticipated, too, that Lord Cranborne's vigorous administration will bear early fruit in a general system of irrigation—through which alone can such calamities be averted in the future—by concessions to private enterprise hitherto withheld, regulated and controlled by the Government.

There have been troubles of no common kind in Burmah, beginning with a fire that destroyed some ten thousand houses, and followed up by an insurrection headed by two sons of the King, who murdered their uncle, supposed to be the intended heir, two of their half-brothers, and several of the principal officers of State. The King had to fly from his palace at Mandalay, and stand a siege in the city, where he remained at the date of the latest accounts. In the meantime the rebel Princes, finding resistance vain, have given themselves up to the British power, and Colonel Phayre has proceeded on a mission with a view of restoring peace and obtaining some better guarantee for the maintenance of British interests than exists at present.

There has been little else in foreign affairs to occupy the Government of India, though Afghanistan matters are still in confusion, and Russia has made more progress in Central Asia, her latest acts having been to annex Taschkend, and bring the Khan of Bokhara to terms by overrunning his territory.

Some domestic matters have given cause for scandal which could have been well spared. The court-martial upon Captain Jervis, aide-de-camp to the Commander-in-Chief, accused of appropriating his master's stores, and conducting himself insubordinately while under the accusation, has resulted in a verdict that the prisoner was guilty of insubordination, but that the accusations which led to the breach of discipline were not true. Upon this ground the Court recommended the prisoner to mercy; but the Chief, who was the judge as well as the prosecutor in the case, would not listen to the recommendation, but ordered the formal sentence of cashiering to be carried out. Sir William Mansfield, who has so successfully condemned Captain Jervis, has failed to clear himself; but it is not yet known what course the home authorities will take in the matter.

There have been several other Courts Martial in which appropriation of one kind or another have been the offences alleged. That by Captain Harward, at Agra, made the most noise. The prisoner was acquitted, but he has been removed from his post of Commissary of Ordnance.

Among the public acts of Government may be noticed the efficient remodelling of the Medical Service; the settlement of the question of tenant right in Oude upon satisfactory terms both to the Talookdars and the sub-occupants; the constitution of the High Court at Agra, with a very good selection of judges; and an order for a very necessary Commission of Inquiry into the famine in Bengal.

The report of the Currency Commission, presided over by Sir William Mansfield, has been published, and is in favour of gold as a second standard.

The Banda and Kirwee Booty question has been at last decided by the judgment of Dr. Lushington, which has been generally held to be just and equitable. Sir Hugh Rose, besides getting the share which he claimed, has been raised to the peerage; and nobody denies to Lord Shathuairn, of Strathuairn and Jhansi, either the profit or the honour which he has so well won.

The most important official changes in prospect are the succession of Mr. Wylie to the Foreign Secretaryship, in place of Mr. Muir; of Mr. Grey to the Government of Bengal, in the place of Sir Cecil Beadon; of Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald to the government of Bombay, in the place of Sir Bartle Frere; Sir Bartle succeeding to the seat in the Indian Council, which has become vacant by the death of Sir J. P. Willoughby.

Among the deaths in high places in India that of the Bishop of Calcutta demands especial notice. The loss of Dr. Cotton is regarded on all sides as a national calamity, and his place as a man cannot really be supplied, however the diocese may be ultimately disposed of. At present there seems to be some difficulty in finding even a nominal successor.

The last "great" event of the year has been the Field of the Cloth of Gold at Agra. Some critics in this country doubt the policy of assembling together the native chiefs upon such occasions, upon the ground that it reminds them of their feudal inferiority to the "Empress of India," and may bring about too good an understanding among themselves to be beneficial to our interests. There is something in the objection; but there are good effects to be considered on the other side. Thus far, however, we agree with the critics. There is too much lecturing upon these occasions—a custom introduced by Sir Bartle Frere, and followed in not quite so pleasant a spirit by Sir John Lawrence. The princes and chiefs of India, whatever their relative position towards this country, should not be treated in such a manner as to make the meeting a penance instead of a pleasure. The political purpose is surely answered by bringing them together. For the rest, it would be well to make social amenities the main object in view.

EAST INDIA STOCK.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The announcement by Government of their intention to postpone the period for redemption of Indian Five per Cent. stock for ten years might be followed by one similar in character as regards East India stock (amounting to £6,000,000), which it is at present purposed to pay off in 1874, at £200 per £100 stock. The amount of the Security Fund is now £5,800,000, and the requisite twelve millions will not, at compound interest, even under the most favourable circumstances, be forthcoming before 1884. If Government were to intimate a continuance of dividend at 10 per cent. from 1874 to 1884, accompanied by a pledge of the stock being paid off at that date on the terms originally propounded, it would be a boon to the shareholders, Government might avail themselves of the amount of the existing Security Fund, the Bank of England take entire charge of the payment of dividend, and the court of directors, pensioned on their present small allowance from the Council of India, be abolished. The half-yearly courts are a farce, and the whole affair "weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable." I should like to ventilate the idea in your columns if you can afford space.—I am, your obedient servant,

EXPECTANS.

THE PROPOSED STAFF CORPS AT SIMLA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Reading in your impression of the 13th December of the projected organisation of a staff corps at Simla, the question occurs to me—what can have so changed the feelings of the hitherto loyal and harmless inhabitants of that pleasant Montpelier, and the well-known peaceful condition of its adjacent mountains, as to render necessary the embodiment of a local force under the auspices of the Assistant Adjutant-General of the Army and an Aide-de-camp of the Viceroy of India? And whence with reference to so secluded and quiet a retreat arises the necessity for a "rule" conceived in the following terms:—"A body of men fitted by their discipline and efficiency for the defence of Simla, the protection of their families and property, and the support of British authority, remembering that our homes are in an enemy's country, and that to be prepared is always more than half the battle—'Fear God, and keep your powder dry.'"

To a quiet observer of the real condition of the Himalaya hills and vales between the Sutledj and the Jumna, the above appears as nothing better than balderdash in hysterics. This energetic appeal to arm in defence of homes in an "enemy's country" is not only most ridiculous but directly contrary to fact. Moreover, language, uncalled for as this, is calculated to promote distrust in the minds of the neighbouring chiefs, and it surely casts undeserved reflection on their signal good conduct and loyalty, dating from so distant a period as 1815.

What means the phrase "enemy's country?" The real fact is that Simla and the surrounding district was acquired partly from the Rajah of Putteeala and partly from the Rajah of Keontheel, in both cases by exchange. And is it, I would ask, to protect themselves from these chiefs that the fainéant dwellers in shady Simla are enrolling volunteers? If so, before proclaiming these alarming sentiments it would have been well if they had called to mind that it was upon one of the above-named States, in reward of the fidelity displayed by its chief during the Goorca war in 1815 and during the Sikh war in 1845, that territory was conferred by the British Government; and upon whose chief again more recently, for conspicuous vigilance and zeal evinced in our service, during a rebellion perilous to our rule, additional rewards and dignities were bestowed.

The character of the people inhabiting the hill districts in the vicinity of Simla is quiet and tractable, as we learn from Colonel Pratt Kennedy, who for fourteen years was Political Agent at Sabathoo, and who in consequence was intimately acquainted with the neighbouring chiefs and their subjects. He says "that a more amiable and well-disposed people than our mountain subjects are not to be found in India." And further, he adds, "they were most grateful for the change from the Goorca to the British Government." When we remember that these are the opinions recorded only so recently as 1856 by an officer of tried experience, it is lamentable to think that for the present "support of British authority" in those districts the Simla volunteers should deem it necessary to publish "rules" expressed in phrases, as menacing and stilted as those we might expect to hear delivered by some bearded hero of burlesque when he addresses the "troupe" amid the paste-board rocks and crags of a cannibal island.

It may be urged by those who advocate this notable scheme that volunteers are necessary to defend Simla, not against the hostile inhabitants of the surrounding country, but against those who, in troublesome times, might make good their way from the plains below to wreak a sudden vengeance on defenceless English women and children. This plea on behalf of the organisation of a Simla volunteer corps is no doubt a good one. But surely the few permanent residents of the place—the gentlemen with their walking-sticks, the ladies with their fans—without the assistance of the temporary loungers, would not only be ready to act upon an emergency, but be able, in all probability, to cope successfully with a Budmash legion bent on plunder. And natives of the plains, after an ascent of 9,000 feet to a climate which to them is most uncongenial, would be in sorry plight for either effectual resistance or attack.

Suppose, Sir, you urge the organisers to devote their abundant "energies" thus:—If on the active branch of the service, let them attend to their proper duties, for India is the land of high pay, because every office is full of important work. And with regard to those whose avocations are not official, and, therefore, possibly afford leisure, the employment of which in pastime will not be defrauding the public treasury, let them devote their superfluous energy to creating an impression of the efficiency of volunteer companies at or near such populous places as Delhi or Agra, and in the dry spring season, when such sedition as there is in India is secretly concocted, and ever will be so long as so large a proportion of our civil and military functionaries are supinely idling in the distant mountain retreats of shady Simla.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

PHILO-MOUNTAINEER.

THE INDIAN MILITARY FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I think the late G.O. issued by the India Government on the subject of "Subscriptions to the Military Fund," strikingly illustrates the difference to the India services between the present Government of India and that of the late East India Company. Not that I desire the revival of the rule of our old masters, good and liberal as it was, and though they formed an essentially paternal Government, taking care, not only of their servants, but also of their servants' wives and families by compelling us to provide for our widows and orphans. The present Government now leaves this latter duty optional (see G.O. No. 899, published, I think, in your paper of the 22nd ult.).

Married men will, of course, continue to subscribe to this fund, but doubtless the order will be successful in getting rid of some careless bachelors, who now think they will never marry. But it seems to me a very illiberal thing to offer to return subscriptions from the 1st October last only to men who have been paying subscriptions during the whole of their service.

Do you suppose that a life assurance company would insult one's common sense by offering to allow one to withdraw from payment of premia on a policy which may have been held for some twenty years? And yet, it seems to me, by offering to allow us to cease subscribing to this Fund, this is just what the Government is doing.

Having paid subscriptions and donations for twenty years, my interest in the Fund is, to my family, about £2,000. Is this worth nothing to the Government? A policy in a life assurance company to the same amount certainly would be worth something to the company. Is it consistent with the dignity of a great Government not to do what such a company would be prepared to do?

But there are some questions regarding this matter which it behoves those who made over the Funds to Government to obtain answers to. The Government, I suppose, took over the Funds, and bound itself to act upon rules in force; the fact of some of us being under different conditions of service to what we were before, does not alter the conditions of our membership in the Fund. The rules in force provided for deductions from our pay on account of these Funds, both as regards subscriptions and donations, and allowed us to pay up subscriptions and donations, with compound interest, if, for any reason, they had fallen into arrears; now, any such lapse is to be followed by "forfeiture of all advantages accruing" to us or our families!

The questions which, therefore, I think should be answered are:—

1. Is it intended to continue the old system of deductions by Government from pay, for subscriptions and donations to the Military Funds?

2. According to the rules (of at all events the late Bengal Military Fund) can a subscriber now recover his position, in case of not paying subscriptions in proper time, by paying up arrears with compound interest?

3. If the Government undertake the deductions, would they not be legally bound to make them in proper time?

4. Can the Government alter the conditions, on which they took over the Funds, by a subsequent order to members who may elect to remain in the Fund, though their conditions of service may have changed?

I am a member of one of the Funds, of over twenty years' standing, and have paid my subscriptions and donations regularly by deductions hitherto made by the Government. I have never, as yet, received one particle of benefit from the Fund, beyond a certain consciousness of security to my family from want. The benefits are to me all prospective, and if I should happen now miss a single payment, whether by my own mistake, or that of the Government, I am to forfeit twenty years' subscriptions and all benefits thereof.

Surely the order is a cruel one, or I misunderstand it.

On the general advantage of these Funds, I may remark, that in former days an Indian civilian was considered, however young he might have been, worth £300 a-year dead or alive. An ensign was also worth something. I wonder what is to be the fate of Indian society when men cannot thus satisfy careful European mammas of their ability to maintain their daughters whether as wives or widows?

It seems to me that far-sighted men (the only class which ought to marry) will not marry with a prospect of going to India, and are likely to fall back upon that old standard of morality which the East India Company certainly made their servants generally rise above.

Much has been said and much has been done for the improvement of the condition of the private soldier in India and at home, and yet we cannot draw recruits; everything is tending the other way with the officer: more expense in living, a tendency to decrease in salaries, less care taken of ourselves, less security for our families. I wonder when that point will be arrived at when the State cannot find officers—they must deteriorate as a class if they are, at this rate, to be found at all.

THE NEW MONEY ORDER SYSTEM.—At last the detailed orders are out for the extension of the money-order system throughout India. There will be five circles—Bengal proper, the North western and Oudh provinces, the Punjab, the Central Provinces and British Burmah, each with its head-quarters at the local capital, but all controlled by the officer in Calcutta who has charge of the Bengal offices, under the Comptroller General. Madras and Bombay will each constitute one circle and Berar will have its head-quarters at Bolarum. The circles at Allahabad, Lahore, and Nagpore are to be under the local Assistant-Commissioners of paper currency, who will be controllers ex officio. The offices at Rangoon and Bolarum are to be under the charge, respectively, of the Accountant General, British Burmah, and the Deputy Accountant General, Hyderabad. Money-order offices in the Bengal, Madras, and Bombay Presidencies may issue orders upon, and pay orders from, any treasury in their respective presidencies, and the general treasuries of the other presidencies. Money-order offices in the Berar circle may pay each other's drafts, and also issue orders upon, and pay orders from, the general Treasuries of the three presidencies. Thus a great convenience is extended to the whole of India, while the profit of Government will be increased.

THE INQUIRY REGARDING THE DEATH OF BISHOP COTTON.

The committee appointed to inquire into the circumstances attending the accident which resulted in the death of the late Bishop, have, we hear, made a report somewhat to the following effect:—

"The stage from which the accident occurred was not the stage by which it was the intention of the commander of the yacht that the Bishop should land. It also appeared that Mr. Platts had prepared a good and proper landing stage, provided with manropes and lights leading from another part of the Gunduck to the Koel and thence to the shore, and there seems no reason to doubt that Mr. Platts states correctly that he did bring to the notice of the late Bishop the existence of this good landing stage, and that it was his intention that the Bishop should on his return to the vessel embark by this stage. But admitting this stage to have been in itself in every way secure, it did not appear to have been the best arrangement which could have been made, as it would have been preferable either to haul the Gunduck close to the bank or to place the Rotas where it would have been in direct contact with the shore. Moreover, the arrangements made by Mr. Platts to receive the Bishop on his return, and to see that he did cross by the Koel's stage, were altogether insufficient.

"No doubt if Mr. Platts had been made aware of the Bishop's approach, he would have taken proper precaution to see that he embarked on the proper stage; but he did not take sufficient measures to have himself informed in time of the Bishop's return. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal did not consider it necessary to punish Mr. Platts for his want of forethought. The feeling that this most lamented accident might possibly have been avoided by the exercise of greater caution on his part must be sufficient punishment in itself, and will, it is hoped, be a caution which he will never forget. In all other respects Mr. Platts' conduct seemed to the Lieutenant-Governor to have been unexceptionable. But the officer chiefly to blame is, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks, Mr. Niderham, the commander of the Koel, who though strictly charged to be most careful in his arrangements for the Bishop's landing at the different stations, seems to have thought only of going on shore before even the vessel was made properly fast, and hurrying to Calcutta with his wife, who, moreover, was on board the vessel, in direct contravention of a standing order. The Lieutenant-Governor agreed with the committee that Mr. Niderham's conduct is altogether inexcusable. It was his duty to remain on board, and to make arrangements by which the accident would have been rendered impossible. The excuse that he went to Calcutta on duty simply aggravates his offence. He must be aware that the plea of duty is altogether unfounded. His duty was to remain on board the vessel till he received orders from Calcutta, and if he had any doubt on the subject he could have cleared it up by a telegram to the Master Attendant. Mr. Niderham does not appear to be a person fit for the responsible charge of a steamer, and he should at once be relieved of his command. As to landing stages, the Lieutenant-Governor agreed with the Master Attendant that a safer stage cannot be devised than one properly constructed of three or four planks abreast, and protected by a hand rail. A stage of detached planks is not only more easily carried and managed than a fitted platform, but is safer in every way, and is not liable to capsize as a fitted platform might do. It appears, however, to the Lieutenant-Governor, that the planks should be prepared for the reception of iron stanchions, and that hand ropes with stanchions attached should be kept in every steamer. No communication should be allowed between the steamer and the shore till the hand ropes are affixed, and constant watch should be kept on the stage night and day."

The Lieutenant-Governor has acquitted the commander of the Gunduck from all blame. —Englishman, Dec. 5.

A MILLION DEATHS FROM FAMINE IN EASTERN INDIA.

Mr. T. Ravenshaw, Commissioner of Orissa, has sent to the Bengal Government a report on the famine in that province. Never has so heart-rending a picture been drawn. An official whose bias, if it exists, must lead him to tone down the horrible facts, estimates the loss of life from want of food and its consequences at from 500,000 to 600,000, and in some places at three-fourths of the whole population. This is among the four and a half millions of Orissa alone, where the official reports show the deaths to be still going on at the rate of 150 a day. The mortality was not less severe proportionally in the adjoining district of Midnapore, with its population of more than half a million. In Ganjam, with nearly a million of people, the calamity was comparatively light, but famine, disease, and debility swept away thousands. The same is true of Chota Nagpore. We have a reliable record of the deaths of paupers from the famine-stricken districts in Calcutta. Add to all these the mortality in the other districts of Bengal from Saugor Island to Patna and the borders of Nepal, and we have a record of the loss of life which exceeds in horror and extent that of any one of the six great droughts of India during the last century. Before the destroying angel takes its final flight the tale will have mounted up beyond a million known deaths. This is worse than in the great famine which carried off 800,000 people from the North-Western Doab in 1838. We have reason to believe that the most terrible of all recorded afflictions of this kind, that of 1770, was not more ruthless in its murderous work than this which still demands its daily holocaust. For the greater part of that million of deaths has occurred not over a wide extent of territory nor among millions of people, but within an area not larger than that of England and Wales and among a people who do not exceed six millions in number. No plague, no black death, no yellow fever, no great physical convulsion like the most tremendous earthquake on record, has engulfed so many victims. The last famine, of which Baird Smith was the alleviator and historian, carried off half a million, or only a twenty-sixth of the thirteen millions affected, and the starvation price of food was never higher than $7\frac{1}{2}$ seers the rupee. This, ere it closes, will have swallowed up a sixth of the people, among whom rice sometimes was not to be had at all, and for many a long month not lower than 6 seers the rupee.

England, the civilised world, will demand, at the hands of the responsible authorities in India, an account of the stewardship under which such a hideous loss of life has been possible. That account it is for Mr. Justice Campbell and his colleagues in the recently appointed commission of inquiry to give, judicially, sternly, and fairly. In the last famine, when half a million perished, there was no doubt in the public mind that the calamity had been mitigated by every possible means. The thirty years' settlement had done much to apply the first, the radical remedy—the ability of the people to help themselves. The Ganges Canal supplied the second—the water which the heavens had denied for two years. The Local Government, Sir George Edmonstone, a Bengal civilian, furnished the third—the rapid organisation of relief, by himself working through a board of revenue as able as it was zealous, by enlisting the benevolence of the rest of India and England, and above all by applying for the services of a special commissioner and extra official staff at an early period. And the moment it was possible a remedy for the future was promised in a pledge that the thirty years' assessment should be converted into a perpetual settlement. The parallel between Sir George Edmonstone and Sir Cecil Beadon we need not draw. Leaving all other disputed questions to be decided by the facts which the commission will supply and by Sir Cecil Beadon's own defence to the Secretary of State, we have three undeniable truths (1), that Sir Cecil Beadon neglected preparations for the permanent settlement of Orissa on the expiry of the assessments which fell in last month; (2), that up to June last Sir Cecil Beadon, the Board of Revenue and the local officials alike disbelieved in the reality or extent of the famine which the public were pressing on their attention; and (3), that Sir Cecil Beadon has characteristically sacrificed a local official whose only fault was that of accepting this belief from his superiors, and who overtasked himself to grapple unassisted with a calamity the magnitude of which he recognised before his rash censor.—Friend of India.

EMPLOYMENT OF NATIVE TROOPS IN EUROPE.

A correspondent has written to the Times—and the fact has been thought worthy of being telegraphed out to India—recommending the employment of Sikh regiments on extra Indian service in case of a war in Europe, or other circumstances which should make England feel the necessity of supplementing her European troops with foreign levies. This is, indeed, wonderful news; and it is a pity that we have not had the name of the Times' correspondent sent out to us, that he might receive in this country the praise which would, no doubt, be accorded to him for his patriotic foresight and originality. For at least six or eight years this journal, and, we believe, the newspaper press in the Bengal Presidency generally, has persistently, from time to time, been urging upon both the British and Indian Governments the advisability, and the ultimate necessity which must arise, of forming Sikh and other native battalions for foreign service, so as to be ready whenever England shall get into a struggle or await that may require the presence of the hardy and gallant soldiers of Northern India in the field. We do not know how far the Times' correspondent may have gone in his recommendations; but we will venture to assume that he is not acquainted with the present state of our Sikh regiments, and their utter unfitness, as regards organisation and officering, to take part in a European campaign. To send these regiments as at present officered, on such service, would be madness; to officer them on the emergency of the moment for such a campaign would be the next grade of mistake and delusion—folly.

The Sikh regiments in the service of the Indian Government are not now fit or ready for a European campaign; and the task of getting them ready and fit for such service is not one of a moment and a hurry, but one of time, of patience, of careful preparations, and, we may add, of expense; but of an expense which would be well covered and repaid in the end, and which would give to England an army of Indian regiments, of which she need not be doubtful or ashamed on any battle-field in the world. To attain this desirable end, the Sikh regiments must, in a word, as regards officers, be "regularised;" that is, they must have at least five-and-twenty officers to each regiment; and these officers must not be, as their few officers now are, temporary or moveable, or picked up and "stuck on" to the corps in an emergency, but they must belong to it, be of it, be primarily appointed to it, serve with it, and rise in it; and it must be their military home. With such an organisation would arise all the regimental institutions which attach British officers to their corps proper; and, with such an organisation would also arise and be preserved discipline, obedience, loyalty, and high military efficiency; and without such officering our Sikh regiments will never be anything more than they now are; brave, irregular levies, under-officered, and, with all their military merits and qualities, utterly unfit to be brought into line of battle in a European campaign. If the Times' correspondent has not written this, he has written what is useless; if he has written anything opposed to this, he has written mischievous nonsense. As we have said above, the perfection of our Sikh regiments on the organisation we have recommended will be the work of some time. It remains for the Government to commence this work when it may list.—Englishman.

ARRIVAL OF THE BRITISH MISSION AT MANDALAY.

(Maulmain Advertiser, Nov. 17.)

Last Monday a Dawk boat reached Rangoon from the Burmese capital, having come down a distance of five hundred and fifty miles in seven days. A packet was received by this boat. We were favoured by the Very Reverend Mr. Abbona with the perusal of a letter received from the Right Reverend Bishop Bigandet, dated at Mandalay the 4th instant.

The Bishop says:—We arrived here at four o'clock this afternoon. I have seen no one but Mr. Camaratta and the Burmese officials. The Padeing Mentha has been arrested, and is now in prison. Marcar is dead. I will land to-morrow.

Bishop Bigandet went up a passenger in the Flat Panlang in company with the Chief Commissioner. The Damoodah reached Mandalay in eight days from Thayetmyo, having left there on Saturday, the 27th October, as previously announced.

On the arrival of the mission at the capital the country was found to be entirely quiet; all disturbances had been suppressed by the King's troops. The son of the late heir-apparent, the Padeing Mentha, who was reported to be at Shway Boh, had been attacked and captured. He was brought down to Mandalay and has been lodged in prison. The King will doubtless spare his life, and in that resolution his Majesty will be confirmed by the well-known clemency of the Chief Commissioner. The Padeing Mentha's fault is a very venial one. He was not the instigator of rebellion. Far from it. Indeed, he may be said to have saved the life of the King when the outbreak occurred. The Prince's followers drove out the rebels and held possession of the city until the disturbance was put down within the walls of Mandalay. He may be deemed to have fought only in self-defence, and the temporary use of the white umbrella to which he resorted was to assert his supremacy over the district in which he happened to be. His only antagonist will be the Thongzai Meng, his Majesty's eldest surviving son, who may consider him a rival to be got rid of when a convenient opportunity occurs. Doubtless the King will maintain his humane policy to the end of his reign. He has constantly boasted that he has never ordered the execution of any man. If any get killed, it must be attributed to the force of circumstances rather than to any direct command from his Majesty to inflict the penalty of death.

From the purport, therefore, of present intelligence we may conclude that his honour the Chief Commissioner, suite and escort landed at the Royal City on Monday, the 5th inst., and took up their abode at the house of the British agent in that capital. Here we must leave them, to wait the receipt of further intelligence. Personally we should like to be a spectator of the first meeting between the King and Colonel Phayre. His Majesty is a man of strong feeling, as all persons are who truly and sincerely love their race. He will exhibit his character as a man, rather than his dignity as a sovereign. But we must not anticipate events. The public will wait patiently for a narrative of the facts as they occur.

DEATH OF THE "BENGAL HURKARU."

(From the Bengal Hurkaru, Dec. 1.)

We hope that the announcement will cause as much regret to our readers and the public as it does to ourselves, that with this issue the Hurkaru, which first solicited public favour on the 19th of February, 1795, will disappear from the rolls of the Indian press. After nearly seventy-two years of what we cannot but think has been good and yeoman service to the cause of India, the oldest of Indian journals is withdrawn from circulation, in obedience to the dictates of the commonest prudence. To continue a business which is all outlay and no income would be folly. It seems to us, after the experience of over two years, that Anglo-Indian readers have not the slightest sympathy with those who spend time, money, and brains in their service, and that some actually think there is some disgrace in paying their newspaper accounts.

The one sole reason for our closing the Hurkaru is the exceeding difficulty, trouble, and annoyance we experience in recovering the sums due to us. In Madras the other day one of the papers stopped with the brief but emphatic announcement—"No pay, no paper!" And this exactly describes our own position. People will not pay us what they owe, and we therefore close the paper as the only means we have of leaving ourselves free to compel them to do what they seem resolved not to do in spite of threats or entreaties. Can it be believed that we have on our list of subscribers scores who have not paid us one anna in all the twenty-five months during which the present proprietor has conducted the paper, and who—as actually happened in one case—wonder at our impertinence in asking for our own?

Before we can issue a sheet it must be paid for. Every yearly subscriber in the Mofussil costs us at least Rs. 20 for postage alone out of the Rs. 48 we charge him, and yet we are expected to go on paying, and to be thankful that the subscriber does us the honour to allow his name to appear in our books.

Of our own management of the paper we shall not of course speak, except to say that we have had the satisfaction of knowing that our efforts to make it useful have not been altogether without effect. Indeed, we withdraw from circulation with a rising subscription list, and fair prospects, but no amount of praise, no amount of influence can take the place of an income; and hence common sense and common prudence counsel us to withdraw from an enterprise in which we are expected to give ultimate credit, while we have yet something to save. If we have written bitterly and with a feeling of annoyance, the majority of our subscribers are answerable for the mortification and pain they have brought upon us.

In conclusion we shall without delay present our accounts to all indebted to us, and—whilst we gratefully acknowledge that to our friends in town the remark scarcely applies—we trust that a prompt settlement of our claims will save us from the last humiliation of compelling payment.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CHIEFS OF MARWAR, DHOLEPORE, AND DOONGURPORE have expressed their concurrence in the conditions laid down by the Indian Government, in the event of a railway being constructed through their estates. The Jodhpore Rajah has granted 200 feet in area for the railway line or stations.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The 14th Bengal Cavalry, under the command of Major Murray, now at Cawnpore, has been ordered to march at once for Meerut, there to be stationed; so that, we suppose, the 12th Bengal Cavalry, which left Meerut to attend the Agra durbar, will not return to its former station, but will be ordered elsewhere. The 14th Cavalry only arrived at Cawnpore about a year ago.

The 12th Regiment Bengal N.I., Khelat-i-Ghilzie, now at Dordmah and Ranchee, have received orders to march to and occupy the station of Lullutpore, in Scindiah's dominions, leaving two companies behind until relieved by the 10th Regiment of Madras N.I., ordered into the Bengal Presidency. This move contradicts the assertion which has appeared in the up-country papers, to the effect that Lullutpore was to be permanently abandoned as a military station; a rumour the verification of which would gratify many, as it is stated by Dr. White to be one of the most miserable stations in all India.—Orders have at last come from army headquarters for H.M.'s 91st Highlanders to move from Dum-Dum, on account of the sickly state of the regiment at that place; and the arrangement adopted with this view consists in a change of stations between the Highlanders and H.M.'s 27th regiment, Inniskillings, at Hazareebagh. The 91st move immediately, and the 27th come down to Dum-Dum when relieved at Hazareebagh.—The 10th Bengal Cavalry, now at Jhanai, has received orders to march to Saugor, where the regiment will be stationed, a move as agreeable as it was unexpected by the officers and men of the corps.—The Government have through the Marine Department accepted the tenders of the ships Patrician and Beaumaris Castle for the conveyance to England of the 1st Battalion H.M.'s 20th Regiment, now garrisoning Fort William. We understand that the tenders for the troops were as low as Rs. 190 a head,—a sign of the hardness of the times, and the competition for anything like remunerative work amongst the shipping in the port.—The 2nd Regiment, late 31st Bengal N.I., under the command of Colonel W. P. Hampton, has arrived at the Presidency by the East Indian Railway from Lucknow.—We hear that there will be some changes in the relief as regards Bengal cavalry at Jhansie, &c., as it is intended to relieve all the Madras regiments now stationed in Central India by regiments or detachments of regiments from Bengal.

THE BURMESE PRINCES.—We have been informed that inquiries into the conduct of these petted gentlemen have been instituted—probably in consequence of the hint in our last—and that these heretofore immaculate ones have passed through the ordeal (like their hands during the late outbreak, we suppose) spotless. The misconduct credited to them, it is made to appear, should have been placed to the account of some of their highly respectable-looking retinue. There is, however, room for demurring at the result of the inquiries; as, were these princes actually the wrong-doers, there would be a little difficulty in getting at the truth. In the first place some of the Burmese here are favourably disposed towards them; and in the second, others would not speak the truth, for fear of the "characters" attached to the royal suite. We sincerely hope that a short time will be sufficient to rid us of them and their followers. To afford a home for political refugees is one thing—but to support and guard men of this stamp is another.—Maidman Advertiser, Nov. 13.

A RAILWAY EXCURSION.—Saturday, the 1st Dec., was the occasion of a very pleasant gathering sixty-seven miles south of Allahabad, on the Jubbulpore line of railway, when between forty and fifty gentlemen, most of them connected with the works of construction, sat down to a handsome tiffin provided by some of the members of the engineering staff in the Allahabad district. The chief engineer,

Mr. H. P. Le Mesurier, and Mr. Court, our commissioner, were among the guests, many of whom were taken down to the scene of the gathering by a special train. The occasion of it was the completion of the sixty-seven miles forming one of the three districts into which the whole work is divided. Our readers should, however, understand, that the length in question is not at all the distance over which a permanent way is laid down, as quite an additional sixty or seventy miles have been finished in detached portions further south. Indeed, the accounts we receive of the progress being made with this important undertaking are most gratifying, and the good service done by the able chief engineer and energetic contractors, and their staffs concerned in it, have yet to receive their meed of public recognition.—Pioneer.

THE ROUTE OF THE ARMY HEAD-QUARTERS CAMP is as follows:—Allypore, 29th, Jawa, 30th November; Daupoor 2nd, Anoopshur 3rd, Gunwan 4th, Rughera 5th, Tumbhal 6th, Myna-Their 7th, and Moradabad 8th December. The officers who accompany the camp are, Dr. G. S. Beatson, Inspector-General of Hospitals; Colonel J. S. Paton, Quarter-Master-General; Colonel H. E. Longden, Adjutant-General; Colonel Stewart, Deputy Adjutant-General; Colonel W. A. Middleton, Deputy Adjutant-General, R.A.; Lieutenant-Colonel W. A. Crommelin, Inspector-General of Military Works; Lieut.-Col. F. C. Maisey, Officiating Judge Advocate Gen.; Surgeon-Major J. T. C. Ross, Surgeon to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief; Major F. R. S. Flood, Military Secretary; Major T. E. Gordon, Persian Interpreter; Capt. C. J. East, Officiating Deputy-Assist. Quartermaster-General; Capt. the Hon. W. Harbord, Lieut. J. E. Buller, Lieut. G. S. Byng, Aides de Camp; Lieut. W. G. Smith, Esq., Assistant-Judge Advocate-General.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 27.

PLANTING OF TREES ON PUBLIC ROADS.—We find the following in the Government notifications, N.W.P.:—"Claims having been put forward by landowners to the produce of trees growing on the sides of public roads, and doubts having been expressed as to the legality of such claims in cases in which the trees were on Government land,—i.e., on land within the road boundaries,—it is hereby notified for general information that the Government desires a continuance of the arrangement made in years past, when, to encourage the planting of trees, it was declared that those who planted them should benefit by their produce. It is, however, to be clearly understood that no proprietary right in the trees themselves, so long as they flourish, is conceded. If any trees decay or are blown down they may be removed by those to whom the right of produce is conceded; failing such removal, the trees will be sold by the executive engineer concerned."

OPENING OF THE KOHAT PASS.—The opening of the Kohat Pass (or the Darah of Afreedeas) on our frontier, has, we learn, resulted in imports or coming in of various articles of food which had entirely ceased of late in Kohat and Peshawar, consequently the rates of these articles have fallen in price, to the great delight of the native inhabitants. Major Pollock deserves commendation as to the work which his predecessors were unable to do, and more for his finishing the difficult task in an easy way.—Mofussilite.

ROUTE OF THE LIEUT.-GOVERNOR N.W.P.—His Honour the Lieut.-governor's camp will halt at Etawah to-morrow (Dec. 2), and then proceed to the following stages, Bakywar, Ajeetnulp, Phuphoond, Deheepore (halt there Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, the 7th, 8th, and 9th), Ooreyal, Kootod, Uduak, Jaloun, Ooraie, Girthee (halt 16th, Sunday) Jakowlie, Poonch, Mote, Saiee, Chirgong, Banagory (halt Sunday, 23rd), Jhansie, 24th.—Delhi Gazette.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST TWO CIVILIANS.—The Civil and the Sessions Judge of Rajshye we find has brought to the notice of Government the abuses in the jail of the district, as regards the administration of punishments to prisoners, and has complained of the conduct of the Joint Magistrate, Mr. Humphery, and the Magistrate, Mr. Wells, in the matter. The Sessions Judge stated that lately he visited the jail and found numbers of prisoners in hospital suffering from severe lacerated wounds caused by flogging. The offence for which they had been punished was short work, and the floggings had been to the full extent authorised by law, namely, thirty stripes, the only record kept of the punishments being the gaoler's report book, and the order passed by the officer in charge of the gaol therein. Mr. Humphery's punishments appeared to the sessions judge to have been inflicted with indiscriminate severity in defiance of law, Act. II. of 1864. The sessions judge further stated that since the present magistrate's, Mr. Wells, arrival, the management of the gaol has been far from satisfactory, the admissions into hospital on account of punishment wounds having been twenty-five, from the 1st June up to 14th of that month, against three during the previous four months of the year. Of these twenty-five were flogged by Mr. Wells on the native doctor's certificate only, which was quite wrong, and seven more received thirty stripes each on the 11th June last, against the protest of the medical officer, who warned the magistrate that the punishment was too severe for them, and the consequence was that they all went into hospital. On the same day Mr. Wells put two female convicts into irons, which was contrary to law and a breach of jail rule, and in all these cases the penalties were imposed without any recorded investigation, but on the jailor's bad report.—Indian Daily News, Dec. 4.

GALLANTRY IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.—To the Editor of the Dulhi Gazette.—Sir, Will the following be believed? Last week the right wing of a regiment proceeded by train from Agra to Delhi, en route to Peshawur, under command of the senior major. A lady, the wife of a captain present, had taken her seat in a first-class carriage, when the major desired the lady's husband to clear that compartment instantly, saying that two other compartments were set apart for married people. In one of these were a lady, her four children, and European servant, so this was not available; in the other a married couple, two children, and an ayah. The lady objected to travel with a native. The only other vacant carriage was a second-class one. The gallant major was inexorable, insisted upon the lady turning out and turned in himself, while she, who was at the time suffering from severe cough, was on a bitter night obliged to betake herself to the somewhat cold comfort of a wooden pen, denominated a second-class carriage, although in the cushioned compartment, where the major luxuriated, there was room and to spare. I have heard of a gentleman turning out of an omnibus in the rain to oblige some poor woman, but I confess the novel spectacle of a gentleman taking his ease in a first-class carriage, from which he had unceremoniously ejected a brother officer's wife, who in consequence had to spend the night in cold and discomfort, somewhat startles me.—Yours obediently, A BYSTANDER.—[Why not give the names of the officers?—Ed. A.I.M.]

CAPTAIN CUNNINGHAM, 88TH REGIMENT.—A letter from Agra informs us that Captain Cunningham, of the 88th Regiment, who, our readers may remember, was lately arrested at Delhi as a deserter, under a warrant from the magistrate, and handed over to the military authorities, applied on Saturday last to the High Court to issue a writ of Habeas Corpus for his discharge from arrest, on the ground of illegality. The applicant maintained first, that desertion was a purely military offence, of which the civil power could not take cognisance; and, secondly, that even were it otherwise, he, as an officer, could not under any circumstances be accounted a deserter. We believe that curiously enough this is the first occasion on which this point has ever been raised, so that the case will be one of some importance. The Court has taken time to consider its decision.—Pioneer.

MISS CARPENTER, the Unitarian lady who has been visiting Bombay and Madras to promote the extension of female education, has arrived in Calcutta, where she is the guest of Dr. Goodeve Chuckerbutty. Mr. J. B. Tilling, an English gentleman of high character, and a graduate of Cambridge, has sent an address to the educated natives of Bengal, intimating his intention of visiting Calcutta, for the purpose of addressing them "on the all important subject of religious truth." He has been attracted by the progress towards the truth made by the few earnest Brahmins and by the intellectual war of others with the time-honoured follies of Hindooism. He will return to England by Bombay. Thus the example first set by the three Quakers of visiting India for benevolent purposes is being followed.

THE UNDER FOREIGN SECRETARY.—The nomination of Mr. H. Lepoe-Wynne to officiate as Under-Secretary in the Foreign-office during the absence of Mr. Muir was announced by us some time back, and is now confirmed by our contemporary, who justly characterises Mr. Wynne as a promising officer. Our Indian administration wants new blood, and we regard the temporary elevation of Messrs. Wyllie and Wynne, and the preferment of some others of the new regime known to be free from crochets and venerable prejudices, as a hopeful sign of the times, and an indication that the Viceroy will not always be bound by too literally accepted traditions in the matter of promotion.—Pioneer.

THE NAWAB OF RAMPOR.—It is well-known that his Highness the Nawab of Rampore was to have been at the durbar, but for some reason or other he was not there. It is said that he was taken very ill at the house of one of his retainers, at a place called Sumbhul, and that the sickness was caused by his partaking too freely of the banquet provided for his entertainment. But it is doubtful whether sickness was really the cause of his absence from the durbar. It is well-known that one branch of the Telegraph department was kept pretty busy with his messages to Agra for some days after his return to his territories.—Mofussilite.

DEATH OF AN OFFICER FROM CHOLERA.—We regret to announce the death of Ensign W. F. Cavendish, H.M.'s 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade. The deceased fell a victim to cholera the day on which his regiment left the great encampment at Agra. Had the military authorities removed the troops when cholera became so rife at the close of the durbar week this sad event would never have occurred, nor in all probability would the service have been deprived of the many good soldiers who met their death from cholera during the Agra festivities.

TROUBLESOME TRIBES.—A report has reached Calcutta that the Bheels, under one Seoram, are forming en masse upon the confines of the Maiker in Berar, and have been joined by numerous Rohillas and Arabs. The object need hardly be stated where Bheels are concerned; but the chance of plunder and some safe glory has been somewhat marred by Lieut. Moriarty having been ordered to proceed to the scene with two companies of the 6th Regiment and a troop of the Hyderabad Contingent.

MAJOR VICARS, A.D.C.—A letter from a correspondent at Agra, dated the 23rd Nov., informs us that Major Vicars, A.D.C., who was struck down by sun-stroke about a week ago, is still in such a precarious state as to cause great anxiety to his friends. We grieve to hear that the unhappy gentleman became so violent while in a delirious condition as to necessitate his removal from the camp and being kept under European surveillance.—Pioneer.

JUNG BAHADOOR.—Maharajah Jung Bahadur has left Khatmandoo for Toolsepoore in Oude, with about 10,000 men and 500 elephants, to celebrate the marriage of his eldest son with the daughter of the Kassepoore Rajah. The Maharajah, it was said, would reach his destination about the end of December.

METEORS.—The phenomenon of the falling of innumerable meteors was seen in the Punjab at the following places on the dates given opposite to their names:—At Lahore, on the night of the 13th Nov.; at Shahpore, ditto 14th ditto; at Rawul Pindee, ditto 14th ditto; at Jung, ditto 14th ditto.—Mofussilite.

A SPECIAL COURT OF INQUIRY assembles as soon as possible at Shahjehanpore to investigate the state of the accounts of the Paymaster H.M. 36th Foot; President, Major R. Lloyd, 36th Foot; members, Major T. Pierce, Staff Corps, and Captain James, 36th Foot.

COLONEL DALY, C.B., of the Staff Corps, at present commanding the Central India Horse, will officiate as political agent at Gwalior during the absence of Major Hutchinson, who is about to proceed to England for one year.

EXPORTATION OF ARABS.—We believe that the British Government has urged the entire and unreserved removal of the interdict against the exportation of Arab horses. An appeal has been made to the Nanek Pasha on the subject.

ANOTHER COURT-MARTIAL.—We regret to hear from Agra that Captain Roberts, attached to the 41st N.I., is to be brought to trial forthwith, charged with being intoxicated at the ball given by the Maharajah of Jeypore.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AN EXCUSE FOR ADULTERY.—Mr. Justice Holloway, Madras, the first civilian judge in India who has presided at the Criminal Sessions, addressing one Veerapeerommal, found guilty of adultery, hoped that the sentence he was about to pass would not lead to the inference that he regarded the offence, of which the prisoner was convicted, as a light one. "Ethically and morally it was no doubt a very grave offence. But in dealing with a charge of this kind it was necessary to take all the circumstances of the case into consideration, and seeing that the prosecutor's habitation was not a 'Bower of Bliss,' but that there had been frequent quarrels during four years between him and his wife, the sentence of the Court was fifteen days' simple imprisonment." The Friend of India says that this is a somewhat dangerous doctrine to preach from the Bench, especially when administering so strict an adultery law as that of the Penal Code.

COTTON AND INDIGO CULTIVATION IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.—The official returns of cotton and indigo cultivation in the Madras Presidency for the month of October last, are so far encouraging that they show that the distress which has so widely prevailed has not interfered so much as might have been expected with agricultural operations in the country. In the Bellary district we find the extent of cotton cultivation put down at 221,835 acres against 290,907 acres in 1865; in the Kistna district 79,009 against 149,845 acres; in Cuddapah 52,133 against 54,448 acres; in Tinnivelly 46,207 against 35,492 acres; in Madura 41,989 against 37,436 acres; in Vizagapatam 12,067 against 7,209 acres; in Salem 7,160 against 15,632 acres, and in Tanjore 840 against 4,004 acres. It will be observed that the districts of Tinnivelly, Madura, and Vizagapatam had a larger extent of land under cotton this year than last, but comparing the gross totals for all the districts we have named, we find only 461,240 acres in October 1866 against 594,473, in October 1865. We have not the October returns of the Godavary and Trichinopoly districts before us, but the September returns show there were 1,754 acres in the former and 14,672 in the latter district under cotton cultivation, against 1,722 acres and 16,469 acres respectively in the same month of 1865. There has been marked falling off in indigo cultivation in nearly all the districts. In Cuddapah alone, the cultivation in October 1866 was only 9,871 acres against 21,730 acres in the same month last year.—Madras Times.

LORD CRANBORNE AND THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—Lord Cranborne addresses the Governor of Madras in a way which reflects severely by implication on the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal:—"I am glad to see from your despatches that your Excellency has been personally inspecting the northern districts, and I have to express my cordial approval of the measures of your Government for the relief of the distress. . . . Her Majesty's Government desire to express their high appreciation of the active exertions your Excellency has made for the relief of the sufferers under your charge; and there can be no doubt that your presence on the spot was eminently calculated to encourage the praiseworthy zeal of the officers, and furnish an additional proof to the people that the Government was anxious to do all that lay in its power to mitigate the distress that had arisen." Will Sir John Lawrence publish Lord Cranborne's despatches on the Bengal famine?

A CASTE RIOT IN THE KISTNA DISTRICT, MADRAS.—The magistrate of the Kistna district reports that a caste riot occurred at a place called Mustabada, near Bezwarah, on the 26th Nov., which resulted in one man being shot dead, and another wounded by the police. The disturbance arose from the opposition of a number of pariahs representing the right hand caste, to the use of a palankeen by certain goldsmiths of the left hand caste, in a marriage procession. The goldsmiths were originally accompanied by two police constables on their journey to the village, where the marriage was to take place; on approaching the village, their entrance was opposed by a considerable number of men, and information was sent to the nearest police station, whence one inspector, with five more constables, speedily arrived. The mob retired on their arrival, about 7 P.M.; two persons were arrested; and the palankeen was taken into the village. The police kept guard near the goldsmiths' houses, which had been threatened with plunder. About 10 P.M., the pariahs, to the number of two hundred, armed with spears, swords, and clubs, returned and attacked the police, who were overpowered by numbers, and forced to take refuge in the adjoining houses; during the scuffle two carbines were discharged, one man was shot dead and another wounded. Further particulars are promised by the magistrate.—Madras Times.

BOMBAY.

NEW BARRACKS FOR BOMBAY.

(From the Bombay Gazette, Dec. 6.)

Some time ago the Government of India sanctioned a scheme for stationing the whole of the European and native troops in Upper Colaba, abandoning the old plan which was suggested by Sir William Mansfield of having two camps, one on the Flats and the other at Colaba. The new scheme is a recommendation of Sir Robert Napier, and it is the revival of a plan entertained by a former Government of Bombay. In fact, with a view to some eventuality of this sort, all the land belonging to the Government at Colaba was let out on leases, under the condition that it might be resumed at any time on six months' notice being given. When Government finally resolved upon the scheme, a few months back, they very prudently abstained from causing their solicitor to give notice to all the lessees at one and the same time; and they also appointed a committee, which was of course to act in privacy, and the members of which went quietly into the market, and for six lacs of rupees bought up a very large proportion of the house property between St. John's Church and the Lighthouse that was to form the limits of the proposed new camp. We believe the holders of houses not being aware of the purpose for which the land was wanted sold it at very reasonable rates, and that in fact most of it has been secured at an average price of four rupees a square yard, although, two years ago, this land was selling at rates varying from Rs. 15 to Rs. 18 per square yard. A considerable portion of the property, however, still remains to be bought, and as the house proprietors are now fully aware of the intentions of Government, and refuse to accept any compromise, it has become necessary for Government to issue formal notices to them for the resumption of the land which they hold on lease. This notice will be published in the course of a day or two. The lunatic asylum will be removed to Paunchgunny as soon as the new arrangements are carried out. The whole of the houses in the native bazaar opposite the lighthouse will be pulled down, and a large proportion of those in the native town opposite the present barracks will suffer the same fate. A new and commodious barracks will, therefore, be erected for the troops. We may congratulate Government in having arranged this weighty matter so quietly and so well; and the military on the prospect of their getting some sort of convenient habitation in Bombay.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MILITARY ORDER EXTRAORDINARY.—An up-country paper says:—A correspondent sends us the following copy of an order published by the officer in command of a large military station, which, he says, may prove interesting, as a specimen of an attempt to imitate the brusque style characteristic of the G. O. C. C. emanations of the late Sir Charles Napier, which were only saved by their brilliance and effect from being considered pieces of pure impertinence. If this kind of hitting is not rare, the sorrows of a sub are certainly not light, more especially when it happens that the brigadier or colonel commanding is particularly prone to indulge either in a morning ride or drive, and, as it seems likely in this case, inclined to indulge in "chaff." An officer in a palkee looks as much out of place as an undignified allusion to an ayah in a military order; but both "the inevitable palkee" and then the "young man" might have been referred to without such an insulting illustration as a "lazy native":—"At a funeral party this morning, the 'men' of the firing party were in white clothing and the officer in cloth. If it was, therefore, not too cold for the former to be dressed as they were, there was no reason why the officer should, as he did, take upon himself to appear differently. But this was not the worst; the men of the party marched to the hospital like 'soldiers,' the officer, like a 'lazy native,' suffered himself to be carried in a palkee behind his men. He got out at the hospital gate and went with the rest of the party to the grave 'on foot,' but with the inevitable palkee following close behind him, no doubt, for the purpose of bringing him back, as he was seen re-entering in the same undignified and unsoldierly-like manner in which he had left it, his men on this occasion marching behind him. The Brigadier General Commanding does not wish to inquire for the name of this officer, and he is glad he did not see him near enough to distinguish who he was, or he should publish it in this order. He desires, however, to inform him that this slovenly, discreditable manner of doing his duty will not be tolerated. If a 'young man' cannot, on a 'cool,' almost bracing morning, or under any circumstances when the men have to do it, manage to walk a couple of miles or thereabouts, he has mistaken his profession, and had better put himself under charge of an 'Ayah.'"

THE ALLIANCE FINANCIAL was one of the companies started during the heyday of speculation in Bombay. Numbers of persons received allotments of shares without having applied for them; but as the shares were at a high premium they seem to have been readily accepted, and the greater part of the original shareholders sold at the premiums then obtainable; no transfer books, however, were open until many months afterwards. The signatures intended for the articles of association were written upon loose sheets of paper, and the greatest irregularities prevailed; and the contributories protested that they were exonerated from liability because of those irregularities on the part of the directors and their servants. It appeared, however, in evidence, that most of the persons we have named were on the original list of allottees, had paid the first call, and in other ways signified their intention to join the company. The judge, Sir C. Sargent, decided that all must be placed on the list of contributories, and be held liable pro rata to the debts of the association. Very heavy amounts are due by it to the Bank of Bombay and other companies in the city; but it is hoped by the unlucky "contributories" that large sums may be recovered from the native directors who possess property in Bombay, though they long since fled to the little Portuguese territory of Damaun; and it is hoped that a compromise will be accepted by several of the principal creditors of the association.—Times of India.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION.—Application has just been made to the High Court of Bombay—on behalf of the official liquidator of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East—for the removal of a restrictive order preventing the remittance of any assets from the Bombay branch to London. This application was opposed on behalf of the largest shareholders and creditors of the bank, and Sir Joseph Arnould, before whom it was made, has refused to entertain it for the present, not being sufficiently informed of what has been done in regard to an application of a similar nature which has been made to the Court of Chancery in London. As a matter of course, the Court of Chancery will have to insist upon the transmission of the assets to London, the head office of the bank having been located there; and the High Court of Bombay—being only ancillary to the Court of Chancery—will of necessity agree to this on receiving the information required by the judge. This course cannot be otherwise than severe upon the Bombay creditors and shareholders, the latter of whom represent four-fifths of the bank's capital, while most of its largest creditors are in Bombay. Soon after intelligence of the suspension of the bank and the winding up of its affairs in Chancery had been received from London, the Bombay shareholders, feeling themselves to be the body whose interests required most watching, convened a meeting, and appointed a committee in London to make every effort to have the bank's affairs wound up by voluntary liquidation. The power of attorney reached London too late, and could not, therefore, be turned to any account. In the meantime several parties had filed suits in Bombay against the bank, but the Court, on a representation from the liquidators in Bombay that the bank was being wound up under an order from the Court of Chancery, directed that all proceedings be stayed, but that no monies be remitted to London, as the majority of the creditors were in Bombay. For the removal of this order the application referred to above has been made, as the official liquidator in London insists upon having all the assets transmitted to him before declaring a dividend, and thus entailing a needless injury to the Bombay shareholders from the double loss by exchange.—Times of India.

THE ELPHINSTONE LAND AND PRESS COMPANY.—Two circumstances of interest in connection with the subject of calls on shareholders in solvent public companies, and in regard to the liability of "contributories" in companies in course of liquidation under the High Court, have just occurred in Bombay.

The Elphinstone Land and Press Company, formed in 1858—long before speculation commenced in Bombay—has its stock divided into old and new shares, the former of which are fully paid up. In regular course of continuing the works of the company—reclamation and the building of wharves—further capital has become necessary, and of this due intimation was three months ago given by the directors. They recently called a meeting to afford the shareholders an opportunity of deciding how the required capital should be raised, the directors' opinion being that a moderate call on the new shares should be made. This course was approved by an overwhelming majority of the shareholders in general meeting assembled, but a poll was demanded by a few holders of new shares, who objected to pay on any terms. This opposing party was mainly composed of speculators who had purchased the new shares at a twentieth of their paid-up value, together with the trustees of insolvent estates and banks in liquidation. One of the latter was most prominent in opposing the call, and he alone held in trust 2,950 shares, which he used at the poll in opposition to the vast majority of the shareholders. But the result of the scrutiny confirmed the vote of the general meeting by 283 votes against 173, the number of shareholders voting being 175 against 58. The value represented on each side being—as reckoned by the market price of the shares—in favour of a call Rs. 20,22,150, against Rs. 15,12,220. The voting qualification under the articles of the Elphinstone Company is framed so as to prevent the usual preponderance of large shareholders. Had it not been for this precaution a few speculating "bears" and irresponsible liquidators would have been able to throw into serious embarrassment one of the few sound undertakings in Bombay.

BOMBAY PRODUCTS AT THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—Bombay is likely to be well represented at the Paris International Exhibition next year, Government having devoted £3,000 towards defraying the expenses of forwarding articles for exhibition there. These will consist of native productions from all parts of the presidency, and it is to be hoped that their exhibition will lead to the opening up of a larger trade than yet exists in various descriptions of Indian produce. As many of our readers are aware, a large collection of splendid blackwood furniture has been on exhibition in the town-hall for some months past, and this furniture is intended to be the first instalment of the consignments from Bombay. It is now being packed up, and next month it will be sent by one of the P. & O. Company's steamers to Marseilles, whence it will be forwarded to Paris. The other contributions will be despatched either during December or January, in order that they may reach the Exhibition in good time. In addition to the black wood furniture we have mentioned the contributions will consist of inlaid work and carved sandal wood articles from Bombay, agate work from Cambay, sandal wood carvings from Carwar, and black wood carvings from Ahmedabad. From the last-named place there will also be specimens of silver plate, kincoob brocade, silk and cotton manufactures, pottery, native shields, raw produce, and native agricultural implements. Sawuntwarrie will exhibit embroidery and turned work. Surat will send carved work in sandal wood, inlaid work, toys, agricultural implements, cotton and silk manufactures, kincoobs, together with a number of miscellaneous articles, including iron ore, preserved ginger, &c. Dharwar will contribute specimens of its manufactures in cotton and in silk, in brass work, in ornaments and jewellery, such as are worn by native ladies, together with some cotton and other agricultural products. Ahmednuggur will exhibit the same kind of produce from every collectorate, along with specimens of its carpets, leather work, gold and silver jewellery, and native fire-arms. From Belgaum there will be a display of Gokok and Desnoor toys, bison's horn work, and other articles of native workmanship. Scinde will exhibit musical instruments, books, stationery, furniture, lacquered turned work, embroidery, porcelain, earthenware, fancy pottery, cutlery, carpets, tapestry, gold and silver thread, cotton, and woolen fabrics, shawls, jewellery, weapons, knives, apparatus for spinning cotton, ropes, &c., shoemakers' tools, articles of harness, &c., saddlery, together with models of boats, &c. The articles from Poona will embrace figures, in wood, ivory, and earthenware, brass work, perfumery, manufactures, &c. In addition to the articles exhibited by the Bombay Government, the Rao of Cutch intends sending some swords and shields inlaid with gold and silver, spears, daggers, bichwoos (crooked daggers) inlaid with gold and silver, plated mugs, muffiners (vessels for containing perfumery), card cases, cigar cases, flower holders, toasting forks, paper knives, rose-water sprinklers, thimbles, penholders—all of silver, some wine labels made of wild boars' tusks mounted with silver, silks, cottons, chintzes, &c., all of which are of Cutch manufacture. The Jam of Nugger, H.H. the Rana of Poorbundhur, the Thakoor Sahib of Morvee and the Thakoor Sahib of Gondal also intend to contribute a number of articles of native manufacture, most of which will be of considerable value.—

WET DOCKS FOR BOMBAY.—All attempts to arrange for the construction in Bombay harbour of docks for sea-going ships have hitherto proved fruitless; but great hopes have again been raised by a proposal laid before the local Government by the municipal commissioner, according to which first-class docks, sufficient to accommodate three or four times the present trade of the port may be constructed on the Moodée Bay site. This site is not far from the present Custom-house, and is in course of being reclaimed by Government as a site for new wharves and warehouses. It will be a great expense to do this; and Mr. Russel Aitken, the engineer to the municipality, has pointed out that noble docks may be constructed without any larger outlay than that already contemplated by Government. The proposal is that the dock should be made over to the municipality, and administered by a harbour and dock trust. The project is as yet incomplete, but full detailed plans are being prepared, and great interest is excited by the suggestion. It is a disgrace that Bombay has no deep wet docks; and the chance of being so supplied is as gratifying as it is unexpected.—Bombay Gazette.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—A general meeting of the proprietors of the Bank of Bombay was held on Monday forenoon (10th Dec.) in the new offices of the bank, in Elphinstone Circle, for the purpose of filling up vacancies in the board of directors, Mr. J. L. Lushington occupied the chair. On the motion of Mr. G. F. Rinnington, seconded by Mr. J. H. Aspinwall, Mr. W. R. Cassels was appointed a director in the room of Mr. A. J. McDonald, who retired by rotation; on the motion of Mr. H. Maxwell, seconded by Mr. Dosabhoj Dhunjeebhoy, Mr. H. Foreman was elected in the place of Cowasjee Manockjee, who had resigned; and on the motion of Mr. W. A. Cormack, seconded by Mr. Tapidass Virzdass, Mr. M. H. Scott was appointed in succession to Mr. R. L. Tracey, who had resigned. The proceedings, which were quite of a formal character, were closed with a vote of thanks to the Chairman, proposed by Mr. Rinnington.

THE BANK OF GUZERAT.—It gives us much pleasure to state that this bank has been registered according to the Act, and that it will commence business shortly. The deed of Association will soon be ready, and may be expected here in the course of the month. A statement of the affairs of the bank will also be published. We are given to understand that the directors have compromised with the Eastern Financial, by taking over 6,000 shares of their own bank in lieu of the six lakhs and odd owing. The shares are now at 15 per cent. discount. We hope to hear soon of their being at par.—Guzerat Times.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—The following movements of troops have recently taken place at this station:—The head-quarters of the 11th (Prince Albert's Own) Hussars, under the command of Colonel C. C. Fraser, V.C., consisting of one field-officer, four captains, six lieutenants, three cornets, one adjutant, one paymaster, one quartermaster, one surgeon, one assistant-surgeon, one veterinary surgeon, thirty sergeants, seven trumpeters and buglers, two hundred and six rank and file, four farriers, sixty-eight women, and seventy-seven children, left Poonah on Saturday last, by special train from Egutpoora, en route to Mhow. The head-quarters wing of the 15th N.I., under the command of Colonel Adams, arrived here from Ahmedabad on Saturday last, and left for Kolapore yesterday morning. The strength of the wing is as follows.—One major, two subalterns, one assistant-surgeon, ten native officers, five colour havildars, twenty-one havildars, sixteen drummers and fifers, twenty-five niaques, and three hundred and eighty-one rank and file, two hospital assistants, and six bheestees. Our old friends of the 26th N.I. arrived at Poonah from Kolapore, under the command of Major G. L. Thomson, on Monday last, and will leave this on Monday next by special train for Baroda. Three more companies of Major 109th Regiment, amongst which is the company of Germans—all that is now left of the German Legion which volunteered at the Cape for service in India during the Mutinies—arrived at Poonah on Wednesday last from Kurrachee, to relieve the 33rd (the Duke Wellington's) Regiment, which will shortly leave this for Seinde.—Deccan Herald.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.—We are gratified to learn that the proposal to revive the volunteer movement in Bombay is being well received, and that the Commander-in-Chief, with whom the promoters of the movement have been in communication, has expressed his hearty approval of the projected organisation of volunteer corps. In a country like India every Englishman should be accustomed to the use of arms, and practised in the various military evolutions, as no man can foretell how soon he may be called on to apply his knowledge. The Commander-in-Chief gives the promoters to understand that Government will give the movement all the assistance and encouragement in its power. It is contemplated to get up one or two Parsee companies, and we believe that the sanction of Government will not be withheld from this proposal.—Bombay Gazette.

A TREBLE MURDER of a most cold-blooded description was perpetrated early on the morning of the 8th ult. in the native town; the murderers were supposed to be Italians and Spaniards; the object was plunder, and the victims (native money lenders) were attacked in their sleep, two of them being despatched on the spot, and two others dangerously wounded, one of whom has since died; the accused are in custody.

THE GOVERNOR.—We greatly regret to hear that Sir Bartle Frere has not yet recovered from the effects of the accident he met with at Poona, and that in consequence his Excellency's medical attendants have advised him not to undertake at present his proposed voyage to Scinde. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief will, however, go to Kurrachee with a large staff in the Sir John Lawrence to inspect the Scinde division.

NATIVE LADIES AND THE BALLET.—Are we to take it as a sign of the progress of civilisation among the natives of Bombay that the Italian Opera Company there have had a special evening for native ladies, under "the patronage of her Highness the Ranee of Jum Khundee?" A grand opera and ballet formed the entertainment. The ballet is bad enough for Europeans, but, especially as represented on a loose scale in India, ought not to be exhibited so as to degrade women in the eyes of natives, and promote gross immorality. Nautch girls, dressed decently dressed. — Friend of India.

are at least decently dressed. — Monday.

THE HON. THE CHIEF JUSTICE on Saturday, 1st inst., gave judgment in the case of the Eastern Financial Association against Pestonjee Cursetjee Shroff. It will be remembered that the suit was for the recovery of Rs. 29,71,661, being the amount of purchase money and interest on 12,500 shares in the above company, bought by the defendant at a public auction in January, 1865. The suit was tried in August last. The judgment was given in favour of the defendant, but it was considered not to be a case in which he ought to be allowed costs.

MEMORANDUM.

H.M. has been pleased to command that commissions shall not in future be issued to regtl. officers of the British army in India for any superior local rank granted in that country, and that lieut. cols., majors, and capt. who have been gazetted to local rank in India since the 4th July, 1865, inclusive, shall not receive commissions for such rank.

The following general order has been promulgated:—

"Horse Guards, Dec. 20, 1866.

"It having been brought to the notice of the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief that the practice of issuing commissions to officers of line regiments, royal artillery, and royal engineers serving in India, who have been granted local rank in that country, entails upon them the payment of extra stamp duty; and as the rank in question was conferred to meet purely local requirements, his Royal Highness has submitted the case to the Queen, and her Majesty has been pleased to approve of a discontinuance of the system of granting local commissions to the regimental officers in question. In future, therefore, these promotions will only appear in general orders by the Commander-in-Chief in India, and will not be subject to confirmation by her Majesty.

"The lieutenant-colonels, majors, and captains who have been gazetted to local rank in India since the 4th July, 1865, inclusive, will not receive commissions for such rank.—By command, &c.,

"WILLIAM PAULET, Adjutant-General."

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

The half-yearly meeting was held on Monday at the London Tavern. Mr. R. W. Crawford, M.P., was in the chair.

The report of the directors stated that they had the satisfaction of stating that the bridge over the Jumna at Delhi was completed, and that passengers and goods were now forwarded from Howrah into the city of Delhi, 1,019 miles, without a break. The passenger trains were timed not to occupy more than fifty hours in traversing the distance. The permanent way and works were maintained in efficient order during the half-year, at a cost of 84d. per train mile. The revenue account for the half-year ended 30th June last, showed that the working expenses had been 41.34 per cent., against 42.30 per cent. in the corresponding half-year. The general returns showed that the number of passengers carried during the past half-year was—First class, 15,426; second class, 39,782; intermediate class, 175,644; third class, 1,868,885; total, 2,099,737, as against 2,183,319 in the corresponding half-year. The tonnage in goods and minerals, exclusive of parcels, carriages, and live stock, for the half-year ended 30th June last, was 401,305 tons against 391,951 tons in the corresponding half-year. The proportion of railway materials included in the traffic returns of the past half-year was about 5.84 per cent., against 6.77 per cent. included in the returns of the corresponding half-year.

The gross traffic earnings for the half-year ended 30th June last were £1,067,542. 9s. 8d., against £821,676. 10s. 4d. in the corresponding half-year; and the net earnings £626,218. 6s. 4d., as compared with £474,083. 19s. 1d. in the corresponding half-year. It was a source of extreme gratification to the board to be able, in calling the attention of the shareholders to the revenue account, to report that, after providing for the guaranteed interest out of the net earnings, they were enabled to recommend the payment in January of a dividend for the six months ended 31st December, 1866, in addition to the guaranteed interest, at the rate of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum, free of income-tax. The surplus beyond the guaranteed interest was Rs. 1,080,736 1a. 2p., one moiety of which, under the contract with the Secretary of State for India, belonged to the shareholders, and would be applicable to the payment of the dividend the board propose, leaving a balance, after providing for Sir M. Stephenson's annuity, of about Rs. 10,000 to be carried forward. This balance would have been considered left, as in the case of the Great Indian Peninsula and the other Indian railway companies, the whole of the railway materials carried on construction account had been charged at full tariff rates, instead of at 60 per cent. of these rates. The practice of the other Indian railway companies was the more equitable, and would be adopted in future. The board had taken the occasion of the completion of the line to Delhi, and the payment of a dividend beyond the guaranteed interest, to mark their high sense of the personal services rendered by Mr. Noad in the formation of the company, and as its secretary for twenty-two years, by electing him into their body, and by nominating him managing director instead of secretary.

The motion for the adoption of the report was, after a short discussion, carried unanimously.

A dividend at the rate of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum, in addition to the guaranteed interest, was declared upon the ordinary stock.

The paid-up shares were then, by formal resolution, converted into consolidated stock of the company.

A motion was made for presenting Mr. Noad, the secretary of the company, with a sum of £5,000 for his long, able, and faithful services to the company. This was referred to the directors, who will bring forward the question at the next general meeting.

The arrears due to Sir Macdonald Stephenson are to be paid.

A cordial vote of thanks to the chairman and directors closed the proceedings.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR W. MANSFIELD.—The Daily News is informed that on the meeting of Parliament the following questions will be put to the Secretary of State for India:—Is it true that in 1864 the Bombay Government issued an order, with the concurrence of the home and supreme Governments, prohibiting their officers accepting shares in companies where their official positions would give them opportunities of furthering the interests of their own schemes? 2. Was Sir Wm. Mansfield then a member of the Bombay Government, and did he, notwithstanding, accept five shares in the Port Canning scheme, which, if sold at once, would have given him a clear profit of £5,000? 3. Did Sir Wm. Mansfield, after he became a member of the supreme Government, where questions connected with the Port Canning scheme were sure to come before him, hold, notwithstanding his participation in the prohibitory order, the five shares he had received? 4. Did questions connected with the scheme come before Sir Wm. Mansfield in his official capacity, and has any notice been taken of the anomaly by the India-house authorities?

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE BOOTY.—The Army and Navy Gazette says:—We have been requested to correct a mistake in the list which we printed some weeks ago of the corps entitled to share in the Banda and Kirwee prize. The following, we believe, will be found to be a more accurate catalogue of the troops which will be admitted to participate in this prize:—The left wing of H.M.'s 12th Lancers; No. 8 field battery Royal Artillery. Local corps:—The A troop, European Horse Artillery; the F troop, Native Horse Artillery; the A company of the 4th Battalion of Artillery, Horse Battery; the B company of the 4th Battalion of Artillery; the L company of Sappers and Miners; the 3rd European Regiment; the 1st Regiment of Madras Native Infantry; a detachment of the 50th Regiment, Madras N.I.; a squadron of the 2nd Regiment of Cavalry Hyderabad Contingent. To these must be added the officers and men of H.M.'s 43rd Regiment Light Infantry, and the 19th Regiment of Madras N.I., which joined Sir G. C. Whitlock in May, 1858, under the command of Brigadier McDuff, and a detachment of Sikh Cavalry under Lieutenant Metje, known as Metje's Horse. Besides these we must include those portions of the 3rd European Regiment, the 50th Madras N.I., and other portions of the Madras army which had joined General Whitlock before he met the enemy at Banda, and which were still under his command at the date of the capture of Banda or Kirwee. The inaccuracy of the various lists which have been given will, it is to be feared, delay the distribution until next June. But for these mistakes the India Department must not be held accountable, for the list which we published was copied from the roll drawn up by the officers acting for Sir G. C. Whitlock and his troops. We trust, however, that the division of the prize money will not be deferred beyond Midsummer, and we have reason to believe that stringent orders have been issued by Lord Cranborne to prepare all necessary documents with the utmost despatch. Before the distribution takes place, it is to be hoped that a satisfactory account will be furnished by the authorities of the whole amount fairly claimable as prize.

45TH REGIMENT.—Ensigns Curtis and Grant are ordered to embark for Bombay to join the service companies.

J. T. MORTON will be happy to forward a copy of his fully detailed Price Current upon receiving a request therefor. Orders will be shipped upon receipt of one quarter of probable invoice amount, and the balance drawn for with shipping documents.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT IN ARTIFICIAL TEETH, AND GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY,
SURGEON DENTIST,

9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE,
Sole Inventor and exclusive Patentee of Artificial Teeth on a soft, elastic, chemically-prepared india-rubber gum. No wires or unsightly fastenings are required; they are more natural, durable, and comfortable than any yet introduced, and are about the specific gravity of cork, thus combining lightness and durability beyond any yet introduced. They are self-adhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within the reach of all.

Consultations free.

* * * Observe. No connection with any one of the same name.

EPHRAIM MOSELY on the TEETH fully explains his system and exclusive patent. Free on application.

PAINFUL TEETH, OR DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . . It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

"To none is the public more indebted than to Mr. Day."—Illustrated News, page 826, June 9.

"Mr. Day has succeeded in rubbing tooth extraction of its horrors, and we think we are only fulfilling an act of duty in giving publicity to the fact."—Court Journal, p. 582, May 26.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

"Mineralised India-Rubber.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection very improbable, and is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender and great absorption has been displayed, this system must prove invaluable."—Globe, May 21, 1867.

"A vast amount of ingenuity has been displayed not only in the formation of the artificial teeth themselves, but in the method or manner of fixing them."—Morning Advertiser, May 26, 1866.

"Mr. Day has not only succeeded in adding important items to the science of dentistry, but has reduced the operation of painless 'anaesthetic' to a matter of form."—Sunday Times, May 27, 1866.

These and every description of Teeth, combining the latest inventions and improvements in dental mechanism, may be procured from Mr. DAY, Dentist (late Principal Assistant to Mr. Eakell, of 8, Grosvenor-street, W.), 29, Regent-street (three doors from the Polytechnic).

STRANGERS' HOME for ASIATICS, AFRICANS, and SOUTH-SEA ISLANDERS.

At the commencement of another year the Directors of the above Institution acknowledge with grateful thanks the assistance and encouragement they have met with during the last ten years from so many friends and supporters both in India and England. They are thankful the reproach that nothing was done (before the opening of the "Home") for the welfare of the Asiatic or African who visited our shores has been removed, and they trust the "Home" may be considered "as a testimony or witness to show that British Christians are anxious to hold out the right hand of fellowship, to and to assist the poor destitute Strangers who come from a foreign land."

In consequence of the decrease in the number of Asiatics who have come to England of late, a large reduction has been made in the Establishment of the "Home;" but during the last year the work has been extended in searching out and visiting the Asiatics and Africans in some of the principal Towns and Outports in England and Scotland; of which a detailed account will be found in the "London City Magazine" for January, 1867, and to which attention is invited, with the earnest hope that the efforts for the welfare of these Strangers in a foreign land may induce many to come forward to assist the Directors with means to carry on this work of visitation throughout the United Kingdom.

During 1866 118 have been lodged and boarded in the "Home," and 42 destitute cases have been taken in and maintained gratuitously till employment could be obtained for them. Upwards of 700 Turks, Arabs, Asiatics, and Africans, met with on board of ships in the Docks, in the Metropolitan, Provincial Towns, and Outports, including the sick and dying in Hospital, have been visited and spoken to, and all cases of destitution enquired into, and relief afforded; whilst every exertion has been made to put a stop to Asiatic mendicancy.

The Directors, convinced of the necessity and importance of keeping the "Home" open to all who wish to avail themselves of its privileges, once more appeal to the British public for aid to enable them to carry on the work; more especially as they have received such handsome contributions from Native Princes and Merchants of India, with expressions of their estimation of such an Institution, and the blessing it has been, and is, to their poor fellow-countrymen, visiting the United Kingdom.

Donations and Subscriptions will be thankfully received by Messrs. BACLEY, BRYAN, THURTON, and Co., 54, Lombard-street; Messrs. COITTS and Co., 59, Strand; Messrs. SELBY and Co., Fleet-street; NISBET, Berners-street; HATCHARDS', Piccadilly; SKELLY, Argyle-street; DALTON, Cockspur-street; or by Lieut. Col. R. With ordinary vigilance there is no fear of contracting the prevailing epidemic, if Holloway's medicine be taken when disordered digestion first manifests itself, nor need there be any alarm of a sudden outbreak of this formidable disease in any household where these innocent Pills have purified, cooled, regulated, and strengthened.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1814 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains has been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with the sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unimpaired by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshah. . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Gobra. The disarming of the veterans of the Khanda. . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of local changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Ouch was managed."—Fortnightly Review, May 15.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman, March 17.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very full history. The several parts being well planned and well grounded and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner September 15.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta mail brings us papers from Madras to the 13th, and Ceylon to the 15th of December.

We have not received any Calcutta journals by this arrival, with the exception of Government gazettes. It is possible that our contemporaries at the Presidency are already availing themselves of the regular Bombay route.

The news from Madras is very scanty. The Governor had returned from his tour. There had been an explosion of gunpowder at Pondicherry, attended by fatal results. The weather was good, and the prospects of the crops encouraging. Indeed, it was publicly acknowledged that the prognostications of the Brahmins, as to the commencement of a cycle of good seasons in 1866, is abundantly justified by the event. The plentiful monsoon had not even brought its usual proportion of accidents. Except in Trichinopoly public works had sustained no great damage. Two bridges had been washed away on the Tramway line from Arconum to Conjeeverum, but as a general rule the railway lines had borne the ordeal bravely.

The Madras papers are principally occupied in discussing the Irrigation question. With regard to the Kurnool undertaking the Athenæum says:—"From first to last the Kurnool business has been wretchedly mismanaged, and if the Secretary of State had not now agreed to help it out of the slough of despond into which it has long been sinking, it must, practically speaking, have been altogether engulfed, and the unlucky shareholders would have lost all chance of getting more for their investments than the guaranteed 5 per cent. The public had no mind to render assistance to such a shaky and unpromising concern, as the board of directors acknowledged at last. They are luckily escaping, by a providential interposition hardly to be expected, from what would have been a very sad scrape; which reflection should somewhat lower the crest of the imperious cottonites. Lord Cranborne has agreed to advance £600,000 gradually as required, 'for the purpose of completing a section of the undertaking, and the works are now to be prosecuted with the utmost vigour.' We must not 'confuse epitaphs,' and talk of a Phoenix arising from ashes, as we have just spoken of sinking into a swamp, but anyhow a new mainspring has been granted to the Irrigation Company, and the spur is to be applied in a way that will lend an unwonted impulse to progress. The Company and Kurnool district may alike thank Heaven on the occasion of their improved prospects."

One of the Madras papers contains some further particulars of the fracas at the Jeypore Maharajah's ball at Agra, concerning which there is an impending court-martial. The writer, after discoursing about some of the costumes, says:—"But the novelties in attire were eclipsed by one or two other incidents of the evening—by one scene in particular, which we have not the courage to reproduce in all the glowing colours of our correspondent. In this scene the chief actors were a captain and Mrs. —, and a third party, a gentleman. We must suppose that two at least of the actors were inspired by certain influences, and that figure 3 had been a little empress in his attention to the lady, or the gallant captain would scarcely have permitted an agonised protestation of uxorial devotedness to have been wrung from him, in the midst of a large assembly, accompanied by looks and gestures appropriate to such an occasion. In sober earnest, it is a wretched scandal, one which it is useless our attempting to suppress, and which could not possibly have been more mal à propos as to time and place. But perhaps the most painful part of the story remains to be told, and we only tell it at all for the sake of the moral. The figure 3 alluded to was a 'Mr. Smith.'"

From Ceylon we learn that it being finally arranged that Singapore and the Straits shall be transferred in March next from the Indian to the Imperial Government, the distribution of troops is to be as follows:—

SINGAPORE.—Head-quarters and second wing of European regiment; eight companies Ceylon Rifles, (two of which to be detached to Labuan); two batteries Royal Artillery.

CEYLON.—One European regiment; the wing of a second European regiment; head-quarters and six companies Ceylon Rifles; two batteries Royal Artillery; one company of Gun Lascars.

The whole to be under the command of Major-General Studholme Hodgson, at present commander of the forces in Ceylon.

The Colombo Observer says:—"The Ceylon Times was in error in saying that eight companies of the Ceylon Rifles were to be stationed in Ceylon. The recommendations of the Military Commission seem to have been adopted in regard to every branch of the force for Ceylon except the European infantry. The Commissioners recommended only one battalion of 735 rank and file. We suppose a full European regiment and the wing of another would number twice 735 rank and file. It must be, therefore, that the Home authorities have recognised the principle on which we always insisted that Imperial troops for imperial purposes should be placed in Ceylon, in addition to the force deemed requisite for the internal defence of the island. Accordingly we suppose the Times' editor is correct in stating:—"A considerable portion of the European troops will be stationed at Galle available for imperial purposes, and to meet this arrangement barracks on an extensive scale will be erected in that station. It is also arranged that all military pensions remain with the Imperial authorities, and as a set off against this charge the colony will pay as a maximum amount the sum of £160,000, instead of £150,000 as previously arranged."

The same journal contains some additional particulars concerning the Cashmere. That vessel was towed into the harbour of Trincomalee by the Punjab on the morning of the 3rd inst. The Cashmere left Bombay on the 15th November, arrived at Colombo, it will be remembered, on the 22nd, leaving the same day; and on the night of the 24th, at 9.45, she grounded on the sandbanks near Mulletivee-house, on our north-east coast, the only passengers being Mrs. MacCorkindale (wife of the commander), one corporal, four privates, and five natives (deck). As soon as the stranding of the Cashmere was known at Trincomalee, her Majesty's steamer Octavia went to her assistance, but had to give up the attempt to get her off when the vessel's position within the reef was discovered; and even after the arrival of the Punjab from Galle it was at one time considered that the steamer could not be saved, so dangerous was her position and so difficult was it to get near her with the strong breeze from the north-east constantly blowing. All the more credit, says the Observer, is therefore due to those concerned, but particularly to the two captains, Day of the Punjab, and MacCorkindale of the Cashmere, for their indefatigable and successful exertions in saving this fine steamer in such stormy weather on a lee-shore. On the 2nd inst. the Punjab got the Cashmere in tow and off the shoal. It is thought that the damage done to the latter can be repaired at Trincomalie, and she now lies alongside the dockyard to see what can be done.

There was some anxiety felt at Bombay on the departure of the last mail as to the whereabouts of the troop-ship Albert Victor. A telegram, the Observer tells us, has since been received at Colombo inquiring if anything had been heard of her, as a steamer which had been sent in search of her (probably from Bombay) was lying at Carwar waiting for the answer to this message before proceeding further. No information regarding the missing troop-ship could be given either by the Master Attendant at Colombo or at Galle. According to the Times of India H.M.'s steamer Coromandel, which was compelled to abandon the missing ship off Socotra, was taking in coal, and as soon as she could get ready would proceed in search of her again to take her in tow.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay mail, which is due in London on the 20th inst.

There is a report that Mr. Muir, who has only just relinquished the Foreign Secretaryship at Calcutta, is proceeding again to India as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces.

The new Japanese Embassy at Paris is composed of nineteen persons, of whom two are ambassadors, ten secretaries or interpreters, and seven domestics. The first ambassador is named Ko-Idé, the second Tsi-Kawa. They are expected to remain a week in Paris; afterwards they will travel via Berlin to St. Petersburg, and from thence to America. According to the Temps, two permanent embassies will be established at Paris and London. The first will be occupied by Asa-no, and the second by Go-Hara. Japanese schools are also to be established in France and England.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, January 11, 1867.

INDIAN DRESS AND ENGLISH MANUFACTURES.

A LARGE class of manufacturers in this country—and, indeed, the public generally—owes a large debt of gratitude to the Indian Department for placing within their reach a most important and interesting work. We allude to the handsome volume just issued upon "The Textile Manufactures and Costumes of the People of India."* The author tells us, in his introduction, that specimens of all the important textile manufactures of India, existing in the stores of the India Museum, have been collected in eighteen large volumes, of which twenty sets have been prepared, each set being, as nearly as possible, a counterpart of all the others. The eighteen volumes, forming one set, contain seven hundred specimens, illustrating, in a complete and convenient manner, this branch of Indian manufactures. The twenty sets are to be distributed in Great Britain and India—thirteen in the former and seven in the latter—so that there will be twenty places provided with a similar collection, and so arranged as to admit of the interchange of references when desired. Each sample has been prepared in such a way as to indicate the character of the whole piece from which it was cut, and thus enable the manufacturer to reproduce the article if he so desires. In other words, the eighteen volumes contain seven hundred working samples, or specimens. The twenty sets of volumes may thus be regarded as twenty Industrial Museums, illustrating the textile manufactures of India, and promoting trade operations between the East and West, as far as these are concerned. The scheme, of which this is the result, originated under the authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council, and with his sanction also the present work has been prepared. The latter is intended as a key to all the collections referred to, and an explanation of the objects which they are made to serve. It will also increase that ease of reference which was aimed at in making each set like all the others. The work, we are told, will be largely distributed by the India-office, and is besides made accessible to the public by the issue, under authority given to the author of the present edition.

The manner in which the object of the work has been carried out deserves high praise. The museums, as the author remarks, give the visitor every information as to what is wanted and what is to be copied to supply the want. But it was thought that something more than mere specimens was needed to enable the manufacturer to do this intelligibly. It was necessary that he should know how the garment was worn, by which sex, and for what purpose—how, in short, the people were clothed, as well as the qualities of the fabrics they used. It was further necessary that they should know why certain arrangements of ornamentation were adopted, as well as the styles of ornamentation and the materials employed. And a most important point in connection with the subject is one to which Dr. Watson alludes in a note. "The steadiness of Indian taste and fashion," he says, "is a point to which the manufacturer's attention should be directed. Among the people of India there is not that constant desire for change in the material and style of their costume which is noticeable in Europe. Some patterns which are now favourites have been so for centuries, and certain articles were ages ago very much what they now are. It is not, however, to be understood from this that new styles of ornamentation have not been occasionally introduced by the native manufacturer in recent times. What this note is intended to convey is simply that there is a much greater fixity of fashion in India than in Europe, and it is not necessary to point out that this has a very direct bearing on the operations of trade."

A great advantage offered to the British manufacturer is this—that a large proportion of the clothing of the people of India, whether Hindu or Mahomedan, consists of articles which are untouched by the needle or scissors, which leave the loom in a state ready to be worn, and have their analogues in our shawls, plaids, and scarves. As an illustration of the practical manner in which the design of the work has been carried out, we may refer especially to the articles of dress in question, of which the principal are the turbans, loongees, and dhotees, worn by men, and the sarrees worn by women. These portions of costume have each different functions, and the quality of the fabric must fulfil these; they have appropriate lengths and breadths, and these must be considered; they have suitable modes or styles of ornamentation, and these also must be kept in view. In order to enable the manufacturer to do this easily and successfully, the seven hundred specimens have in the present work been arranged in groups—thus turbans have been considered separately, then loongees, and so on. These large groups have been again subdivided, and the basis of the subdivision has been the quality of the body of the garment, the material of which it is made, the mode of ornamentation, &c. Thus loongees made of cotton are not associated with those made of silk; nor are those in which gold thread is used for their decoration conjoined with those in which coloured cotton or silk is so employed.

Dr. Watson, besides affording the best facilities for copying, does not fail to guide the manufacturer in matters of taste. "It must not be thought," he says, "that the taste of India takes delight in what is gaudy and glaring. No one will study the contents of these volumes and come to that conclusion. On the contrary, there will be found there good evidence that Indian taste in decoration is in the highest degree refined. Such combinations of form and colour as many of these specimens exhibit everyone will call beautiful; and this beauty has one constant feature—a quietness and harmony which never fail to fascinate. This also can be said of it—there is no waste of ornamentation, which is present where it should be, and absent where it should not be. The portions which are concealed when the garment is on the wearer are rarely decorated; nor is there any of that lavish expenditure of ornament which so often purchases show at the expense of comfort."

The carefully coloured photographs by which the various articles are represented are accompanied by descriptive details exhibiting both care and completeness; and not only are these of great value to the manufacturer, but they can scarcely fail to be a source of interest to the general reader as well. The work indeed is a very attractive one in appearance as well as in subject matter, being "got up" in the most costly and effective manner. It looks, in fact, more adapted for the drawing-room table than the manufacturer's counting-house; and two subjects of which it treats would be alone sufficient to recommend it to ladies—the production of Dacca muslin and of Cashmere shawls.

GAS IN MADRAS.—There is some prospect of the introduction of gas-lighting into Madras; the Straits Gas Company and private individuals having made proposals on the subject to our Municipal Commissioners, but they do not seem disposed to act at present.

THE AGRA BANK.—The proposed scheme for the resuscitation of the Agra Bank appears to have met with general favour in this country, and we have no doubt that a prosperous future awaits the concern.—Madras Athenæum.

India has from time immemorial been celebrated for the remarkable adroitness of its jugglers and tumblers, and general report declares they have lost nothing of this skill. Unlike their European brethren, their sleights of hand are performed in open daylight, under our very noses, surrounded by a prying audience, and with few artificial and scientific aids to render easy the deceptions practised; and this is their boast, and the glory of their art. Some bits of rag and trumpery enable them to astonish the world. Impromptu orange trees grow from the seed, bear blossom and fruit in a few seconds, and as quickly vanish from our sight. Nor would this remarkable conjuring power appear to be restricted to the natives of the country. To some extent the mysterious influence seems contagious, and there are various well attested instances of its presence having been evinced in Anglo-Indians. Whether the fact arises from sympathetic and nervous causes, conjunction of the stars in combination with atmospheric derangement, or more subtle influences, the fact remains unquestioned. In 1857 we almost juggled ourselves out of India, then we juggled two armies into one so cleverly that they have ever since looked like three, nor have we yet done with legerdmain. In the Gazette of India for the 17th instant the wizards of the Western hemisphere are for ever eclipsed. If Houdin makes pigeons out of worsted, and produces excellent pancakes from an empty hat, the Indian Government has performed infinitely greater things, in a few lines of type, and without effort.

On the eventful night of the 16th instant thirty-four Indian officers bearing breyet rank went to bed to dream of grievances, supercessions, Sir Charles Wood, and the possibility of ultimately dying of excessive honorary-rank, and with the roseate tints of morning they found themselves full majors, lieutenant-colonels, what not. They had retired to rest as Locals, attached to the hideous regimental skeletons, or cadres, of a mutinied army, and in the silent watches of the night they were metamorphosed into staff corps officers, beautiful exceedingly in braid and gold. Two of them passed at a step from the rank of captain to that of substantive lieutenant-colonel, and to render the juggle even more marvellous the fairies had pushed the whole event back to the 12th Sept. If the Wizard of the North makes light of smashing gold watches and restoring them to perfect order, our Indian officials have set time itself at naught. Surely trick of necromancy more meritorious, more long withheld, and more deserving of our approbation, it would be difficult to find. In a little, under similar sleight of hand, the Indian army will cease to appear like an allegory in which every one is what he is not, and no one is what he seems; incomprehensible and absurd dream of Puck, reduced to reality in the year of grace 1861. As the innumerable shades of the damned which presented themselves to Tele-machus vanished when he stepped ashore, so the military difficulties and blunders of the past melt away before the honest presence of Lord Cranborne. For after all, be it told to our shame, our Indian wizard in the present instance was imported, and has nothing Indian about him, but the Gazette carrying out the orders received from home. The only merit which attaches to the conjurors to this country is that those directions have been executed without an hour's unnecessary delay. Friend of India.

THE DISTRESS IN HAZAREEBAGH.—Some idea may be formed of the distress and disorganisation which exist in the famine-stricken districts to the northward, from the fact that at Hazareebagh H.M.'s 27th Regiment, Inniskillings, ordered to move down to Dum-Dum to relieve the 91st Highlanders, cannot find camp carriage to enable them to commence their march; and we believe that, in reply to their indents, they have been informed by the Commissariat Department that it would take a month, possibly six weeks, to comply with their requisition. It appears that, as the famine increased in the surrounding districts, the poorer agriculturists sold their cattle in order to provide food to meet their daily wants and support life, and that all the cattle and carriages not so disposed of are at this moment fully employed in gathering and storing the crops just arrived at maturity. Should this condition of affairs last, it is probable that her Majesty's 27th Regiment will not reach Dum-Dum before the middle of January; nor the 91st Highlanders get housed at Hazareebagh before the hot weather sets in. This is slow moving within a few hundred miles of the presidency.

EMIGRANTS FROM INDIA.—A long correspondence has taken place between the Indian Government and the Secretary of State, involving also the local Governments of Madras and Bengal, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and the Board of Emigration in London, representing the proportion of females to be allowed to accompany emigrants to the several colonies, French as well as English, to which emigration is allowed. The protector of emigrants at Madras suggested that a fixed proportion of 35 per cent. of female to male emigrants should be allowed. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal objected to any increase in the present minimum of 25 per cent. The question was referred to the Emigration Board by Mr. Cardwell, when it was finally determined that the proportion of 50 to every 100 men should be adopted for the present, no promise being given that that proportion shall not be increased hereafter, if circumstances admit of an increase without injury to emigration.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER FORCE.—Major W. H. Paget, Commandant of the 5th Punjab Cavalry, has been selected, we believe, by the Supreme Government to chronicle the events and services of the Punjab Frontier Force since its formation in 1849. Colonel J. L. Vaughan, C.B., was solicited by the Government in the first instance to undertake this task, but was obliged to refuse on account of the very exacting instructions furnished him for his guidance, and which necessitated his sending in weekly reports of progress to the Secretary of Government. Major Paget has served on the frontier for many years, and has attained a thorough knowledge of the frontier tribes, and is fully qualified to record the brilliant achievements of the force that has held the post of dangers nobly during the last seventeen years. The eminent literary qualifications of the Paget family are a guarantee that the work will be remarkable for its accuracy, breadth of view, and completeness, as its style for elegance, brilliancy, and refinement. — Lahore Chronicle, Nov. 24.

PRINCELY CHARITY.—We have been informed that the wealthy and generous Zemindar, Dhunput Sing, of Azimgunge, has sent to Mr. Hogg, the chairman of the Famine Fund Committee, 500 maunds of rice, and 100 maunds of dall, and has further offered 300 rupees per mensem for ten years for a foundling hospital or any other benevolent institution which Mr. Hogg may select.

THE A BATTERY, 11TH BRIGADE, R.A., under orders for England, left Fyzabad en route for Calcutta on Dec. 4.

MAJOR POLLARD, Royal Engineers, Superintending Engineer in Rajpootana, will officiate for Colonel Maxwell, as head of the Department Public Works in the Central Provinces, during that officer's absence on leave to England.

DREADFUL GUNPOWDER EXPLOSION AND LOSS OF LIFE AT PONDICHERRY.

PONDICHERRY, Dec. 7.—A frightful accident occurred here this morning. About three o'clock the inhabitants of the town were startled by a loud explosion, resembling a discharge of artillery, which proceeded from the quarters of the European soldiers. Most visitors to Pondicherry will recollect the handsome range of barracks, two storeys high, running parallel to the parish church. By the sad disaster of this morning the whole building has been reduced to ruins, and four of the most deserving sous-officers of the regiment have been instantaneously killed. An official investigation will doubtless be made into the cause of the accident, until the result of which is made public it would be premature to impute blame to any particular department, but there must have been gross neglect when a large supply of gunpowder and shells was allowed to be stored underneath the sleeping apartments of the soldiers. The cause of ignition it will doubtless be impossible to discover, as the native servants who slept in the basement story adjoining the powder have all been killed. The names of the victims are Caron, Gerome, Lugan, and Lamy, in addition to whom the bodies of one European woman and three natives have been recovered. Some of the corpses were much mutilated, the legs and arms having been blown away by the violence of the explosion. The wounded were immediately conveyed to the hospital, under the personal superintendence of the Governor and the Mayor, who arrived on the spot a few minutes after the accident. The event has caused great excitement in the town, and much surprise is expressed at the number of victims being so small, when the shattered state of the barracks is beheld. A public funeral of the four sous-officers is announced for this afternoon.

Dec. 8.—The population turned out en masse yesterday afternoon, at four o'clock, to take part in the funeral procession of the deceased sergeants, which was celebrated with all the pomp of the Romish Church, aided by the presence of the military and the officials of the colony in uniform. The rain, which was very heavy in the morning, gave place to a sunny afternoon; and the vast concourse of people, with the melancholy duty which had called them together, rendered the scene one of the most impressive I have beheld in India. The route of the procession (from the military hospital to the parish church) led past the scene of the disaster, and on every side were seen traces of the violence of the explosion. Window-shutters carried bodily away, iron stanchions twisted into various shapes, scattered window panes and tileless roofs met the eye in every direction. The church itself had not escaped, many of the beautifully stained glass windows being broken. The damage done in the interior of the neighbouring dwellings in the shape of destroyed mirrors, glass-ware, &c., is said to be very great. One compound which I entered presented the appearance of having undergone a heavy bombardment; exploded shells lying all round, with trees torn from their roots and immense rents in the walls. The inhabitants of this house had a narrow escape, for had a shell fallen on the roof it is impossible to say how many lives might have been lost.

After the funeral service had been performed in the church the procession started for the cemetery, which is about a mile distant from the town. The bodies were carried by soldiers (comrades in arms of the deceased), the coffins being covered with their cloaks, caps, and accoutrements. On arrival at the place of interment, after the coffins had been lowered into the graves, Lieutenant Holtermann delivered a touching speech, in which he gave a brief sketch of the career of each deceased sergeant. Poor fellows! their fate was a most sad one. Time-expired men, they were on the eve of departure for Europe; their passage had been secured in the Meinam, and amidst the regret of their comrades they hoped in a few hours to bid adieu for ever to India, dreaming, doubtless, of a happy reunion with their families in France at the moment when they were launched into eternity! As Lieut. Holtermann proceeded with his speech it produced a touching effect on his hearers, and tears were streaming down the bronzed cheeks of the veterans. A volley of musketry fired over the graves brought the ceremony to a close.

Up to the present time the cause of the explosion remains a mystery. There were lodged in the building at the time of the accident forty-five soldiers, and that so many have escaped with their lives is owing to the fact of the ammunition having been stored at one end of the barracks and not in the centre. The ascertained casualties are—four Europeans and three natives killed, eight Europeans wounded, one dangerously. A corporal is reported missing, but it is supposed that his body is under the ruins, which are being excavated in search of it. Should the corpse not be found, there will be a grave suspicion of foul play. I must correct an error made in yesterday's letter. There was no body of a woman found in the ruins. I heard this report on the spot, but it seems to have been untrue.—Madras Times.

IRRIGATION IN MADRAS.

(Athenæum and Daily News.)

We observe that the Irrigation Department is still hammering away at experiments to ascertain the quantity of water per hour per acre required for paddy cultivation, a problem which they appear to consider oddly enough yet unsolved in spite of the number of centuries during which paddy cultivation under artificial irrigation has been going on in this country.

This opinion is only so far true that the minimum allowance with which rice can be got to grow has not yet been definitely formulated, and it is a very fortunate thing that there is no practical necessity for its being ever discovered, though doubtless it would be a piece of information so far as it went, and highly interesting to that class of minds which will not be satisfied with less than the minutest accuracy in everything, the cui bono consideration being absolutely inadmissible. However, we greatly fear that in this particular instance our Purists are doomed to disappointment, simply because no general formula will suit the infinite variety of circumstances under which rice has to grow. We may set the consideration of rain-fall on one side for the present, that being one so very self-evident that there is no fear of its meeting its due share of attention; it is in fact recognised as a variable condition in the papers before us, and the calculations are expressly stated to be without reference to it, taking the requirements upon the artificial supply as if there was no help to be expected from rain-fall. But the nature of the soil makes a great difference in the requirements, whether it is stiff or light, rich or poor, stony, sandy, gravelly, or containing much vegetable matter, to what extent porous in itself, how effected as to its disposal of the water that may be laid on it, by the character of the substratum, whether for example it rests on granite or on laterite, whether on a level, convex or concave surface of rock. The kind of rice proposed to be grown will also, in some measure, modify the demand, not merely as regards the length of time for which supply will be needed, but also as to the quantity required per hour. White rice takes more than black, for example; and there is a variety, not unfrequently cultivated under tanks of precarious solvency in the upper talooks of the Kistna and Godavary districts, for which it seems sufficient to keep the earth moderately moist; it wants hardly more water than wheat does in the North-West Provinces. The superior sorts of rice, on the other hand, can hardly have too much, until they are almost ready to cut, indeed; they will flourish all the better for being in half-a-yard of water.

Another cause of variation in the quantity of water required for irrigation per hour per acre is to be found in the state of the weather. Again, setting actual rainfall out of the question, a less supply is required in dull cloudy weather than under a bright sun and clear sky, and if the hot land winds are blowing fiercely, evaporation goes on at a still more lively rate, and a still larger quantity of water is needed.

Then the style of cultivation has somewhat to do with the matter; if the water is allowed to flow slowly off the fields, a constantly fresh supply being maintained, it is considered, and most justly, as a very great advantage; the yield is very much better under such treatment than when the water is ponded upon each field. Now if there is a broad and tolerably level extent of country to be watered, the slowly perfluent system consumes but little more than the stagnant one, but in a small space, or with a rapid fall to the drainage, the waste would be considerable. In many parts of India this wasteful system is carried on with avowed intent and withal a very wise one. The object is to get as much water as possible through the upper fields into the drainage channel for lands lying further down. There is a specimen lying before us at this moment in the map of a highly irrigated district, in which a very extensive tract of land is watered by the locking up of a drainage channel which received its whole and sole supply from the waste water of the fields irrigated by two irrigation channels, one on each side of it; the two latter get no credit for the acreage thus watered with their water through the agency of the drainage, yet it is wholly dependent on the supply received by their head sluices, and should be added to their nominal ayaout to form a correct divisor. Another grievous obstacle to getting any satisfactory results from the proposed continuation of the experiments is to be found in the difficulties attending upon, and the unsatisfactory results hitherto always obtained from such experiments. Either there comes a heavy rain and upsets all computations, or the supply in the tank or channel fails when the crop is about half grown, or the channel is discovered afterwards to be different from what it is supposed to be, or it had been gauged in the wrong place, or some indispensable "co-efficient" to the calculation had been overlooked, or the computation required a daily register which the native in charge had either omitted or fudged, most probably the latter.

Experiments on a small scale, indeed, even when successful, prove very little, and usually give an exaggerated result; whereas "nothing can be better," as observed by the Superintending Engineer, First Division, "than the registration of the supply in masses to separate areas"—but he adds, "provided the drainages which carry off the surplus be also accurately gauged." Now, if this means that the amount of water which runs off the said area into the drainage is to be deducted from the amount laid on it by the irrigation channels, and only the remainder considered as the quantity required for the crop, we are altogether at issue with such conclusion, because we are convinced that the said remainder, if applied alone, would either have proved altogether inadequate or would at best only have produced a very inferior crop to that produced by the more liberal style of treatment. Feeding a field is much like feeding a human body, it is the little more than enough which makes it vigorous, healthy, fat, and flourishing. It is not only the water which the plant takes up into its organisation that does it good, the rest of the fluid has served to cool its roots, to bring it manure, to prevent the earth caking about and obstructing its tender roots, to maintain a comparatively cool, moist atmosphere around it instead of a parching dry air, has all aided in bringing it to perfection, and although it afterwards runs off into the drainage as "waste" is much belied if declared useless. Any native cultivator will tell us that it is the having a little water to waste that makes the difference between a good crop and a bad one.* Rice will even stand absolute privation for a few days, if alternated with an ample supply, much better than a regular allowance of the just and barely sufficient semistarvation skimp. We have had a tolerably long experience of rice fields, and our conclusions are, that a constant gentle flow of water through the plants, about three inches in depth and very slow, is the absolute perfection of irrigation, that the next best style is the old native system of deep flooding whenever possible, say fifteen inches of water on the field within the Vurrapoos, although interrupted by occasional intervals of five or six days in duration without water at all. The worst of all conditions as regards thriving and yield, consistent with the actual life of the crop being that constant scanty allowance that never actually leaves the plants dry and never thoroughly wets them, a beggarly parochial beadle's dole of moisture rather than irrigation, which turns out a meagre hungerly crop of five roots to a square yard, and five hundred measures of paddy to the acre.

We are sorry to find these minute refinements so perseveringly carried on, first because it is a great waste of time and trouble as well as a small waste of money, secondly because it really does not signify one pice whether the matter is ever positively settled at all. We know very well by long experience what has proved to be quite sufficient, and in this country, where deficiency of water is not to be feared, there is no possible reason for trying to screw down our allowance a little lower. In Italy, where the supply is constant or comparatively so in duration, but very limited in amount, such refinements may not be out of place, but in India, where the worst year gives us twice as much water as we want, only requiring us to take the trouble to catch and store it, such nicety is a pedantic farce. Accept the two and a-half cubic yards per hour per acre which the broad practical results of the Godavery, Kistna, and Pennair Deltas show to be adequate, without troubling our heads whether it may not be some half-pint or so more than enough. We know that such a supply, equal to sixty cubic yards a-day, would, if spread over an acre of positively unabsorbent material, give a film to water four-ninths of an inch thick nearly, that evaporation in the hot season was deduced from the experiments conducted in 1860-61 at one-fifth of an inch per diem, which would leave, speaking roughly, a quarter of an inch to meet the requirements of absorption by the earth, incorporation by the plant, and enough of drainage to avoid stagnation; there is, therefore, theoretically, every reason to believe that such an allowance would really be the minimum for real use, as well as practically the experience of many ryots, and many years, and many miles of irrigated country to prove that it really is sufficient. Why not at once accept it as such, without frittering away another two or three years in uncertain experiments to find out what it is not of the slightest importance to know—and this indeed is our third and more serious objection. If the experiments are to be continued for two or three years more, and if the new irrigation works to be undertaken are to be kept waiting till the two or three years of experiments shall have elapsed, with such result as may please Providence; then we must indeed remark that the play, though a very pretty play, is sadly out of place, and suggest, upon the good old principle of business first and pleasure afterwards, that the said proposed new irrigation works, reservoirs on line of railway, &c., should be carried out at once, and the elaborate investigations that shall decide whether they are to irrigate an acre or two, more or less, be postponed till the really serious work is over.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—Having no material news of any other kind to impart on the present occasion we shall again, as we have been wont to do lately, commence with that never failing topic the state of the weather, which has indeed a claim to take precedence of the rest, on account of its paramount importance to this presidency, and because we can at last announce the complete fulfilment of all our previous hopes, hitherto chequered by many fears, regarding the out-turn of the season, which has proved the most favourable known for many years past. The Brahmins are certainly right for once in their prognostications. Their meteorological calculations long since led them to foretell the opening of a cycle of good years in 1866, and the prophecy has been abundantly justified by the event. If they are equally borne out by the results of future monsoons, we shall ever after respect their authority as meteorologists at any rate. In all our provinces the fall of rain has been unusually copious, and in many far above the average, and the official weather reports show that it has to a large extent been so distributed in point of time as to take place when the crops most wanted it, which greatly enhances its value. Some districts, of course, have received an over-supply, while others are still deficient, but in no case has anything like failure occurred, and even those few which are still deficient bid fair to have the deficiency made up, as heavy clouds constantly roll over us from the north-east, laden with wealth for the benefit of the interior, and dropping golden showers on Madras as they pass. According to the belief of weather-wise people the whole month of December will be rainy, and appearances at present give colour to their prediction. Since the first instant the downpour here has been quite unusual in amount, the Observatory register for the week ending December 7 showing a total of no less than 17.95 inches. Of this large quantity eight inches fell on the 5th December, and we have subsequently had about two inches more, so that anxiety respecting the agricultural prospects of this part of the country is wholly at an end, and the tanks and wells on which the population depend for domestic supplies have been copiously replenished. Altogether, indeed, our presidency looks forward to the coming year with a far more glad spirit than has inspired her for many weary years past, and those who are spared to see the ingathering of the harvests of 1867 will, humanly speaking, witness joyous scenes to which they have long been strangers. It is pleasant to remember, also, that the plentiful monsoon with which we have been blest has been attended by few serious accidents and very trifling loss of life. Except in Trichinopoly, the public works have sustained no great damage, although many tanks have suffered owing to previous neglect; all the painful experience of the past having failed to teach our authorities the simple lesson that prevention is better than cure, and that if irrigation works were kept in a proper state of repair, as they might be by annual attention, without any extraordinary outlay, the sudden floods which now often injure or destroy them would be successfully resisted. Under the vigorous administration of Lord Napier we trust that a better state of things will prevail, and that we shall hereafter read much more about ordinary reparative expenses, and much less about the cost of demolition than we have done hitherto. The present system of observation and control as to such matters is radically defective and needs a thorough overhauling.—Athenæum.

OUR RAILWAY LINES appear to have bravely borne the brunt of the late rain storms everywhere, but two bridges were recently washed away on the Tramway Company's line from Arcunom to Conjeeveram. The deluge last week flooded the railway workshops at Perambore, and likewise the gunpowder manufactory at Madras, sufficiently to suspend operations in both places, an extremely rare occurrence, but no further mischief was done. A few native houses and walls fell down in different quarters of the town, and two or three lives were unfortunately lost in consequence, but the accidents fell far short of what might have been reasonably expected, no doubt owing to the absence of high winds. The ships in the roadstead occasionally laboured considerably, as the sea ran high, and the surf was sometimes impassable, while at others it brought to grief Massulah boats attempting to cross it when the experiment was unsafe, but nothing serious happened.—Ibid.

OBITUARY.—We regret to mention the recent deaths of two gentlemen well known and respected in the upper circles of Madras, namely, Mr. J. W. Cherry, of the Civil Service, acting collector of sea customs, and Col. Impett, the sheriff of Madras. The former had long been in a state of health which rendered probable the event, but the latter, as an old Waterloo officer, expired after a brief illness. Mr. H. D. E. Dalrymple, our master attendant, has been appointed sheriff in his stead, both for the remainder of this year and also the next, an exercise of patronage on Lord Napier's part which caused considerable animadversion, as Mr. Dalrymple's emoluments are already Rs. 1,500 monthly, and to add another Rs. 1,000 to his pay, at the same time depriving some deserving party of a desirable situation, would be nothing better than a job. We learn, however, that the matter admits of satisfactory explanation. It would seem that orders have come out for the abolition of the master attendant's office as soon as practicable, and that advantage has been taken of the opportunity afforded by Col. Impett's death to provide otherwise for Mr. Dalrymple, whose income will of course not be affected by the change.—Ibid.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—General satisfaction has been afforded by the announcement of Mr. A. J. Arbuthnot's nomination as a provisional member of the Executive Council, as he stands high in public estimation. Report speaks of the probability of his being succeeded in due time as chief secretary by the Hon. R. S. Ellis, C.B. It is also said that when Mr. Pelly retires from the Board of Revenue his place will be taken by Mr. J. D. Sim, the latter again being succeeded by Mr. W. Huddleston. All these moves appear highly probable and fitting.—Ibid.

HIS EXCELLENCY OUR GOVERNOR and Lady Napier continue at Madras, pursuing their usual active mode of life, quietly visiting schools and other institutions which may be benefited by their presence; but his lordship has made no public movement yet. The addresses presented to him during his tour by the planters of Devalah and the inhabitants of Calicut, together with his replies to both, have been made public since our last; we cannot say that we admire the tone of the former address, which is, in common parlance, rather "cheeky," but Lord Napier's answer is cordial and frank. It hints that the planters are a little unreasonable on some points, but recognises the justice of their representation as to others, and promises that Government will do all that can properly be done to meet the wishes of the body in question.—Ibid.

* The natives will always tell us that the most perfect artificial irrigation will not produce a perfect crop; a few showers of rain falling during the period of growth is said to improve the out-turn by a good 10 per cent., even in the best irrigated lands of the Godavery Delta.

AZEEM JAH.—Another rumour of considerable importance has gained currency here, and we believe it to have an authentic basis—namely, that the Secretary of State has at length consented to comply in a great measure with the prayer of Prince Azem Jah's memorials, so far as pecuniary matters go. The claims of his highness as to the Musnud are wholly rejected, which will surprise no one, but he is to be otherwise liberally dealt with, and his family also, we trust, but as to that point nothing has yet transpired. Every one will rejoice, if this long vexed question is thus finally disposed of, with the concurrence of the prince, who will be extremely ill-advised if he attempts any further resistance in pursuit of a vain shadow.—Ibid.

THE BISHOP OF MADRAS reached Bombay on the 23rd Nov., and after a short stay there, proceeded to visit the ecclesiastical stations in Barar, where he met with a joyous reception. His right reverend brother of Bombay came round to this coast from Malabar by rail, and went on in the last mail steamer to Bengal.—Ibid.

PUBLIC HEALTH.—We lament to say that the health of Madras is not satisfactory just now, the mortality being above the average of the past five years in December, and especially with respect to cholera.—Ibid.

TRICHINOPOLY.—The opening of the railway extension line to Caroor is now an accomplished fact. The line has been opened for traffic and passengers since Monday, the train starting from Caroor at 5.30 A.M., and arriving at this station at 7.45, and starting again from Trichinopoly at 4.45 P.M., and arriving at Caroor at 7 P.M. It will be seen from our advertising columns that the Indian Carrying Company have likewise made the necessary move in this direction, so as to enable passengers from Trichinopoly to catch the Madras train every morning, and those from Madras to this station at the same time. The distance from Caroor to Errode is, we believe, only forty or forty-six miles, and we think the Indian Carrying Company might do well to lower their charge of 20 rs. for Europeans or Eurasians, as a person having a travelling coach might easily make that distance in one night with a pair of bullocks at one-third of the rate charged by the company. We shall not be surprised if the common cart drivers compete with the Indian Carrying Company to convey passengers the same distance and in time to catch the Madras train for half the Indian Carrying Company's charge. We merely throw out a suggestion, but the company, of course, will best understand their own interests.—Chronicle, Dec. 5.

AN AGRICULTURAL COMPANY.—A prospectus has been put forth of a new joint-stock association calling itself the Madras Agricultural Guarantee Company. Its promoters are solely enterprising native capitalists apparently, and the company is already so far advanced as to possess a board of directors, a head office, bankers, trustee, and secretary and accountant. The capital is to be Rs. 50,000 in shares of Rs. 50 each, each director taking not less than 100 shares. The remaining capital will be divided into A or preference and B or guarantee shares, the latter to bear interest of 9 per cent. per annum. The company proposes to embark at first in casuarina and cocoa-nut planting, and then to go into coffee.

They will "also embark their capital in sugar, rice, and other high cultivations according as their resources may permit." Elaborate calculations are given of the probable profits on casuarina planting, and altogether, if the prospectus is to be believed, holders of shares in the concern will grow rapidly rich. Such of our readers as have casuarina, corkapilly, and cocoa-nut planting proclivities can gain further information on the subject on reference to the secretary of the company, Mowbray's Road.—Madras Times.

THE LAWRENCE ASYLUM.—It is reported that the female branch of this institution will be removed early in the approaching year to Lovedale, and will be located in the new asylum hospital, which is now almost finished, and will be ready for the reception of the girls in January next. The estimate for this building exceeds 75,000 rupees. It is of admirable construction and very spacious; it will prove more than ample for the accommodation of the children and the schoolmistresses till their own proper quarters are completed. Colonel Farewell and Major Hankin deserve great praise for the untiring exertion and personal superintendence they have brought to bear on the public work to which we are alluding—the future hospital of the two branches of the Lawrence Asylum. The foundation stone was not laid till the 15th of May last, and now it is almost ready.—Neilherry Excelsior, Nov. 24.

PRICE OF BULLION.

FREIGHTS.

To London and Liverpool.—Cotton, £1. 10s. to £1. 12s. 6d.; Indigo and Skins, £2; Coffee, £1. 17s. 6d.

STOCK AND MONEY MARKET.—Government Securities have been very dull, and Four and Five per Cents. are lower. Our present quotations are—Fours, 86½ to 87; Fives, 104 to 104½; Five and a-Half, 110 to 110½; and Bank Shares, 65 to 66 premium. There has been no change in the Bank rates, and the money market continues very easy.

EXCHANGE.—In consequence of a sudden fall in the Bombay rates, Bank bills, at six months, have gone back here to 2s., and there is very little doing by the banks at this rate. Our quotations for Credits and Documents are 2-0½ and 2-0½ respectively, little doing.

IMPORTS.—The import market has been very dull during the past fortnight. Our monsoon rains, which have been very heavy, have interfered with business, and the arrivals of goods from Bombay have reduced prices. Holders of Bombay goods, seeing prices going down in Bombay, have forced sales in this market, and thus depreciated the value of local stocks. The principal business done during the fortnight has been in Grey goods for the Pondicherry market, especially in 7lbs. and 8½lbs. Shirtings, the former realising from Rs. 7-8 to Rs. 7-12, the latter from Rs. 8-12 to Rs. 9. Our present quotations for 7lbs. are Rs. 7-6 to Rs. 7-8, and for Mule Twist, in which there has been nothing doing, Rs. 5 to Rs. 5-2. White Shirtings have been in some request, and there have been small sales of T-cloths—7½lb., 32-inch, at Rs. 6-8, and of Grey Drills, 28-inch, at 5 annas a yard.

EXPORTS.—The price of Cotton is still fluctuating, varying with the advices received from the home and Bombay markets. The recent accounts of the extent of the crop in America appear to have shaken the confidence of the dealers, who are well disposed to part with their stock at reduced prices. The purchases reported during the fortnight have been made at about five or six thousand bales, and about 2,000 bales have been purchased since our last report. Our latest quotation for Cocanada is Rs. 145, and for Tinnerelly Rs. 155. Considerable quantities of Sugar are being purchased in the interior for export to Bombay, via Calcutt, but at prices beyond the English rates. The Sir Robert Seppings takes a large cargo of Skins for the home market.

BOMBAY.

ST. ANDREW'S DINNER.

On Friday Nov. 30th, St. Andrew's day, the Scotchmen of Bombay dined together in the Town-hall, in commemoration of their patron Saint. St. Andrew's day had, for several years past, been allowed to go by in Bombay without any special observance; but following the example set by Calcutta last year, and invigorated by a large infusion of Calcutta blood, Bombay this year celebrated St. Andrew's dinner in a manner worthy the time-honoured institution. The dinner was held in the large room in the Town-hall, a place as admirably suited for the purpose, so far as the dinner goes, as it is unsuited for the after-dinner and more important part of the business of the evening. The acoustic properties of the hall are so infamously bad that before a speech can be heard even imperfectly, the speaker must strain his powers of vocalisation to the utmost, making it positively painful for the hearers—who must themselves sit arrectis auribus—to look at him. But no other place sufficiently large could be found, so that the committee had no choice in the matter; all they could do was to do the best they could under the circumstances, and we think it will be admitted by all that they did so. The flags of all nations, which were suspended between the pillars, were not only highly ornamental, but eminently useful as well, as they prevented, in a great measure, the speakers' voices from being drowned by the echoes and re-echoes for which the place has such a bad reputation. It is worthy of notice that the hall was illumined with gas for the first time on the evening in question, and gas was also availed of in the decoration of the room. At the south end of the hall, behind and above the chairman, were a number of jets in the form of a St. Andrew's cross; while at the north end, behind and above the coupler, was a very magnificent star intended to be a correct representation of the Star of India. For the completeness of the arrangements, and in a great measure for the success of the dinner, great credit is due to the indefatigable honorary secretary, Mr. J. Marshall, who had during the previous fortnight spared neither time nor labour to have everything in readiness against the great day. The bill of fare presented such a choice of dishes, with such choice names as must have bewildered the greatest connoisseur in the company; even the "great chieftain of the puddin' race"—the Scotch haggis—appeared in the Frenchified disguise of "haggis d'Ecosse." Whether there was as little Scotch about the said haggis as the name, we are at present unable to say, as we saw nothing of it ourselves, and have not yet seen anybody who did. For the rest, if the skill in cookery possessed by "mine host" is equal to his ingenuity in inventing names for dishes—from "Cotelettes de Mouton du Club" (? Gram-fed a la Mahasoo) among the entrees, to "Reine Claude a la Bismarck" (? potted head a la Prusse) among the entremets—then the Scotchmen and their guests undoubtedly partook of a very superior dinner indeed. The bands of his Excellency the Governor and the 4th King's Own were present, and played the most appropriate of their delicieux morceaux during the evening.

The number that sat down to dinner must have been considerably over two hundred. The duties of the chair were ably performed by the Hon. A. J. Hunter, who was supported on the right by his Excellency Sir R. Napier, the Commander-in-Chief, and on the left by A. R. Scoble, Esq., Sheriff of Bombay. The croupier, Alex. Brown, Esq., was supported on the right by Captain Young, I.N., C.B., and on the left by R. B. Barton, Esq., Senior Magistrate of Police. Among the guests of the committee we observed, in addition to the gentlemen already named, Brigadier-general Russell, F. S. Chapman, Esq., Secretary to Government, Colonel Dillou, Colonel Maxwell, Captain G. F. Henry, of the P. and O. Company, Dr. Birdwood, Commander Brown, of H.M.'s ship Vigilant, Commander Garforth, of H.M.'s ship Penguin, Commander Robinson, &c. His Excellency the Governor was also invited, but unfortunately was unable to attend on account of a slight accident he had sustained at Khandalla. His Excellency, however, wrote a very warm and characteristic letter to the committee, which was read by the chairman, expressing great pleasure at the revival of St. Andrew's Dinner, appreciation of the objects sought to be obtained, and regret that he could not be present.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MEMORIALS: USEFUL OR ÆSTHETIC?—Various rumours, suggestions, and indefinite statements have been floating about, having for their burden some inchoate wish or intention of honouring Sir Bartle Frere by establishing, or setting up in Bombay, or conferring on his Excellency himself, something that might suitably keep in memory his career in Western India. Now we hope these expressions are indefinite and hazy enough, for they require to be so, in order to represent the present state of our knowledge of what is passing or may be intended, in regard to this matter. We do not even propose to discuss whether such a movement should be promoted or not, but we have found a text for musing on the general subject. The Bombay Saturday Review in its last issue, alluding to a suggestion made by one admirer of our retiring Governor—one whose word on common subjects would be law to the Review—that a high school should be established bearing Sir Bartle Frere's name, remarks as follows:—"Nothing could be in worse feeling or more degrading in its reflex action on the public mind, than the present sordid rage for useful memorials of public men." And further, that "high schools and all such institutions should be able to float themselves, when there is a real demand for them, and it is simply a swindle to take advantage of any man's services and reputation for the sake of floating useful institutions." The Review disdains such sordid taste as vehemently as could Mr. Ruskin himself; and he affirms that "Sir Bartle Frere's life and character amongst us suggest only marble!" Therefore the Review would rather that a statue of Sir Bartle Frere were placed in the Town-hall by the side of that of Lord Elphinstone. If this were done the "æsthetic sense" of the reviewer would be satisfied, and then—albeit it would be in excessively bad taste and feeling, degrading to the public mind, a swindle and a useless interference with the law of supply and demand, as before urged,—yes, then, the Review would "have no objection whatever to a Frere High School and Frere Scholarships also, to any extent."—Times of India.

THE FUTURE PRESIDENT OF THE BOMBAY SANITARY COMMISSION.—Every one will regret to know that Dr. A. H. Leith, President of the Bombay Sanitary Commission, is likely to leave India before the next hot season. It is not now the time to speak of the invaluable services rendered to this Presidency and to sanitary science generally by that distinguished medical officer. We refer to the prospective departure of Dr. Leith, in order to mention an extraordinary rumour that has reached us relative to the possible succession to the Presidency of the Sanitary Commission. It is said that Colonel R. Phayre, now Quartermaster-general, is to be nominated to this post,—one which requires not only great medical experience, but also scientific skill of a rare and high order. Neither of these qualifications can it be admitted that Colonel Phayre possesses, even if it were necessary to look beyond the ranks of the medical service, the members of which, we believe, look upon the post in question as one of the prizes of their profession. Colonel Phayre, like many other intelligent Indian officers, is no doubt well informed in a general way on sanitary subjects, and is said to have considerable experience in building matters, gained in private as well as public undertakings. The quartermaster has, it is true, not been very fortunate in the matter of road-making; but, not being even an officer of Engineers, that should not have been expected of him. As quartermaster-general, and as such, well acquainted with the movements of troops and the requirements of soldiers, it is likely enough that Colonel Phayre has been of good service as one member of the Sanitary Commission, but that is altogether a different thing to his being president of that body. Useful as a lay member, and in the character, so to speak, of an assessor, it would be like a disorganisation of the commission to put an officer of infantry into the judge's post, for that can only be adequately filled by a man of distinct and precise scientific judgment. For these and for other reasons we dismiss for the present as utterly incredible the rumoured selection of Colonel Phayre as future president of the Sanitary Commission.—Times of India.

THE BERAR EPISCOPAL TOUR.—The first visit to this province of any Anglo-Indian bishop for the discharge of episcopal duties took place this month. The Lord Bishop of Madras arrived in Bombay on Friday, Nov. 23, and the clergy of the city breakfasted with him the following morning at the episcopal residence. It will be recollected that his lordship preached at Byculla in aid of the Byculla schools, now slowly arising out of past neglect to make themselves equal to the exigencies of very altered times from those in which they were started. On Tuesday evening the Bishop left Bombay and arrived at Akola the following evening, having spent nearly twenty-four hours in a railway carriage. Mr. Furdunjee Manockjee, the station-master, received his lordship with due honours. The platform of this station is plastered as smooth as a lilyard table, and always kept scrupulously clean. But this night there were added rows of variegated lamps, with flowers in festoons hanging over them. And the pillars were encircled with evergreens and flowers, giving altogether a most festive appearance. His lordship was accompanied by his domestic chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Goodheart, and was met at the station by Captain Dushby, who officiates as Deputy Commissioner, the Rev. Alexander Taylor, Chaplain of Kamptee, the military station of Nagpore, who also visits East Berar, the Rev. Charles Kirk, now in charge of the railway work of the S.P.G., Mr. Stack, the resident engineer of the railway at Akola, Mr. Knollys, and other residents of the station. The following morning there was service at nine o'clock. The large room of the Kutcherry was made to assume quite an ecclesiastical appearance, and for the first time probably in the history of Berar four clergy took part together in celebrating divine offices. Certainly it was the first time that a bishop of the English Church and three clergy had done so. After the Litany, seven persons were confirmed, and about twenty received the Holy Communion. The offertory amounted to seventy rupees, all of which was given to the S.P.G. general fund, except a special donation of ten rupees to the Bombay Deacon Fund for relieving the poor. After the service, his Lordship examined the high school of Akola, which is now making great progress in numbers and education. In the afternoon attention was directed to the need of a church for the station. It appears that a large sum had been already promised towards building one, the contractors of the railway, Messrs. Lee, Watson, and Aiton, alone promising one thousand rupees. All the clerks, &c., of the station were introduced to his Lordship in the course of the afternoon—a capital feature in episcopal visitations. At six o'clock the bishop left by railway for Budnaira, amid renewed illuminations, and the noise of miniature fireworks, arriving there about nine. Preparations were at once begun for a service the next morning. The episcopal party spent the evening in the travellers' bungalow, which is only a short distance from the station, and was, even to the bedding, clean and in good order. About eight the next morning the waiting-room of the station was crowded for divine service. One of the workmen had at a great sacrifice of time and labour put before the door a screen, with the word "Welcome" done in green leaves. Over the windows opposite the entrance, in allusion to the Confirmation, he had placed the words "Let Thy fatherly hand ever be over them. Let Thy Holy Spirit ever be with them." On the opposite side was the text "Little children, love one another." He also put a suitable verse over the door of the room which served as a vestry. The same clergy officiated as on the preceding day. Eight persons were com-firmed, and twelve received the Holy Communion. The offertory amounted to fifty-one rupees, which was given to the poor, according to previous notice. After the service the bishop started for Oomrawuttee, promising to have another service on his return, and the good people of Budnaira will not soon forget their joyful St. Andrew's day of 1866.—Powla, December 6.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH OF MR. W. H. KENT.—We regret to report the death through an accident of Mr. W. H. Kent, a partner in the firm of Messrs. Rogers and Co. It appears that on Sunday evening the deceased was proceeding to church on horseback, when on passing over Byculla bridge the animal became restive, and shortly afterwards quite unmanageable. Mr. Kent tried to pull him up, but in doing so he came into collision with a passing carriage, and becoming unseated fell to the ground. Immediate assistance was rendered in picking up the unfortunate gentleman, but life was already extinct. An inquest was held on the body yesterday morning, when Mr. Thompson, an assistant to Messrs. Rogers and Co., deposed that on the preceding night, at about six o'clock, he, in company with the deceased, was riding along Parell-road. The deceased was in front. On passing the Byculla bridge, in the direction of Parell, the deceased, unfortunately, got on the wrong side of the road, and in endeavouring to obtain the proper side his horse became restive and broke into a sharp canter. In endeavouring to pull up, the horse came in collision with one of the horses of a carriage advancing in the opposite direction. The deceased fell backwards off the horse towards the left side. On reaching the spot witness dismounted and found the deceased bleeding violently from the ears and nose. He was speechless, and died instantaneously. In witness's opinion the driver of the gharry, against the horse of which the deceased came in collision, was not to blame. It appeared that the deceased had lost his presence of mind, and just at that moment had lost control of his horse. A verdict of accidental death was recorded.—Times of India, Nov. 20.

WANT OF EDUCATION AMONGST THE PARSEES.—The Rast Gofter is of opinion that there is a total want of higher education—education befitting the position of gentlemen—among the Parsee "seths" and their sons. Our contemporary does not deny that the Parsees give great attention to a rudimentary education, and that poor and middle-class Parsee students leave college after receiving higher education; but he argues that the latter is found generally wanting among the sons of Parsee "seths." In support of the truthfulness of his complaint that the desire to give a higher education to their sons has not yet sprung up among wealthy Parsees, the writer refers to a statement in Sir Alexander Grant's report, to the effect that there are but two boys belonging to a rich Parsee family at present on the rolls of the Elphinstone College. That their sons may speak English glibly, and be able to transact the routine business of an office, seems to be the summum bonum which the Parsee "seths" aim at for their welfare. They are, therefore, reminded of the lesson which Sir Bartle Frere recently asked them to lay to their hearts—namely, that if men of wealth wish to preserve their honour and position in polished society, they must give their sons a higher education, without which rank and title must sooner or later become valueless. They are also called upon never to forget the words of wisdom from a modern author, that "even when men are born to wealth and high social position, any solid reputation which they may individually achieve is only attained by energetic application; for though an inheritance of acres may be bequeathed an inheritance of knowledge cannot." Many of the sons of the aristocracy of England have made themselves famous by their individual exertions in the pursuit of knowledge, and by rising to eminence in the ranks of science and literature. The writer, therefore, adjures the native "seths," particularly the Parsees, to leave no effort untried in order to maintain their honour and position in civilised society; to be ever anxious to impart a higher education to their sons at any cost; and to avail themselves of the benefits of travel into foreign countries, especially those of Europe.—Times of India.

PROPOSED LITERARY CLUB IN KURRACHEE.—We are glad to hear that an association is to be formed under the designation of "The Portfolio Club," the objects of which are fully explained in the draft rules we append. The idea is most excellent; we would, however, suggest to the promoters of the "Club" the advisability of limiting the number to no less, instead of to no more, than twelve. The prospectus, if we may so call it, runs as follows:—It is proposed to form a club of a literary character to meet once a month at the General Library, for the purpose of reading over original compositions in prose or verse, written by the members of the club, and discussing the merits of the same. The number of members shall be twelve. Each member shall be bound to produce, at least, one short essay or composition once in two months, so that there may be a good supply of papers in the Portfolio for the committee to select from for each meeting. All papers will be contributed anonymously unless the authors wish it otherwise. These papers will be read by the secretary, one of the committee, or by the authors if they wish to do so. A secretary and committee of three gentlemen will be appointed to make the selection of papers for each meeting. Discussions will follow the reading of each paper, or, if preferred, all the papers shall be read first, and the discussions will follow in rotation as the papers are read. The only contribution required will be an inconsiderable trifle from each member, devoted to lighting the room. Letters may be addressed to the secretary of the "Portfolio Club," The Library, Kurrachee.—Sindian.

FURLOUGHS TO THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—A rumour has been floating about for some little time, to the effect that Government contemplates offering to a certain proportion of military officers the indulgence of six months' leave to Europe on Indian pay and allowances, for the purpose of enabling them to visit the International Exhibition at Paris. Whether the selection is to be made on the principle of seniority, or of juvenility, or the officers themselves are to single out the lucky tourists by "drawing lots" out of the helmet of the commanding officer in each station, we have not yet heard. A report of this nature should generally be received with the greatest caution. In the present instance it may not improbably be indebted for its origin to the fertile imaginations of a class of individuals who are fond of propagating what are vulgarly called "shaves"—but we may at the same time express a hope that, if not as yet conceived within the official breast, it may in good time meet with the serious and liberal consideration that we think it deserves. Under existing regulations, a good many officers obtain leave of absence from their duties during the six hot months of the year.—Times of India.

PECUNIARY AID TO SHERE ALI KHAN.—A report is said to be current in Cabool that the British Government has promised pecuniary aid to the Ameer Shere Ali Khan, and that an advance is to be made forthwith on Cabool. This has frightened the present rulers.

CEYLON.

We take the following from the summary of the Colombo Observer of December 15:—

THE WEATHER has been rather unusual for this time of the year, the atmosphere carrying more moisture than is favourable for coffee drying.

DURING THE PAST FORTNIGHT the Legislative

Council has disposed of a good deal of work. The Supplementary Supply Bill, the Amended and Consolidated Branch Roads Ordinance, with the Toll Ordinances; the Bill for the Destruction of Useless Documents, and the Bill to Prevent the Wanton Destruction of Fish; the Jails Bill, and those relating to Arbitrations and Awards and Kandian Marriages, are all laws in force. While Committees sit considering the Supply Bill for 1867, the new Fiscals Bill and other matters,—the Governor, who has had a rather severe shake of the fever, which has been prevalent since the setting in of the "long shore wind," has determined to take a run to Newera Ellia, where Lady Robinson resides with the new "little R." (a fine boy, and so like its father, we are told), which Sir Hercules Robinson has never yet seen. The Governor will return to Colombo, in complete health, we trust, to close the Session of Council in the early part of 1867.

THE HIGH VALUATION FOR ASSESSMENT purposes of Government buildings by the assessors of the Colombo Municipality has led to the introduction of a Bill giving an appeal to courts of justice from the decisions of the Municipality in matters of assessment. The tone taken by the mouthpiece of Government affords a new proof that Government are not inclined to deal liberally with the Municipality. The Colombo Council is debating questions of such a nature as water supply, &c.

THE FINAL SETTLEMENT OF THE MILITARY QUESTION is announced in a despatch from Lord Carnarvon, enclosing one from the War Department. It has been determined that a special corps of Beloochees shall be raised for China, from which country the Ceylon Rifles are to be withdrawn. The regiment is to be raised to fourteen companies, of which six, with head-quarters, are to be stationed in Ceylon; six in the Straits Settlements, and two in Labuan. Singapore, Penang, and Lubuan will, with Ceylon, form one command, under Major-general Studholm Hodgson, who at present commands the troops in Ceylon. What is characterised as a valuable report from this officer, in which he dwelt on the importance of Galle to Imperial interests (the view we have always held in regard to Trincomalie as well as Galle), has influenced the final decision regarding the force to be stationed in Ceylon. The wing of a European regiment more than the Commissioners reported necessary for internal defence will be stationed at Galle, where, doubtless, the colony will be called on to erect spacious barracks and probably great defensive works. Except those of the naval fortress of Trincomalie, all forts and defensive works and barracks are to be kept up by the colony, in addition to an annual contribution, including £8,000 for native pensions, of £160,000, to which the sum will rise in 1869. What with direct contribution and forts, defensive works, barracks, &c., there can be no doubt that henceforward the military expenditure of Ceylon will be £200,000, or one-fifth of the entire revenue. No colony in the British empire—India, which is "held by the sword," excepted—can show anything like this. It is time for the Home Government to grant us greater latitude as to the disposal of the remaining four-fifths of our revenue.

RICE CONTINUES to be IMPORTED in large quantities, and although the price is still considerably above normal rates, yet it has fallen so considerably below the famine rates of 13s. to 16s. per bushel, that the Colombo Relief Committee has ceased its operations and determined that the balance of subscriptions shall be returned.

AS REGARDS "THE SERVICE" we have to report that since Mr. Cairns' departure Mr. Trotter has continued to conduct the duties of postmaster-general, an arrangement which, it is supposed, will be continued until the additional six months' leave obtained by Capt. Barton have expired. Mr. Smedley, having returned to the island, has been appointed magistrate of Gampola.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ABYSSINIAN CAPTIVES.—Further intelligence has, we learn, been received respecting the British mission to Abyssinia. Private letters from Magdala, dated the 5th of November, state that Mr. Rassam, Lieutenant Prideaux, and Dr. Blanc, though still in chains, were at that time in perfect health. His savage Highness the King seems to have been treating the captives pretty well. Each had a room to himself, each was attended by his own servants, and all were provided with rations. Nor did King Theodore's acts of politeness stop at those privileges. He was constantly sending messages to ask how the prisoners were, and how they were getting on. With great courtesy he told them to keep up their spirits, for he was their friend. But he does not seem to have shown any sign of willingness to set them free. A reply from him to Mr. Flad's letter, however, was expected at Massowa about the 26th of December.—Daily Telegraph.

His active service was entirely in India.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—We learn that the proposal to form a camp of exercise at Poona has been finally abandoned under orders from the Government of India. In consequence of this change of plans, the 33rd Regiment proceeds at once to Kurrachee to relieve the 95th Regiment, which will proceed direct to Mhow and replace the 103rd Bombay Infantry, who are under orders for Bengal. The 109th, whose head-quarters are at present somewhere in the Indian Ocean, on board the Albert Victor, will, when discovered and brought to land, be stationed at Poona. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, will, we believe, proceed on a tour of inspection in Scinde, early in January.

OUTBREAK OF CHOLERA AT SHOLAPORE.—We are sorry to learn that cholera has broken out at Sholapore, in the assigned districts of Hyderabad, and that many of the inhabitants have fallen victims to the disease.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICES.—Mr. Lewin, who conducted the arrangements at the Taj on the occasion of the splendid fete given by the Maharajah of Gwalior (a fete on which occasion, we are sorry to say, one of our respected contemporaries, who ought to have known better, appears to have thought himself in heaven) has been rewarded by a khilnat conferred by his Highness worth 3,000 rupees. Our contemporary, we should think, would add another 3,000 rupees to the gift, at least he certainly ought to do so, considering the great service Mr. Lewin has done in placing before him so exact a representation of the "New Jerusalem" as that of the scene at the Taj on the night in question.—Delhi Gazette.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT IN ARTIFICIAL TEETH, AND GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY,
SURGEON DENTIST,

9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE,

Sole Inventor and exclusive Patentee of Artificial Teeth on a soft, elastic, chemically-prepared india-rubber gum. No wires or unsightly fastenings are required; they are more natural, durable, and comfortable than any yet introduced, and are about the specific gravity of cork, thus combining lightness and durability beyond any yet introduced. They are self-adhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within the reach of all.

Consultations free.
. Observe. No connection with any one of the same name.

EPHRAIM MOSELY on the TEETH fully explains his system and exclusive patent. Free on application.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. It is no secret that of late local anesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

"To none is the public more indebted than to Mr. Day."—Illustrated News, page 826, June 9.

"Mr. Day has succeeded in robbing tooth extraction of its horrors, and we think we are only fulfilling an act of duty in giving publicity to the fact."—Court Journal, p. 582, May 26.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

"Mineralised India-Rubber.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection very improbable, and is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system must prove invaluable."—Globe, May 31, 1866.

"A vast amount of ingenuity has been displayed, not only in the formation of the artificial teeth themselves, but in the method or manner of fixing them."—Morning Advertiser, May 26, 1866.

"Mr. Day has not only succeeded in adding important items to the science of dentistry, but has reduced the operation of painless 'anesthesia' to a matter of form."—Sunday Times, May 27, 1866.

These and every description of Teeth, combining the latest inventions and improvements in dental mechanism, may be procured from Mr. DAY, Dentist (late Principal Assistant to Mr. Eskell, of 8, Grosvenor-street, W.), 291, Regent-street (three doors from the Polytechnic).

THE OFFICES of Messrs. ALEX. F. RIDGWAY and SONS, Army, Civil Service, and Colonial Agents, have been REMOVED from Nos. 39, 40, and 41, Leicester-square, to No. 2, WATERLOO-PLACE, PALL-MALL, S.W.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinodine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

—When the weather is wet, the winds chilling, and the temperature changeable, these excellent remedies should always be at hand; by this means any defective action can be at once rectified, and any irregular function can be corrected without delay. The Ointment well rubbed in on the throat and chest will remove hoarseness, sore throat, dysphagia, relaxed uvula, and enlarged tonsils, and without pain or inconvenience will check incipient inflammation in the air passages, and prevent the accumulation of phlegm, alike distressing to the patient and bystander. The influenza, so fatal to the aged, when it ravages the town and devastates the country, is safely and certainly relieved by the salutary effect of this purifying and cooling Ointment.

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Liverpool, Feb. 22nd, 1864. Ship Gertrude.

Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief, and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of fact, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with the sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrated with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshahur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review, May 15.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman, March 17.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner September 15.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

The Bombay mail bring us our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 20th, Madras to the 22nd, and Bombay to the 28th of December.

There was very little news in Calcutta. One of the few items is the arrival of the Bishop of Bombay, who, curiously enough, nearly met with the same fate as his lamented predecessor. As he was attempting to get on board the steamer Simla at Madras his foot slipped and the boat partially capsized, leaving his lordship hanging on by a rope to the ship's side, from which perilous position he was rescued by an officer belonging to the ship.

Accounts from Burmah are unanimous as to the fact that Colonel Phayre has made a new and very favourable treaty with his golden-footed Majesty at Mandalay. Yet, according to the Friend of India, an official telegram has informed Government that Colonel Phayre had left Burmah without a treaty.

It was stated that the authorities had had a consultation as to the case of Captain Jervis, but with what result was not known, although the rumour was strongly prevalent that Sir William Mansfield is to be recalled, Sir H. Storks sent out, and Captain Jervis reinstated. It is affirmed that several members of Parliament have undertaken to bring the whole matter before notice of the House in the early part of the next session.

The Madras papers contain no notice of the accident referred to in the anticipatory summary from Bombay received in London. It may, therefore, be supposed to have occurred at a later date, and to have been communicated by telegraph. The Times of India notices it in these terms:—"A gloom has been cast over the European residents at Madras by the drowning of two young ladies (daughters of Mr. John McIver, secretary and treasurer of the Bank of Madras), Colonel Temple, the municipal commissioner, and Captain Hope, aide-de-camp to H.E. the Governor of Madras, whilst on a boating excursion on the Adyar river near that city."

The Jubbulpore Exhibition was opened by Mr. Temple, Chief Commissioner Central Provinces, on the 26th ult.

From Bombay we hear of more shipping disasters. A serious accident had occurred to H.M. steamer Dalhousie, of the Bombay Marine, in consequence of her running into the wreck of the merchant ship Die Vernon. A court of inquiry has investigated the circumstances. The barque Ulysses, of Greenock, bound from London to Bombay, has foundered in the Indian Ocean. Her captain and a portion of her crew arrived at Bombay; but a boat containing seven other sailors is still missing.

A news-letter in the Mofussilite confirms the intelligence of a severe conflict at Kelat-i-Ghilzie between Abdoolrahman Khan, the son of the de facto Ameer, and Ibrahim Khan, the son of the lawful Ameer, in which the former was defeated and his cousin, the son of Azim Khan, was slain. On 2nd November at night Shere Ali's troops began the attack and renewed it next morning. As usual, treachery decided the day, two infantry corps having deserted to Shere Ali's side. The loss on both sides was great. Azim Khan was afflicted at the loss of his brave son Surwur Khan, and made a proclamation in the city that whoever should be found guilty of attributing the defeat to the present ruler of Cabul would be at once beheaded. Abdoolrahman Khan has asked his father-in-law the Ameer of Bokhara to help him. There seems to be little doubt but that Shere Ali will regain his throne. Afzul Khan was so dispirited that he proposed to go to Turkistan, his old province. The people of Cabul continue to take refuge in our territory from the oppression which prevails in the city.

The Bill which was recently passed by the Bombay Legislative Council to amend the Bombay Bank Act has received the assent of the Governor-general.

The difference between the Bombay Government and the Bombay Reclamation Company, with regard to the claims of the former upon the company, have been amicably settled. The Bombay and Back-bay Reclamation Company—one of the companies projected during the mania of 1865—is to be wound up. The following meetings of creditors under Act XXVIII. of 1865 have taken place in Bombay since the 14th inst.:—Manockjee Pestonjee Tuback—liabilities, £58,767; assets, £8,971. Hormusjee Dhunjeebhoy Gheesta—liabilities, £58,238; assets, £13,270.

The G.I.P. Railway overbridges question has been disposed of. Government is to find the land, and the Railway Company, the Municipality, and the Elphinstone Land Company to share the cost of construction.

The Volunteer movement in Bombay has received the sanction of Government, and is progressing satisfactorily.

The state of the public health in Bombay continues most satisfactory; the death-rate for the past six months has not exceeded from 14 to 19 per 1,000 of population.

A wholesale system of poisoning natives of Bokhara and Cabul who are temporarily residents in Bombay, has been discovered to exist in the city. The police are endeavouring to find out the poisoners.

The Bombay contributions to the Bengal and Madras Famine Relief Fund amounts to upwards of £26,000.

Salar Jung, the Minister of our ally, the Nizam of Hyderabad, is fitting out an expedition at Bombay, to recover some of his patrimonial territory in Hadramout, in Arabia, which is threatened with annexation by a Bedouin Chief.

H.M.'s 106th Light Infantry, it is stated, are under orders to leave Nusseerabad for Mean Meer on the 18th January. The distance is some 600 miles, and it will, therefore, be impossible for the troops to reach their destination until long after the setting in of the hot season.

The Political Agent of Kattiwar (Major Keatinge) has held a durbar at Wudwan for the investiture of the Rajah of Draugudra with the insignia of the Star of India.

The latest date received in Bombay from Great Britain by the Indo-European Telegraph is December 12. The working of the line is getting from bad to worse, but it has been satisfactorily shown by a detailed statement extending over several months, that the delays occur on the continent of Europe, the average time occupied between Constantinople and Kurrachee during several months being only eighteen hours.

Sir Bartle Frere had gone on a farewell visit to Sind. On his return to Bombay, his Excellency will be entertained at a public dinner by the Byculia Club.

Mr. Hobhouse, of the civil service, and Mr. Skinner, merchant, have been appointed members of the Viceroy's Legislative Council.

An envoy from the Ameer of Bokhara was at Lahore on his way to meet the Lieutenant-Governor of Punjab at Delhi. The tables are turned since the days of Conolly and Stoddart. We can give no hope of assistance, but the envoy is being well treated. The Russian force at Tashkend is estimated at 10,000 men, 5,000 of whom are Russians, the remainder being composed of Cossacks and other levies.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta mail, which may be expected in London on the 26th inst.

DETENTION OF PASSENGERS AND MAILS IN EGYPT.

The following letter, regarding the detention in Egypt of the overland passengers and mail of November 19th, was signed by all the gentlemen who arrived by the Baroda on Dec. 11th, and has been forwarded to the directors of the P. and O. Company:—

To the Chairman and Directors of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company.

GENTLEMEN—We the undersigned passengers on board your S.S. Baroda bound to Bombay, consider it our duty to bring to your notice the detention of Her Majesty's mails, and the annoyance and expense to which passengers are subjected in their transit through Egypt, from the want of adequate arrangements on the part of your agents.

2. On the arrival of your S.S. China at Alexandria at 7 A.M. on the 27th November, the passengers were informed by your agent who came on board, that they were to leave by train at 9.40 that morning and be conveyed direct to Suez, embarking the same night. Relying upon this information they left wholly unprovided for any detention en route.

3. Having left Alexandria at 9.40 A.M., the train arrived about midday at Kapir-Zyat, where the passengers were recommended by the European in charge of the train to avail themselves of a luncheon there provided, as they would not have another opportunity of obtaining any substantial refreshment until arrival on board the steamer at Suez. It is worth while recording that for what the passengers could not consider a substantial meal, the charge was five shillings a head, exclusive of any beverage. They, however, had scarcely sat down before the same European produced a telegram to the effect that we were to sleep at Cairo that night.

4. We accordingly were detained at Cairo until 9 A.M. the following morning, incurring the usual extravagant hotel charges, and under the extreme inconvenience already mentioned of being without any change of clothing or toilet requisites.

5. We arrived at Suez at 1.30 P.M., and were informed by your resident agent, Mr. West, that we should not be embarked until 5 P.M., he having given notice to the hotel to provide a dinner at 3.30 P.M., such dinner being charged at the rate of six shillings a head exclusive of any beverage.

6. Keenly feeling this further disappointment, a deputation of the passengers formally waited on Mr. West and desired to be sent on board the Baroda at once. After a considerable demur he promised to order a steamer to take them off, distinctly stating, however, that he had on the previous day given orders to the purser not to provide dinner on board, and that consequently none would be found.

7. Several of the passengers, protesting against this evident compulsion, proceeded on board the Baroda lying in the roads, at a distance of five miles, at their own expense; the remainder were in reality not sent off until the hour originally fixed, viz., at 5 P.M.

8. Whilst our chief grievance as passengers is the discomfort and vexatious expenditure to which we have been subjected, we must, in the interests of all persons connected with India, and at a time when the acceleration of the mails is occupying the public mind, advert to the fact that the mails were on board the Baroda at 2 A.M., or about sixteen hours before she left Suez roads, and it is important to note that with proper railway arrangements they, together with the passengers, baggage, &c., ought to have arrived at Suez about 10 P.M. on the previous night, as we were informed at Alexandria we should do.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, January 19, 1867.

THE REFORM OF CRIMINALS IN INDIA.

MAJOR HUTCHINSON, the Inspector-general of Police in the Punjab, has just issued a very excellent little work* upon the Reformatory principle in the treatment of criminals, as applied to India. That he is well qualified to deal with the subject may be inferred from the fact that, in addition to five years' experience in his present office, he has the advantage of personal acquaintance with the working of the Reformatory Institution at Mettray, with the Irish system as now in full force under Captain Whitty, and with that adopted at the various reformatories in England. He has, moreover, he assures us, examined most carefully almost every work in reference to the system that has appeared in this country during the last twenty years.

A considerable portion of the volume is occupied by the results of the author's experiences in Europe, and the citation of authorities in connection with this part of the subject. Starting from the premises so well set forth by the late Attorney-General for Ireland—that for all practical purposes human law should deal with crime, not to avenge, but to prevent and to reform, and that merely vindictive and repressive action defeats its own purpose, and increases the mischief it would avert—Major Hutchinson proceeds to show that prison discipline in India is not guided by reformatory principles such as those described, and, indeed, cannot be until the State proceeds to legislate on the subject. He urges, therefore, that the rulers of India shall, following the procedure of Great Britain, not only recognise the principle of allowing portions of certain sentences to be mitigated as regards duration and severity, if the conduct of the prisoners justifies such a privilege, but shall fix by a legislative enactment the greatest amount of mitigation which may be allowed in each sentence under the conditions. This principle once recognised, the great mainspring of all good conduct and successful reformatory progress in prisoners—namely, hope—can be at once allowed to exercise its proper influence. The author considers it most important that in all such sentences there should be fixed by the law a certain amount of absolute punishment, known to the judge who passes the sentence, and to the public, which is seriously affected by the proper execution thereof. This fixed amount should, as in Ireland, be capable of only slight amelioration as regards its nature, and not at all as regards its duration. The possible amount of amelioration as regards its nature should be known to the judge and the public, and should be dependent on certain principles, which may not be altered by jail officials. Any treatment of prisoners which admits the possibility of sentences being, as a rule, seriously lessened in severity or duration by the recommendation or the opinion of jail officers, is most strongly to be deprecated. In England sentences to penal servitude are now fixed at five years and upwards; and in Ireland always, as well as in England very generally, it is assumed that persons sentenced to such terms are habitual criminals, and not casuals. Applying this principle to India, Major Hutchinson urges that by a legislative enactment each sentence to penal servitude for terminable periods of five years and upwards shall contain a certain period fixed by the law, within which the prisoner can, by the merits of his industry and good conduct, obtain such an amelioration of his sentence as may, under certain known and established rules, be deemed fitting. Thus, in a sentence of five years' penal servitude, three years and six months must be passed in absolute imprisonment; six months may, if the prisoner merits it, be passed under intermediate treatment; and one year under a ticket-of-leave. During the former period the author suggests that prisoners of the agricultural and labouring classes should be employed on public works; and if these do not offer sufficient employment he considers that it would not be at all impracticable to establish agricultural settlements similar to Lusk, in Ireland, and bring under cultivation some of the many thousand acres of good land in India now left waste—simply for want of capital and labour. For prisoners of the manufacturing classes, who work at indoor trades, he proposes the erection of establishments similar to Smithfield, in Ireland, and other institutions where prisoners in the intermediate stage work under conditions of almost freedom, and can realise by their labours considerable sums of money for their own benefit.

The second great step in reformatory measures suggested by the author is to distinguish between the habitual and casual offender, and to keep them carefully separate. This would fall in with the procedure already established in India, where prisoners with long sentences, who may be considered habituals, are placed in central jails, and those with short sentences, who may be considered casuals, in district jails. Another principle to be observed is that of individualisation—that is, to see the treatment of each prisoner individually, his progress to liberty, which depends upon himself, being tested by the system of marks for industry and good conduct. The necessity for preventing the prisoners from contaminating one another is dwelt upon with much earnestness. One main feature in the reform, we are told, must be the provision of separate sleeping-cells for each prisoner, whether habitual or casual. The present practice of sleeping together in one long ward is productive of a horrible form of depravity which the author assures us is common in Indian jails. It is, moreover, destructive to any good or deterrent effect in discipline. "I cannot too strongly urge this practical measure," says Major Hutchinson; "no question of expense should for one instant be allowed to delay it."

The author further advocates:—The proper supervision of all prisoners after discharge, with an efficient system of registry, including the use of photography, so that the previous career and offences of a prisoner may be known when brought to trial; the formation of agricultural colonies and reformatory establishments for juveniles; the establishment in connection with each jail of an industrial house for the benefit of discharged prisoners, or of the honest poor who seek work but cannot find it; the allotment of a portion of the Government educational grant for the establishment of schools for low caste children; the formation of industrial feeding schools, on the plan found to be so successful in England in keeping juveniles from falling into crime; the extension to all habituals of special restrictive measures, without reference to whether they are members of a criminal tribe or not; the extension of our reformatory measures to all criminal tribes which, like the Sansees, &c., can be collected, located together, and obliged to live by agriculture, such measures to be placed on a thoroughly efficient footing, especially as regards supervision by suitable officers; hard labour to form a part of all sentences; a proper system of aid to discharged prisoners; proper provision for all beggars, vagrants, &c., and for the poor in every large city, so that begging may be with justice made punishable by law, the measure to be extended to small places according to necessity; and lastly, statistical returns of crime for all India, so as to show the practical working of our laws and preventive measures.

With regard to expense—which, he admits, would be considerable, in the first instance—the author considers that the imperial exchequer might be relieved of half the burden by a judicious system of local taxation. He believes, however, that the cost would be more than repaid by the reduction in the number of prisoners, and, consequently, in the cost of prosecution and jails.

That India is a country which pre-eminently requires reformatory measures Major Hutchinson shows most convincingly. There is no country in the world, he believes, where crime is more hereditary than in India—that is, "habitual" among certain classes. Not only are habitual offenders produced indiscriminately from all classes of the poor, under circumstances similar to those existing in Europe, though as yet not perhaps to the same extent, but there are whole tribes, whole races, who are from generation to generation notoriously addicted to certain kinds of crime—more particularly thuggee, poisoning, dacoitee, professional swindling, coining, cattle-stealing, thieving, &c. Of these practices we are given an interesting account, as well as a notice of the most celebrated criminal tribes. Indeed, upon special as well as general—upon practical as well as moral—grounds, the author shows the reformatory system to be the great requirement of prison discipline in India.

COLONEL PHAYRE'S RETURN FROM MANDALAY.

RANGOON, Dec. 12.—The King's steamer, the Honesty, arrived with passengers and news from Mandalay the day before yesterday. Colonel Phayre has had his usual quiet state interview. The first greetings were mutually cordial, and the customary ceremonial compliments were hearty on both sides. The preliminaries of a fresh treaty were drawn out and discussed; the only drawback was a slight reservation on the part of the King with reference to having our frontier Customs stationed at a place called Mingkha, with a proper and efficient staff to be permanently located there. However, it is expected that the King will at last yield to the diplomatic eloquence of Colonel Phayre, who has for his sole object the mutual benefit of the high contracting Powers. It is expected that Colonel Phayre will be down himself with the ample and comprehensive treaty in his portfolio in a week hence.

The timely arrival of the Chief Commissioner at the termination of the rebellion, with his kind intercession on behalf of the unfortunate Prince the Padaing Mentha, had a salutary effect with the King in pardoning the Prince and some of his followers, so that Upper Burmah is once more enjoying the blessings of peace and order. Subjects of both sides are again allowed to have free egress and ingress to both countries. An official notification has appeared to that effect signed by the officiating secretary to the Chief Commissioner. The two young Princes here, that were the cause of the rebellion, had, it appears, made an attempt to free themselves from the surveillance they were placed under since their arrival, and had meditated a well-laid scheme to decamp to the neighbouring Shan States, and thus once more to raise the standard of rebellion. Various conflicting rumours were current for two or three days in town. At last the Superintendent of Police, Mr. Doyle, managed to point out link by link the whole chain of evidence, and discovered in the nick of time the object the Princes had in view. The Commissioner of Pegu, Colonel Stevenson, after consulting with the General Commanding the Division, deemed it absolutely necessary to remove the Princes at once from their old residence into cantonments, doing away with the temporary police guard, and in place substituted European soldiers from the main guard. He located the Princes in a comfortable house near their unfortunate brother Princes in exile of Delhi, where they are now chewing the cud of repentance and bewailing their ill-starred fate. If the story be true, it was a bold stratagem. Considering that they were in the very heart of Rangoon, the distance they would have to travel, the difficulties they would have had to contend with, ere they could get safe beyond our frontier, and knowing full well the inevitable consequences if they were captured, one cannot but admire their audacity.

Since writing the above a telegram has just been received announcing the arrival of the Chief Commissioner and suite at Theyetmyo, with the chiefs from his Burmese Majesty, who will doubtless proceed with Colonel Phayre to Calcutta by the next incoming mail steamer, and have the treaty ratified by the Governor-General in Council. The steamer Damoodah with Colonel Phayre and the mission leaves Theyetmyo for Rangoon to-day.

MR. MAINE ON INDIAN LEGISLATION.

The first meeting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council this session on Saturday was remarkable, not merely for Mr. Maine's exposition of the necessity for past and present legislation. That was able, and on the whole satisfactory. But it was memorable from the fact that the law member of Council established an important precedent first set by Mr. Laing and followed last session by Sir William Mansfield—that of the Executive giving explanations on questions other than those which are directly connected with the passing of legislative measures. The present constitution of India—if we may apply to a despotism a word born of free institutions—is contained in the Indian Councils Act of Parliament. That Act was suggested and even draughted by Lord Canning when smarting under the irritation caused by Sir Barnes Peacock's unexpected announcement in the old Council, that all the gifts of land and revenue then bestowed on our loyal feudatories were illegal, not being sanctioned by the Secretary of State in Council. Since that time the Viceroy has been unable to spend one rupee on his own responsibility. Lord Canning's despatch found Sir Charles Wood no less irritated by Sir Barnes Peacock's noble defence of Lord Dalhousie's policy against the ignorant depreciation of it by the Secretary of State during the disputes about the Mysore Grant. So an Act of Parliament was passed to abolish the obnoxious Chief Justice by establishing the present legislature. To make quite sure that no Anglo-Indian John Bright or opposition of any kind should arise, the Act provides that no business shall be done except what has direct reference to legislation. To prevent even animated discussion the members were forced by law to keep their seats when speaking. No one has yet dared to violate the latter prohibition, though some have been seen to make instinctive attempts. The former can be evaded by a skilful debater, and by tacit consent it has been hitherto suspended during the Budget discussion every year. Hence Sir W. Mansfield made heroes of all connected with Bhootan, and, though a commander-in-chief, revelled in the pleasure of reducing the army, in a quite illegal speech last session. And now Mr. Maine, though law member, has taken advantage of the fact that the lawyers of the Straits Settlement have conceived a sudden affection for our legislation which they formerly detested, to meet the charge, so often made by overworked district officials and half-educated pleaders, of excessive and hasty legislation. We trust, now that so useful a precedent has been established as a rule, both the official and non-official members of Council will take advantage of what may often be beneficial, and the Viceroy can always prevent from becoming embarrassing.

Mr. Maine set up Mr. Justice Holloway, of Madras, as a convenient type of the order of criticism which he wished to meet. His defence is briefly this—that recent legislation is considerable in bulk, but that it is at once inevitable and beneficial. The Indian Empire, some would say, is at present not unlike David in Saul's armour, and it is natural that most administrative officers should prefer the exercise of direct personal influence to the machinery of law and procedure. But our rule is every year creating rights of a delicate and complicated character which must be dealt with by codes and Acts. The non-regulation system is admirable for laying the foundation of these rights, and its admirers, among whom we have always numbered ourselves, have the satisfaction of knowing that almost all the recent simplifications and improvements in procedure are directly due to its influence. But we have to do no longer with a ruddy youth whose best weapon is the sling of non-regulationism. The mere fact that there are English settlers in the once non-regulation provinces necessitates fixed law as opposed to varying individualism administering vaguely expressed and merely equitable rules. Pleaders again follow settlers and even precede them when native rights become valuable. The objection in fact to recent legislation lies really against the progress of India in civilisation, which, as Mr. Maine said, is our sole justification for being in the country. We are, however, not at all so sure as Mr. Maine seemed to be that the law member is not too ready to ask his colleagues to pass measures sent up by the local Governments which have not Councils of their own. They are the chief source of the legislation so far as its bulk is concerned. An analysis of the local Acts would justify us in the assertion that many of the "small judicial or administrative improvements" had better be let alone or delayed till their authors are quite sure of their facts, or, at any rate, of their policy. The "constant stream of applications for legislative enactments" should be driven back more frequently on those who set it in motion. We want more imperial and less local legislation. The objectors to over-legislation are chiefly to be found in provinces not so long under our rule as Bengal, though indeed Mr. Holloway is an exception; but he is a Judge. If they were in Bengal their cry would be louder and far better justified. Any thing more ludicrous than the law-making manufactory to be seen once a week in that Council it would be difficult to find out of some small colonial assembly. There is not, and there has not been, one man in the Bengal Council since its birth professionally competent to draught a Bill except the Advocate-General, who has too much work to attend to amateurs playing at legislation. If Mr. Maine would check local legislation and advise the Viceroy to veto more of it, would bring more pressure to bear on the Home authorities to ensure speedier instalments of the code of substantive law and the passing of the amended civil code, and would at the same time grapple with that monstrous abnegation of all law which we call the land revenue regulations, he would add to the already great debt of gratitude which India owes to him.

The truth is that this is a period of transition in Indian administration. The total revolution of our systems of government caused by the mutiny, the creation of High Courts, the increase of English settlers, the spread of railways and English institutions, and a hundred other changes, must be attended with legislation, to prevent anarchy, to create harmony and to give clearness. The remnants of the pre-mutiny system have to be adapted to the requirements of that which has superseded so much of it. But such legislation only indirectly affects the people, and done once it is done for ever. For ourselves we can point to no unnecessary imperial Act except that relating to partnership, which is an anticipation of the draught of the Law Commission. It is certainly curious to hear Indian critics, and Indian judges, too, depreciating Indian legislation, which is the envy of all law reformers in England.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MISS CARPENTER.—A meeting has been held in the rooms of the Bengal Asiatic Society to hear an address from Miss Carpenter, which resulted in the formation of a committee to carry out the following resolution:—"It is in every way desirable to consider carefully the practicability of forming a branch society to be affiliated to the Social Science Association at home, for the purpose of pursuing social science investigations, so far as they have any relation to the people and circumstances of this country." The following are the members of the committee, with power to add to their number:—Mr. Justice Norman, Mr. Justice Phear, Mr. Justice Seton-Karr, Mr. E. C. Bayley, Mr. A. Grote, Mr. Atkinson, Rev. Mr. Long, Dr. Farquhar, Mr. A. Mackenzie, Baboo Kettermohun Chatterjee, Pearychurn Mittra, Ramchunder Mitter, Keshubchunder Sen, Debendranath Thakur, Munmohun Ghose, Rajendralal Mittra, and Pundit Ishwar Chunder Vidyasagar. The Lieutenant-Governor presided, and the Viceroy, Lady Lawrence and other ladies were present. In her clear address Miss Carpenter pointed out education especially of girls, jails, the massing of prisoners together, the want of juvenile reformatories, and the filthy state of native towns, as subjects with which the proposed society should deal at once. She complained of the ignorance of England regarding India, and urged that the society should send home papers by natives and on native society to be read at the Social Science Congress.

THE BENGAL PRESS UPON SIR CECIL BEADON.—The Som Prokash, in an article on the special commission sent into the famine districts, says that the Lieutenant-Governor, who had gained a name in the country for intelligent action, diligence, and activity, has lost the influence he acquired by his measures during the distress through which the country has passed. His honour has hitherto believed, and still believes according to the information received from Government officers, that there might have been sufficient rice to meet the wants of the population if the merchants and landholders had not concealed large quantities and prevented its being brought to market. But even if this were true it was the duty of the Government to use every means for preventing the loss of life from hunger. It was necessary to appoint a commission, but in it a merchant, an engineer, &c., should have been included. The roads in Cuttack are very bad, and rice is conveyed from the coast to the interior with no little difficulty. Another subject is worthy of consideration. The eastern coasts of India are dangerous; harbours ought to be made in the Chilka Lake and at False Point. If Mr. Ravenshaw's statements can be substantiated, Sir Cecil Beadon is safe. If not, a stain, disgrace, and reproof await him. And not only him. It is doubtful whether after him a civilian will be allowed to fill his office. The Bhaskur informs its readers that the fall of meteors on December 12th or 13th was so confidently expected that for fear the stars should fall on his house and break it he put up sloping sheds so firmly bound that the stars falling on them should roll off to the ground. Lord Cranborne having declined to open a subscription in England for the famine in India, the same paper says, "Whose fault was it that those difficulties were experienced? Who was it that neglected to use measures to prevent these troubles? The answer is, 'The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal; he now wishes to cast the blame of that negligence on England. This is not right. The Bengal Government ought to prevent the evils.'" The Friend of India remarks upon this subject:—"Sir Cecil Beadon's conduct in the famine has led Native Opinion, in common with most of the native papers, to the conclusion that 'India now needs more English-bred than India-bred Governors to impart a healthful and popular tone to the administrative system.' This may be true, but the conduct of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and his subordinates does not justify it. Sir George Edmonstone and his subordinates behaved in a way exactly opposite to that of Sir C. Beadon, in the great famine of 1860-61. Against Lord Napier's energy we can set Sir W. Denison's idleness, and the united incompetence and apathy of half the Governors of Madras who have been English peerlings. A man who combines high principle and ability with some experience of public life will always make a good Governor, wherever his training may have been."

OPIMUM SALES IN 1867.—A notification of the Board of Revenue states that the provision opium to be brought forward for sale by public auction in the year 1867 will consist of 24,000 chests of Behar and 24,000 chests of Benares opium of the two seasons 1864-65 and 1865-66, in the following proportions:—

Behar.		Chests.
Reserve of 1864-65	...	761
Supply from 1865-66	...	23,239
		24,000
Benares.		Chests.
Reserve of 1864-65	...	7,018
Supply from 1865-66	...	16,982
		24,000
Total	...	48,000

The opium forming the reserve of 1864-65 will be first put up for sale, and afterwards the provision of 1865-66, that is to say, of Behar opium the sale of January will consist of 761 chests of 1864-65, and 1,239 chests of 1865-66, and of Benares opium the sales of January, February, and March will each consist of 2,000 chests of 1864-65, and the sale of April will consist of 1,018 chests of 1864-65 and 982 chests of 1865-66. The remaining provision of 1865-66 will be disposed of in like quantities at the subsequent sales. Thus there will be put up at each sale 2,000 chests of Behar and 2,000 chests of Benares. The sales will be held on or about the dates specified below. The Board, however, reserve to themselves the right of altering these dates should circumstances render it expedient to do so:—

THE FAMINE.—The following shows a gradual decrease in the severity of the famine in Orissa in the weeks ending

	Non-Labourers.	Labourers.
Oct. 27, Cuttack	19,460	13,453
Nov. 17, Pooree	5,620	4,140
" Balasore	16,925	4,551
Dec. 10, Midnapore	...	269

In Cuttack eighty-one a day were dying, in Pooree twenty-five, and in Balasore forty-one. The Calcutta Relief Committee has held its final meeting, when most gracefully Baboo Romanath Tagore proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Hogg, which was very warmly carried. He said that the natives would never forget the Orissa Famine of 1866, but that whenever they recurred to it, they would always think of Mr. Hogg and his noble exertions on behalf of the famine-stricken. The three secretaries were also thanked. A sum of £10,000 was voted for the support of the famine foundlings in Calcutta. The total number of paupers of both sexes and all ages admitted into all the hospitals from the beginning up to the 2nd inst. was 10,769, of whom 3,761 were cured and 4,276 died; giving a per centage of 42.27 cures, and 48.06 deaths, respectively. The Friend of India, from which the above is taken, adds elsewhere:—Is the Calcutta Relief Committee not premature in closing its operations, and reserving so much as £10,000 for the foundlings thrown upon public charity? It seems to us that it ought to have waited till the Commission assured it there was no need for further assistance in Orissa. The accounts which we received are unanimous in representing the necessity for aid in large districts for the next three months at least, and after even that time much will depend on the rainfall as to whether an impoverished people will not continue to require assistance. The Commissioners ought to publish their opinion on this subject the moment they have materials for forming it, without waiting till the issue of their report. Meanwhile, the Bengal Government gives no assistance towards the recovery of the province. It is, above all things, essential for this end that the people should be told what the next assessment is to be. The last expired in October, and if a permanent settlement is not immediately announced another year will be lost, and will continue to go out of cultivation, and the crops will be short, however favourable the heavens may be."

NATIVE CRITICISM UPON THE AGRA DURBAR.—The criticism of the Bengalee papers on the Agra durbar would be amusing from its ignorance were not the mis-statements in many cases so gross as to excite the suspicion that they are intended to mislead. It is not difficult to trace them to the fact that one of the most obscure Rajahs honoured with a summons to the durbar, a Bengali zemindar, dared knowingly to approach the Viceroy with shoes on and was rebuked. The shoe order, as it is called, is odious to some of the Bengalees, who have learned the language without the manners of English gentlemen, and have sacrificed their own natural politeness in the process, but no native out of Bengal would dream of questioning its propriety. What Native gentlemen generally thought of the Durbar the vernacular papers whose correspondents were present have told us, and from the letters sent to this journal we select one which will be found elsewhere. There is always some feeling at such gatherings on the part of nobles to whom izzat is life, and who would, as we have seen at both Lord Canning's and Sir John Lawrence's durbars, sacrifice half their fortune to have an addition to their salute, or a seat above another Rajah, or even to induce the Under-Secretary and aides-de-camp to advance a few yards beyond the stipulated distance. But all such questions are decided by a carefully constituted committee, and if ancient precedent be once departed from a dozen nobles are insulted to gratify one. Sindia's fete at the Taj is a fair subject of criticism, but we regret that some of our English contemporaries have set an example to the native journals in misrepresenting it. The fete was given by a Hindoo in very princely style and with great success, not by the Governor-General. His Excellency, we believe, was not aware that a supper was to form part of it, nor was he present at the supper. But none the less there was no violation of propriety or good taste except by some of the very class whose snobbish criticisms filled the correspondence columns of some of the up-country papers. The Taj gardens are meant, are habitually used, for picnics. The supper was given, not in or on the Taj, and not in a mosque, as is said, but in a secular building. With equal justice the same objections would lie against the travellers' rooms in the gardens at Sufdur Jung's and other tombs, the Kootub and at Shalimar. Sindia may well be ashamed of men, whether natives or Englishmen, who so abuse his princely hospitality, which was meant as an evidence of his good will to the governing class and had a semi-political character.—Friend of India.

THE FUTURE FINANCIAL POLICY.—Very important financial measures are likely to be announced in the course of the next session by Mr. Massey. They refer to taxation, to the employment of capital instead of revenue in remunerative works of irrigation, and to the raising, gradually, of the requisite funds in India. The necessity, on every ground, of taxation we have discussed elsewhere. The competing schemes will doubtless be a modification of Mr. Harrington's licence tax on the basis of the information supplied by five years' experience of the income-tax, and Mr. Laing's licence duties in the form of an assignment of so much Imperial expenditure to be raised through the local legislatures in fair proportion to the income of each Government. In addition to this Mr. Massey is likely to follow in the steps of Mr. Laing and Mr. Gladstone by removing several of the minor articles in the customs tariff to the free list, and it may be by reducing both import and export duties. This, however, will depend on the results of the Tariff Committee now sitting in Calcutta. We are glad to believe that the Government of India has agreed to act on the principle of transferring from revenue to capital account all expenditure from the Imperial treasury on remunerative public works. In the hands of any financier less cautious and scrupulous than Mr. Massey, this might be applied in a dangerous way, but it will doubtless be acted on under such conditions as will lead Sir John Lawrence to adopt it. Care must be taken that the works so paid for are really remunerative, and that no works even when remunerative are transferred to capital which ought to be met out of a single year's revenue as hitherto. For, it must be remembered, so long as there is not a permanent settlement, and even then, though to a less extent, the Government of India is a gigantic landlord bound to improve its estate out of its annual income. Finally, quickened to activity by the Orissa famine, Lord Cranborne has replied to the representations of the Government of India which have been so long before the Secretary of State, that remunerative works of irrigation must be prosecuted with vigour, and that, if necessary, he will raise a loan in England. But considering that all the funds for Indian railways must be provided in England; that twenty-one millions are required to double the most important sections of the existing lines; that there are three new lines of great magnitude before the Government; and that the existing companies have drawn upon the Indian revenues to the extent of nearly two millions this year for constructive purposes because they could not raise the money in England, it is not likely that Mr. Massey will depend on the English money market for irrigation loans. That loans of this description can be negotiated in India, on terms quite as favourable as in England, is proved by the reception of the debenture scheme which was a tentative measure. As we lately urged, a series of debenture loans is the financial operation suitable for works which become remunerative at certain stages of their progress. By a judicious application of this system the necessary means may be provided without funding a rupee—in other words, without making any addition to the permanent debt. We are sure that in adopting principles and carrying out measures so often recommended by the non-official public, and especially in so favourable a state of the money market, Mr. Massey and the Government of India will meet with warm support. Now, at last, there is a prospect of seeing our systems of finance and public works placed on a sound footing.—Friend of India.

JHANSIE IS TO BE PUT UNDER THE REGULATIONS, and the draught of a Bill for this purpose appears in the Gazette of India. As the revision of the settlement is nearly completed, and the local rights in land have been defined, there is no reason for maintaining a system in Jhansie different from that in force throughout the rest of the North-Western Provinces. It is also desirable that the Board of Revenue should be relieved from the anomalous position in which they are now placed by having to discharge a duty which is foreign to their office, and for the due performance of which they have not the aid of an efficient bar.

CAPTAIN HARWARD.—The Pioneer says:—A few days back, when referring to the action brought by Captain Harward, R.A., against Mr. Pollock, the magistrate of Agra, we were unable to mention the grounds of it. A copy of the plaint has now reached us, and is published below. Mr. Prichard appears for Captain Harward, and Mr. Conlan, pleader, for the defendant, Mr. Pollock. Captain T. N. Harward, R.A., plaintiff, versus A. R. Pollock, Magistrate and Collector of Agra, defendant. Plaintiff claims payment of Rs. 5,000 on account of injury done to him by defendant, in that on the 30th day of November, 1865, while plaintiff was under arrest and subjected to judicial proceedings by order of the military authorities upon a criminal charge preferred under sec. 17 Act XXVIII. Vic. cap. 15, otherwise called the Mutiny Act for 1865, by which Act all judges and all courts in her Majesty's dominions whatsoever are, by section 2 of the said Act, bound to take judicial notice, defendant did maliciously, and without any jurisdiction whatsoever, cause plaintiff to be arrested and deprived of his liberty contrary to law, and did then proceed to hold a preliminary enquiry into plaintiff's conduct, forcing plaintiff's attendance at his court, and otherwise subjected plaintiff to pains and indignities, whereupon plaintiff suffered much distress of mind and injury, and the plaintiff claims Rs. 5,000.—Verified by the plaintiff.—Agra, Dec. 3, 1866.

MR. MCNEIL, the only extra magistrate sent to Orissa during the famine, has successfully ascended for the first time the Mahanuddy river as far as Tikree, about twenty miles from its mouth; and the Noona river, a branch of the Mahanuddy, as far as Burpal, and within two miles of Morsaghai, and twenty-four miles from the new depot in the Bakood Creek. This depot has been found to be more readily accessible for the anchorage than any other point. It is situated on comparatively high land, free from inundation, and adjoining a large open grass plain. The only difficulty is the bar and shoal water at the mouth of the Bakood Creek; this is, however, surmountable at flood-tides, and once in the Creek the steamer can lie and ply with safety. The ascent was made in the steamer Teesta, which took up several bags of rice. This is satisfactory, the Mahanuddy having been so long the bête noire of engineers.

THE PATENT LAW IN INDIA.—A most unusual notice appears in the Gazette. Under the Indian Patent Act every exclusive privilege must cease if the Governor-general of India in Council shall declare that the same is generally prejudicial to the public. This has accordingly been done in the case of a petition filed by Mr. W. G. Melvor, who wishes a patent for an alleged new invention for producing and preparing the different species and varieties of cinchona bark for the manufacture of quinine, quinidine, cinchonidine, and other alkaloids.

NEW JOINT-STOCK BANK.—A new joint-stock bank is under contemplation at Fyzabad, projected by Mr. J. Parsick, hitherto agent of the Bank of Upper India in that station. The capital is to be Rs. 50,000, in 1,000 shares of Rs. 50 each, payable by monthly instalments of Rs. 5 per share, 300 shares are stated to have been bespoke, and the bank will commence business so soon as a suitable office has been secured. The whole affair is on a lilliputian scale, and its chances of success must entirely be determined by whether or not its supporters may display sufficient confidence in it to trust it with their fixed deposits.

A VERY PRETTY QUARREL.—We hear that two civilians, Mr. Jenkins, the commissioner of Burdwan, and Mr. Cunliffe, the magistrate of Bancoorah, are now engaged in a quarrel. The commissioner directed the magistrate to convey his censure to a native deputy-magistrate, who assaulted a police constable, but was acquitted of the charge for want of evidence, whom the magistrate wanted to send to the interior. The magistrate, without obeying the orders of his superior officer, has submitted the case for the final decision of Government, and the commissioner has preferred a charge of insubordination against the magistrate.

CAPTAIN INGRAM.—The Gazette notifies the dismissal of Captain J. S. Ingram from the service. This is the officer who was guilty of speculation, disappeared, and then asked Government to compound his offence if he confessed.

THE FAILURE OF MESSRS. GORDON, STUART, AND CO., OF CALCUTTA.—We notice with regret the closing of another "old firm" in our good city. On the 4th inst. Messrs. Gordon, Stuart, and Co., who have long struggled against accumulating misfortunes, gave up the contest. They issued a circular to their creditors announcing their inability to meet their liabilities, and placing their affairs in the hands of their creditors. The immediate cause of the suspension appears to be the inability to realise money due to the firm on several tea estates. The creditors are to be called together on an early date to consider what will be the best course for the interests of all concerned. We fear there is not much prospect of the resumption of business by the old firm; while the senior member has the prospect before him of beginning the world anew after years of labour which he might have hoped were over. Considering the crisis through which we have passed during the current year, we have cause for congratulation that no more houses have fallen. And we trust that the names of Gordon, Stuart, and Co. may yet rise among the honoured names with which our city has been long associated.—Indian Daily News.—The Friend of India adds:—Mr. D. Gordon, one of the founders of the house, has returned to India, and has recommenced business under the name of Messrs. D. Gordon and Sons.

A WHOLESALE PLUNDERER.—The Mofussilite says:—From Etawah we learn that a man named Buldeo, a subject of the Kotah State, is accused by the Rajah of Kotah of having stolen precious stones and jewels to the value of (50,000) fifty thousand rupees from the Kotah Jewel-house. Buldeo has been arrested by the Magistrate of Etawah, who is inquiring into the case, and pending such inquiry has placed the accused under restraint.

POUR ENCOURAGER LES AUTRES.—The Delhi Gazette says:—We hear that a native officer, a Duffadar of the 6th Bengal Cavalry, has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment for disobedience of orders in receiving a fakir into the lines, and countenancing him in seditious talk. And, by way of encouraging European officers to do their duty, the officer who reported the matter has got severely wigged by the general, and has been recommended to leave the regiment.

CHEAP JOURNALISM.—The Indian Daily News, with which the Bengal Hurkaru has been incorporated, has raised its price fifty per cent., on the ground that its income has not hitherto met its expenditure. Cheap journalism in the English sense is possible only where the public is practically unlimited in number.

CAWNPORE AND LUCKNOW RAILWAY.—The opening of the Cawnpore and Lucknow Railway is likely to take place on the 1st of March.

THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

We learn that Lord Cranborne is about to reorganise the Indian telegraph department, by the institution of a Covenanted Service for the performance of the entire duties appertaining to telegraphy, not only within the limits of British India, but also upon the lines now or hereafter to be established in connection with Europe. We hear that his lordship has determined to reserve this department exclusively for the sons of officers and other public servants, who will be selected by the authorities at the India-office, and thereafter have to pass a competitive examination by which their future position in the list will be regulated. These young men will then be specially instructed in the duties of their department and be provided with an outfit and free passage to India. They will receive upon arrival a monthly salary of 270 rupees, and will be guaranteed an increase annually of £50 or rupees 500 up to a specified period of service, when advancement to the higher grades of the department to which large salaries and responsibilities are attached will be made by selection for merit alone. We learn that the classification of the department will be somewhat similar to that of the Covenanted Civil Service, while the advantages as to leave of absence, pensions, and other privileges will not be inferior to those accorded to other branches of the Covenanted Services. Such is the amount of information which we have received upon this important and interesting subject, and we have every reason to believe that it may be relied upon. To Lieut.-colonel Goldsmid, C.B., of the Madras army, the merit is due for this liberal measure. On his accession to office, as superintendent over the line of telegraph between India and Europe, he soon became aware that, in order to act justly to the public, as well as to the individuals of his department, a thorough and complete reorganisation of the service was absolutely necessary, and the plan which has received the sanction of the Secretary of State, and which we hope shortly to see made public, is that propounded by this able officer.—Madras Times.

CHINCHONA PLANTS ON THE NEILGHERRIES.

—The planting season having passed, the total number of plants permanently planted out in the plantations is the same as in last month, viz., 4,01,211. The increase by propagation is 80,000, being 14,300 plants under the average of the last six months, making the total number 16,90,303. The average growth of the eleven plants planted out by Sir W. Denison and other gentlemen at Neddivitum on the 30th August, 1862, during the month is 1-3-11 inches, or 3-11ths of an inch above the growth of last month. One of the two plants cut down on the 20th of March, 1863, for the bark submitted to Mr. Howard for analysis, has made strong shoots of 89½ inches in height, giving the growth of 1½ inches during the month. The twelve plants of C. Officialis (a shrubby species) on the Dodabetta plantation, gives an average growth of 15-12 inches, or 3-4ths of an inch above the growth of last month. Several plants of C. Succinbra, Calisaya, and Condamenia, have furnished a good supply of fine seeds, which are now germinating freely. The number of plants issued to the public during the month is 68, making the total distributed 1,25,747.—Ibid.

THE GANJAM DISTRICT.—Most favourable accounts continue to reach us of the state of Ganjam. The change that a few weeks have brought about in this district is extraordinary. It was only in August last that we were receiving heartrending accounts of the famine that prevailed there, and now we learn that "the early paddy crop was almost universally a most abundant one." Rice is selling at fifteen to eighteen measures the rupee, and is, in fact, considerably cheaper than it was last year this time. In consequence of the favourable nature of the season, the demand for labour, and the visible improvement in the condition of the poor, the relief houses at Aska and Hoomah, and the pauper hospital at Rumbah have been closed.—Ibid.

FORTIFICATIONS ON THE RAILWAY.—Upon the recommendation of the consulting engineer, the Governor in Council resolves to recommend for the sanction of the Government of India an estimate, amounting to Rupees 18,699, for the construction of certain defensive works at the workshops belonging to the Madras Railway at Perambore. The plan and estimate of the proposed fortified entrance to the bridge over the Toongabudra will be returned to the railway authorities for re-consideration. The modifications suggested by Colonel Anderson might with advantage be adopted; but the Governor in Council is inclined to think that the buildings have been designed upon a scale unnecessarily costly and extensive, and the consulting engineer is therefore requested, in concert with the railway authorities, to consider whether an equally efficient plan of defending the bridge might not be obtained by a simple arrangement and at a smaller outlay.

SEASON REPORTS.—From the special fortnightly official season reports we gather that the harvest prospects are everywhere encouraging. In the case of Coimbatore the acting collector is of opinion that the special reports are no longer called for. The following is the report on Bellary, for the fortnight ending November 15, 1866:—"There was no rain during the past fortnight, but agricultural operations are in progress. The early crops are healthy, while the later cholom crop, paddy, horse-gram, and other grains are being sown. Cumboo and other grains are being reaped. Another fall of rain is necessary for the horse-gram and other crops in the Talook of Raidrug. There is little disease at present in the district, except in a few of the villages of the Talook of Alur, where fever is said to be prevalent. Cattle are reported to be free of disease. In the report from three Tahsildars, distress is still said to prevail, though it is to a very great extent alleviated by famine works and relief houses. Prices are still high; but supplies are being brought in from Dharwar, Cuddapah, Bangalore, and other places. Cotton is being exported. There is no want of pasture."—Ibid.

ALTERATION OF TITLES.—We are informed that Major C. S. Hearn, Commissioner of Police, has proposed to Government to alter the titles of the subordinates of the police from their present calling to that used in the Mofussil, from the commencement of next year. The constables will bear the title of deputy inspectors; the jemadars and duffadars that of head constables, and the peons or lower grade that of constables.—Madras Times.

MAJOR C. S. HEARN.—We learn that this officer is to be appointed superintendent of the army clothing department, the appointment becoming vacant shortly, and that Major M. W. Carr, Deputy Inspector General, Mofussil police, will succeed him as commissioner of police.—Ibid.

ACCIDENT TO H.M.'S STEAMER "DALHOUSIE."—A few days ago H.M.'s steamer Dalhousie, Lieut. Hewett, was sent out to cruise along the coast for the purpose of picking up the troop ship Albert Victor, which had been abandoned by the steamer Coromandel when the latter was to have towed her across from Aden. The Coromandel was obliged to cast the Victor Albert adrift in consequence of the bad quality of the coals she had on board. The Dalhousie, after cruising about for several days without falling in with the ship she was in search of, was returning towards Bombay, when, on Saturday morning, 15th inst., at about two o'clock, she ran into the wreck of the Die Vernon, off Alibaugh. The force with which the steamer struck the wreck was such that the Dalhousie's head smashed through the hull of the Die Vernon nearly amidships, which giving way from the weight of the concussion, the steamer was literally on the top of this wreck. As soon as the occurrence was made known to the Superintendent of Marine in Bombay on Saturday afternoon assistance was sent off to the vessel. The Dagmar, Lieutenant Arnot, was despatched in the afternoon and arrived off Alibaugh about seven o'clock in the evening, and previous to that Mr. Corke, first assistant master attendant, left in a pilot boat for the purpose of rendering aid. The steam yacht May Frere subsequently proceeded to the scene of the accident with Lieutenant Morland on board. On the arrival of the Dagmar and May Frere chains were passed under the Dalhousie and an attempt made to lift her off, but the chains broke, and it was several hours afterwards when she worked her way clear. Both her bows stove in and her fore compartment is full of water, which brought her down considerably by the head. Notwithstanding these injuries, there was no apprehension of her sinking. The vessel therefore did not require any further assistance from the Dagmar or the May Frere. The latter vessel then took the pilot and some other boats in tow, and the Dalhousie and the Dagmar returned to Bombay, where they arrived early yesterday morning without further mishap. The Dalhousie is to be taken into dock, where she will be overhauled to ascertain what, if any, further damage she has sustained, after which she will undergo the necessary repairs, but they are of too extensive a description to admit of her being available for conveying Sir Bartle Frere to Kurrachee on his contemplated visit to Scinde. Bad as the accident is it would in all probability have been much worse if the Die Vernon had not been there, as from the direction in which she was going the steamer would have gone right on to the reef, and would in all likelihood have become a total wreck.—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 28. [A Court of Enquiry has been held on the subject, but has not yet made its report.]

LOSS OF THE BARQUE "ULYSSES."—We have to report the total loss of the barque Ulysses (873 tons, burden), of Greenock, Captain McIntyre, which was bound from London for Bombay with a miscellaneous cargo. Her loss occurred on the 15th November in latitude 18 deg. 53 min. S. and longitude 73 deg. 16 min. E.; Point de Galle bearing N.N.E. and 1,540 miles distant, and Rodriguez Island W. by S. 560 miles distant. On the 14th Nov. there was an increasing gale and a heavy cross sea; and at night the weather was altogether exceedingly stormy, the wind veering round to S.W. At midnight it was found that the pumps, which had been very diligently employed, would not suck; and at half-past twelve the water had risen in the hold to a depth of four feet. This was reported to the captain, who ordered that everything should be put in readiness in case it became necessary to desert the ship. The water continued to rise, and at 4 A.M. it had reached the top of the cargo in the lower hold. At daybreak it was found that the vessel was fast settling down in the sea, and the life-boat, pinnace, and longboat, were therefore launched, the two first without damage, and the longboat losing its forefoot and sternhead. With great difficulty about sixty gallons of fresh water were got into the longboat, together with a stock of provisions. At about 9 A.M. the ship was abandoned, the captain being the last to leave her; and in an hour afterwards she went down head foremost, her sky-tights exploding with a loud noise. Since midnight the wind had greatly abated, and by noon there was a light breeze and fine weather, but still a very heavy swell. The captain decided to make for Rodriguez Island, and make arrangements for keeping the three craft in company, giving the life-boat and pinnace sufficient provisions to last eight or ten days. Next morning, notwithstanding the precautions which had been taken, the pinnace was not in sight and could not be found, nor was she ever seen afterwards. At half-past nine o'clock on the Saturday morning a vessel hove in sight, and the lifeboat and longboat immediately made their way towards her with as much speed as they could command. The ship proved to be the Braunstone, of Montreal, Captain Nickels, bound from London to Kurrachee. The persons in the two boats we have mentioned were picked up by this vessel at 11 A.M., fifty hours after they had left the sinking Ulysses, and after having suffered considerably from exposure to a vertical sun. They appear to have been most hospitably treated on board the Braunstone, and were brought to Bombay in her; having landed here, that vessel proceeded to Kurrachee. In the longboat were the captain and his daughter, Rev. E. Sampson, and Rev. G. Shirt (two missionaries who have been engaged to labour here); the carpenter, the steward, the cook, five able seamen, and two apprentices; in the life-boat were the first mate, five able seamen, and two apprentices; there being thus twenty-two persons who have been brought to Bombay in safety. As to those who were in the pinnace, of course it is impossible to state what has become of them. Their names are—Alfred James Cox, second mate, John Tate, sailmaker, Thos. Pelham, able seaman, Frederick Bond, do., Oscar Laurence, do., Alexander Ritchie, ordinary seaman, and Chas. Kingston, do. The captain has spoken in the highest terms of the conduct of the officers and crew of the Ulysses; and it is gratifying to state that the two missionaries who were on board as passengers assisted the crew to the best of their power in working the pumps, bailing out water, getting the provisions into the boats, and in such other ways, to the neglect of their own property.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—The Bombay Gazette says:—Sir Charles Wood, during his tenure of the Indian Secretaryship, laboured with the most painstaking precision to impress upon the members of the various Indian Governments that the councils for making laws and regulations which were introduced into India a few years ago were not new institutions, and that they were in reality the old institutions of the Governor in Council with a simple extension of power. Custom persists in calling the councils that do the legislation for India by the specific name of "Legislative Councils," notwithstanding Sir Charles' hatred of the phrase; and it persists also in calling the period of their sittings "sessions," although that word has likewise fallen under the ban of the late Indian Secretary. In accordance, therefore, with what perverse custom has established as the most convenient phraseology we may remark that the session of the vice-regal Council has been opened during the last fortnight and the work of legislation, as it is practised in India, has begun. Mr. Maine, the distinguished legal member of the Council, opened the proceedings by a long and careful repudiation of a charge made by Mr. Justice Holloway, of the Madras High Court, of over-legislation. Mr. Maine of course holds that the work of the Council, of which he is a member, in past years has been indispensably necessary, and that the extent of it is an unavoidable concomitant and proof of the progress of civilisation in India. People at home, accustomed to the multitudinous labours of the British Parliament, will smile when they learn that an average of thirty or forty Acts a year is considered by the Madras Judge an excessive out-turn of legislative work by the Council of the Governor-General of India. Mr. Maine divided the Acts into four classes, 1st, those (small in number) which affected the customs or religious usages of the people; 2nd, those whose object is to bring up the Indian law to the level of the improvements at home; 3rd, the codes of which class only the Indian Penal Code has been completed, while of the Criminal and Civil Procedure Codes the first chapters merely have been passed; and 4th, small local Bills from those provinces of the Empire not within the action of the local Presidency Councils. This latter class of Bills, while out of proportion to all the others, did not, as Mr. Maine explained, "affect the rights or duties of persons, but had a tendency to improve the machinery by which these rights were protected." The very existence of English law, the spread of commerce, the social changes which are creeping over the country, all necessitate legislation, which even with the advantages of codified law and procedure will rather accumulate than diminish as the social order of things around us becomes more and more penetrated by the influences of Western civilisation. The real charge against the Council is, not that it is habitually guilty of over legislation or precipitate legislation, but that its legislation is of so thoroughly local a character that imperial legislation holds with it a very subordinate place. This probably is inseparable from the principle on which India is governed, as it certainly is from the principle on which the Council is framed.

MR. ROBERT KNIGHT.—This gentleman has made a proposal in a letter to the Secretary of State, that Government "should give some assistance in the further prosecution of the reclamation works in hand in Bombay," or rather (for Bombay furnishes merely a special illustration), that Government should aid projectors of profitable works throughout "India," by using its credit to enable the projectors to obtain money in England on cheaper terms than can be obtained in India. "In other words," says Mr. Knight, "the Government should either lend the companies money upon the mortgage of the land or float their debentures upon the London Stock Exchange with a Government endorsement." This sweeping and wholesale proposal (says the Bombay Gazette) is one by which joint-stock enterprise, wherever it exists in this country, from the Himalayas to Cape Comorin, is to be supplied with funds by Government to carry on its undertakings. Admit the principle, and we may well ask where it is to end. Every joint-stock company in India is to be supposed to be a "developer of the country's resources," and each of them will imagine itself to have as good a claim to make use of the Government credit as any other. Admit the principle, and there is probably not one joint-stock company in India engaged in the construction of "profitable works" that will not be floating debentures with a "Government endorsement" or mortgaging its land to Government in return for a Government loan. Mr. Knight does not seem to have asked himself where Government would get all the money to meet the demands with which it would instantly be assailed in the event of its consenting to lend money itself; or whether its endorsements on the plentiful scale indicated would really open the pockets of English capitalists, or be calculated to inspire their confidence in the ability of Government to meet its engagements. Some of the Indian Railway Companies, not many months ago, tried with Government aid to raise additional capital without success, and had ultimately to fall upon the ordinary revenue for it. Would such a gigantic demand upon English capital, as Mr. Knight contemplates, heighten the credit of the Indian Government or meet with a better result? However desirable it may be to show vigour in prosecuting public works, prudence must keep zeal within the bounds of discretion and common sense. Lord Cranborne will not forget that India has but recently got its accounts reduced to order after a long period of confusion; and it would be a dangerous thing to launch into a state of confusion worse confounded than formerly, which we believe Mr. Knight's suggestion would do; or to destroy entirely the credit of the Indian Government to support a number of private companies which we likewise believe would be the inevitable result of acting on his extraordinary proposition.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION.—A singular state of matters exists at the present moment in connection with the liquidation of the Commercial Bank Corporation, so far as Bombay is concerned. On the suspension of payment by that bank it was thought advisable by its representatives in Bombay to procure a winding-up order from the local Court. Such an order was made by Sir Joseph Arnould, but the principle has since become recognised in the High Courts of India that in the case of banks which have their head offices in England and only branches in this country it is not competent for an Indian Court to make an order to wind up one of the branches. By a subsidiary order made by Sir Charles Sargent, subsequently to that of Sir Joseph Arnould, the Honourable A. J. Hunter and Mr. J. Beattie were appointed official liquidators in Bombay, these gentlemen having been chosen as agents by Mr. Holyland of London (an official liquidator who had by this time been appointed by the Court of Chancery to wind up the bank generally), and it being considered the most convenient course with regard to the liquidation of the Bombay branch, not to interfere with the order already made by Sir J. Arnould, but to have Mr. Hunter and Mr. Beattie appointed as liquidators under it. At the same time, however, it was directed that no funds should be remitted to England without the sanction of this Court; and this is the obstacle which interrupts the smooth flowing stream of liquidation. Mr. Holyland, acting under the instructions of the Court of Chancery, sends peremptory instructions to Bombay for the immediate transmission of the local assets (which it is stated amount to the tidy sum of forty lakhs); several attempts have in consequence been made here by the "official liquidators," or "agents," (Mr. Holyland calls them by the latter name) to get the necessary permission of the Court; but objectors step in and say that there would be a loss of £16,000 incurred by sending home so large a sum of money at the present rate of exchange, not to speak of the possible loss in sending it back in the course of some months to satisfy the depositors and creditors in Bombay. Sir Joseph Arnould, on the last application of the kind being made, frankly admitted that the order originally passed was an improper one, but pointed out that the strictly regular course to take in seeking to have it rescinded was to apply to the Appeal Court. This being so, and it being plain that the operation of the orders had been beneficial in preventing a heavy loss of money, the judge decline to interfere in the matter. And so things stand at present.

VOLUNTEERING IN BOMBAY.—There has been a movement on foot during the past month or two,—arising to some extent perhaps from the slackness of business, but manifesting at the same time a promising vigour,—for the formation of a volunteer corps in Bombay. A slight apprehension was felt by some of the supporters of the movement as to the spirit in which Government would receive the proposal, but any doubt on that score has been set at rest within the last few days by the publication of a communication from the local government assuring the promoters of the corps that “it will give the Governor in Council great pleasure to further, so far as lies in the power of this Government, an undertaking which may prove of great public value and importance." H. E. the Commander-in-Chief of the Army in this Presidency had already written to the Hon. L. H. Bayley, the Advocate General, — a gentleman who has taken a leading part in the movement, — expressing for himself the "great pleasure" that it would give him "to aid the community of Bombay in every way in his power in the formation of a corps of volunteers." The sanction of Government having been given in this cordial manner, we may expect that no time will be lost in enrolling members; and the present feeling on the part of the community is such as to leave no doubt that the ranks of the corps will soon swell up to considerable proportions. There was a corps of volunteers formed in Bombay in 1860, but it suffered from mismanagement, and had only a brief and never an energetic existence. Its career will probably afford lessons to guide the promoters of the present corps, but there is another source of assurance that the volunteering of 1867 will not be a failure. We refer to the great increase in the European population of the island, an increase which is particularly marked in the very class which is likely to contribute most to the ranks of the corps; and there is the additional circumstance to inspire hope, that a large proportion of those who have come out to Bombay within the last year or two have been volunteers at home, and that many of their number are likely to be not only eager to don the uniform here, but to be "effective" members from the day they enter the ranks. At a preliminary meeting held on the 6th inst. it was stated by the chairman (Mr. Bayley) that by that time 150 persons had expressed an intention to join an infantry corps, and about forty to become members of a corps of cavalry. We have no precise information as to what the numbers are at present, but we are sure they must have considerably increased.—Bombay Gazette.

GOVERNMENT AND THE BACK BAY COMPANY.—The differences between Government and the Back Bay Company have now been amicably arranged, both parties mutually retiring from the lawsuit into which they seemed to be drifting. From the detailed heads of agreement, which are published in another column, it will be seen that the company has relinquished its claim to wharfage rights along the whole foreshore of Back Bay from Chowpatty to the point in Colaba at which the railway enters Back Bay; in other words, the only rights it will retain in Back Bay will be to those portions of the land already reclaimed which the Government does not require for the railway, and for the carriage road fifty feet wide, which is to run outside the line from Colaba to the bottom of Malabar Hill. On the other hand, the company obtains the very valuable concession of the ground at Colaba on the harbour side with all the wharfage rights, which are of very considerable importance. It will be seen that Mr. Crawford, with his usual activity, has already taken advantage of the renunciation by the company of all its prior claims to wharfage rights and other concessions in Back Bay, to put in a claim on behalf of the municipality that if any scheme for making use of Back Bay for commercial purposes, or for docks or piers, &c., is projected, the municipality shall be entitled to a concession in preference to any other public company whatever. Public opinion will certainly back Mr. Crawford out heartily in preferring such a claim.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PERSIAN TELEGRAPH.—Lieutenant W. H. Pierson, R. E., who inspected the Persian telegraph from Tehran to Julfa on the Russian frontier last August, gives a bad account of the line. Its great defect is its distance from the post road and its consequent inaccessibility. For the sake of economising material it has been taken straight across country. A great portion of the line is accordingly condemned, and the Shah is recommended to reconstruct it on a better principle. The offices at Kasvin, Zenjan, Myaneh and Julfa, are only supplied with one Morse instrument each, and from the way in which that instrument is connected and disconnected with the line at the discretion of a Persian signaller, they can at present only be regarded as impediments to the steady and rapid transmission of messages between Tabreez and Tehran. On the other hand, the Russian wire in the Caucasus is well spoken of. The line itself is a double one, exceedingly well constructed, the posts are very large and strong, and renewed every three years; the insulators are very good. The line is everywhere close to the post road. Yet the working has been unsatisfactory because of the ignorance of English on the part of the Russian signallers. At Tiflis itself, a repeating station, there is only one clerk who knows English, and that imperfectly. In other respects Lieutenant Pierson thinks the prospect of the Russian lines becoming a safe and rapid route for Anglo-Indian messages is most encouraging.

DEPARTURE OF SIR BARTLE FRERE FOR SCINDE.—His Excellency the Governor embarked on Thursday, the 20th Dec., from the dockyard on board the B.C. and R.S.N. Company's steamer Sir John Lawrence, for Kurrachee. Sir Bartle is accompanied by Lady and the Misses Frere, Mr. F. Chapman, Chief Secretary to Government, and by his personal staff. Captain Young, superintendent of marine, also accompanies his Excellency. The Hon. Mr. Fogg, Mr. A. D. Robertson, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., Mr. Venayek Wasoodew, Sheriff of Bombay, Commander Robinson, the master attendant, and other dockyard officials, were in attendance to receive the Governor and Lady Frere. The Bombay marine steamer Dagmar also proceeds in company with the Sir John Lawrence. The usual salute was fired from the saluting battery. It is expected that his Excellency will return to Bombay about the 8th of January.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING OF THE BISHOP OF BOMBAY.—The Englishman of Dec. 13 says:—We are informed that his lordship the Bishop of Bombay had a narrow escape from drowning while attempting to get on board the steamer Simla. His foot slipped and the boat partially capsized, leaving his lordship hanging on by a rope to the ship's side, from which perilous position he was happily rescued by one of the ship's officers. The Indian Daily News of the same date says:—We have the pleasure to announce the arrival, per mail steamer Simla, of the Right Rev. Dr. Harding, Lord Bishop of Bombay, to assume the functions of Metropolitan of India, in room of the late lamented Dr. Cotton. His lordship is accompanied by Mrs. Harding.

His lordship is accompanied by Mrs. Harding.
AN UNSUCCESSFUL APPEAL.—Judgment was given in the criminal appeal case by the full Court on the 20th inst., in which three native directors were tried before Mr. Justice Anstey in September, 1865, two of whom were sentenced to transportation for life, and the third to four years' imprisonment. The appeal was brought on the plea that the jury had been allowed improperly to separate at the close of the first day's trial. The Court held that no good cause had been shown for reversing the conviction.

THE OVERBRIDGE QUESTION.—We are glad to be able to announce that the Overbridge question was finally disposed of on the 17th inst. by the Bench of Justices. It having been ascertained that the Railway Company and the Elphinstone Land Company are willing, though not admitting their liability, to pay one-third each of the cost of constructing the bridges, the general feeling of the bench was that the municipality, for the sake of the public convenience and to avoid further delay, should agree to pay the remaining one-third, the Government finding the land. One or two Justices urged that the bench should still protest against paying anything, and appeal first to the Government of India and then to the Secretary of State. It was ultimately, however, all but unanimously admitted that the bargain of which we have given the conditions should be concluded, it being evident that if another year were wasted in negotiations, the cost of the continued nuisance of level crossings to the trade of the town would equal the amount proposed to be contributed by the Municipality (one-third of 8 lacs) towards removing the nuisance. But the Bench will, nevertheless, still forward to Lord Cranborne a protest against the compulsion that has been put upon them, in the hope that the Secretary of State may force the Railway Company to make restitution to the Municipality. Meanwhile, Bombay may be congratulated on having heard the last of a controversy which threatened to become as great a nuisance as the level crossings themselves.—Bombay Gazette.

THE SHIP "DURHAM" has been taken up by Government for the conveyance to England of about two hundred invalid soldiers, with women and children, who go home under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel R. Patton, of H.M.'s 107th Regiment. There was a competition for the Government service between the Malabar and the Durham, the latter under-bidding the former by the sum of one rupee per head for the men, and of course obtaining the work.

SEUREEF KHAN, the Candahar chief who has so often changed from side to side in the Afghan contest, has voluntarily left the country, and made his appearance at Quetta, in Beloochistan. He wishes to pass through our territory on his way to Mecca. He will be courteously received by the Commissioner of Sindh, and, with a limited number of followers, permitted to go on his way; but he will not be allowed to reside near the frontier.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.—The Pioneer says:—With reference to the death of the late Governor of Muscat, who it was said was assassinated, the Governor-General lately ordered one Syud Salim to inquire about the affair, and the result is that he reports that the Governor did not meet his death by assassination as is generally supposed; but that he died a natural death.

THE PERSIAN GULF.—On account of a feeling of apprehension on the part of the European population of Zanzibar, in connection with the advent of the northern Arabs at that port, some of the vessels of the East African squadron are to be stationed there during that period.

THE ATTOCK TUNNEL.—We are glad to learn from Indian Opinion that the Attock tunnel is to be completed. Could it not be utilised in any way for the Peshawur railway, so as to save the very great expense of a bridge over the Indus?

MILITARY QUESTIONS.

Dec. 18.—No. 470.—The following questions submitted to the Govt. of India, and replies thereto, in connection with G.O.G.G., Sept. 26, 1866, No. 808 [Madras G.O.G., Oct. 12, 1866, No. 374], are published:—

Q. 1. A is a lieutenant-colonel by brevet of 15th September, 1857; should he enter the staff corps from 12th September, 1866, from what date will he be allowed to reckon towards the prescribed service, as lieutenant-colonel, qualifying for the colonel's allowance—i.e., from the date of his brevet lieutenant-colonelcy, or from what other?—A. He will reckon for colonel's allowance from 18th February, 1861, having completed twenty-six years' service on that date.—Note.—A was a regimental major on the 18th February, 1861, and eligible for admission to the staff corps on its formation, and entitled to promotion to substantive lieutenant-colonel on entry.

2. In the above case, from what date would A become a substantive lieutenant colonel in the staff corps?—He ranks in staff corps from 12th September 1866, but this is immaterial, his actual rank and pay remaining unaffected.

3. In the above case, A being also a colonel by brevet of infantry, of 1st January, 1862, will he rise to the rank of Major-General on the Indian List, in the same manner as if he had remained in the local service, or will that promotion be in any way affected by his now entering the staff corps?—Being a lieutenant colonel prior to 18th February, 1861, he will rise on the Indian list.

4. Can a brevet colonel of the local service, at the head of a department of the general staff, retain his appointment on promotion to major general, until he becomes entitled to the Colonel's Allowance, in the same manner as a major general of the staff corps, under G.O.G. No. 36 of 10th January, 1862, published in Madras, G.O.G., of 1862, page 47?—Yes, if approved by Government.

5. A entered the service in 1826, and is a regimental major of 1857; had he been allowed to join the staff corps on its formation he would have been promoted, as several majors junior to him were, to substantive lieutenant colonel from Feb. 18, 1861. He is also a brevet lieutenant of Sept. 15, 1857, and a regimental lieutenant colonel of Jan. 1, 1862, should he now enter the staff corps, would his rank as regimental lieutenant colonel be in any way affected, and from what date would he become a substantive lieutenant colonel in the staff corps, and reckon service for colonel's allowance?—His rank is no way affected by joining the staff corps. He reckons service for colonel's allowance from Feb. 18, 1861. See answer to Question 1.

HOME.

MISCELLANEOUS.

AMONG THE CASUALTIES IN THE REGENT'S PARK we notice the name of Arthur Reginald Stevens, the eldest son of Lieutenant-Colonel Stevens, of her Majesty's Indian army.

THE DEATH BY DROWNING of two young ladies, who were doubtless known to many of our readers, is announced in the London papers. The accident took place at Leamington. It appears that two sons of the Rev. J. H. Smith, of Milverton, went to skate on the river with three young ladies, the Misses Emily, Ada, and Kate Place. Having got to the ice by the New River Walk, the three young ladies began skating, all holding together by the hands. Just when they were opposite Knightcote House the ice suddenly broke, and all three fell into the water. The two young gentlemen hastened to their assistance, but their efforts at rescue only resulted in their slipping into the water themselves. There were several men walking about with poles, ropes, and ladders, and they were called upon. A gentleman who chanced to be on the ice took a rope, and, skating round the hole in which the young ladies and young gentlemen were struggling, he threw the rope so that they could get hold of it. The other end the gentleman took to the bank, where several men were standing. He found the rope to be short, and, holding the end of it firmly in one hand, he stretched his other so that the men could pull him and the strugglers in the water to the shore. As soon as the pulling began the ice gave way, and the people all tumbled about. At last there was no one left to aid the gentleman in pulling, and he was obliged to let the rope go. A ladder was then obtained and thrown into the water, and a longer rope being brought, the gentleman again ventured on the ice. By that time two of the young ladies had sunk exhausted, and were drowned. They were Miss Emily and Miss Ada Place. Miss Kate and the two young gentlemen were still struggling, and were rescued. The deceased young ladies were the daughters of the late Mr. Frederick William Place, of the Delhi Gazette.

WHIPPING FOR CRIMINALS.—In a paper read before the Statistical Society on Tuesday night by Dr. Mouat, on "Prison Discipline in Bengal," the gauntlet is boldly thrown at the feet of those persons at home who indiscriminately advocate mild methods and oppose wholesomely severe ones for the punishment and repression of the criminal population. Speaking of the Whipping Act—Act IV. of 1865, passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, to authorise whipping in addition to the punishments sanctioned by section 58 of the Penal Code, in which flogging is not included, Dr. Mouat remarked:—"I have dwelt thus long upon it because I believe the feeling in England on the subject of whipping to be based on erroneous views regarding its demoralising effects, and its deterrent influence on the criminal population. It fulfils the first and most essential condition for the prevention of crime, viz., the certainty teaches them the severity of punishment. The infliction of physical pain is more dreaded by thieves, habitual criminals, and the depraved and dissolute, than any other form of punishment that would now be tolerated. So long as it is deemed right to flog soldiers and sailors, it is scarcely logical to consider criminals entitled to exemption on any ground of morality or expediency. The usual effect of flogging is thought to consist in its provoking anger and retaliation, and thus aggravating the causes of crimes of violence to which alone it is applied in England. However theoretically correct this view may be, long experience of criminals and intimate knowledge of their proclivities lead us immediately to the conclusion that it is a punishment peculiarly fitted for offenders of low moral susceptibility, in which category all habitual criminals may fairly be placed; that it is the most deterrent of all punishments to the class mentioned; that it is followed by no moral degradation of such persons, their morality being already below the standard that would feel disgrace from its infliction; that it costs little, and inflicts no permanent bodily injury on its recipients; and that it protects society more efficiently than any plan of imprisonment now in use. If it be well adapted to the native of Bengal, as I know it to be, I consider it to be still better suited for the British ruffian and thief, who is probably, in every sense, a worse man of his class than his Bengali brother. In India it is simply impossible to maintain discipline in jail without it, or the alternative of resorting to other punishments which endanger health and life. In England I strongly suspect that stringent prison discipline is, in existing circumstances, impracticable, mainly because whipping is not allowed to be resorted to for its maintenance. I deny emphatically its cruelty. I disbelieve absolutely its immorality, and I am thoroughly satisfied of its deterrent influence, when properly regulated, judiciously applied, and jealously guarded from abuse as it ought to be. It should never, in any circumstances, be applied to any one to whom it could justly be considered a moral degradation, but such are not garroters, thieves, et hic genus omne."

THE NEW BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The Rev. Robert Milman, M.A., who has been nominated to the bishopric of Calcutta, rendered vacant by the untimely death of the Right Rev. Dr. G. L. Cotton, is a son of the Very Rev. Dr. H. H. Milman, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral. He was educated at Exeter College, Oxford, where he took his B.A. degree in 1838. In the following year he was admitted into holy orders by the Bishop of Peterborough. Having served some minor offices in the church, he was in 1840 nominated by the Dean and Chapter of Westminster (his father being at that time one of the canons) to the vicarage of Chaddleworth, Berkshire, and this benefice he held until 1851, when he was presented by his father, who had then become Dean of St. Paul's, to the vicarage of Lamborne, Berkshire. This living he held until 1862, when he was nominated by the Bishop of Oxford to the vicarage of Great Marlow, Buckinghamshire, of which parish he is at present the incumbent. He is the author of several works. He will probably be consecrated with the Bishops of Grafton and Victoria (Hong Kong), in Canterbury Cathedral on Saturday, the 2nd of February.

THE RIGHT HON. SEYMOUR FITZGERALD.—A large number of the friends of Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald, who is about to proceed to Bombay as governor, assembled on Monday afternoon at the King's Head Hotel, Horsham, for the purpose of witnessing the presentation to the right hon. gentleman of a portrait executed in the highest style of art by Mr. Lucas. The chair was taken by Mr. C. S. Dickens; and amongst the company were Lady Elizabeth Dickens, Sir G. C. Pocock, Bart., Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Seymour Fitzgerald, Captain and Mrs. Filgate, Major and Mrs. John Aldridge, Captain and Mrs. Bunney, Major Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Sanctuary, the Vicar of Horsham and Mrs. Hodgson, the Revs. J. Martin, B. J. Drury, and J. McCarogher; Messrs. Rawlison, Bostock, Mathews, Lintott, Thorpe, Moon, &c.

MESSRS. DENT AND CO., OF CHINA.—It is very satisfactory to be able to announce that a telegram was received on Monday morning from Hong Kong, dated December 15, to the effect that the bills of Messrs. Dent and Co., of China, refused some time since by Messrs. Dent, Palmer, and Co., of London, their agents, will be fully provided for. It is therefore presumed that the anticipated suspension of the firm will be avoided.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA.—(CHATHAM, Jan. 14.)—This morning the detachments of cavalry and infantry troops who arrived from Madras in the chartered troopship New Era were disembarked at Government quay, Gravesend, and forwarded to their respective depots. The New Era sailed from Madras on the 24th September, the voyage to the Thames occupying 110 days, during which one soldier died on board. The troops brought home include non-commissioned officers and men of the 16th Lancers, Royal Artillery, 24th, 60th, and 106th Regiments, Royal Marine Artillery, Royal Marines, and seven naval invalids, together with nine women and children; the whole under the command of Lieut. Seacome, of the Royal Artillery. After disembarking the troops the New Era proceeded on to the East India Docks, to discharge her cargo.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION OF INDIA.—The official liquidator of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India has announced his intention of paying a dividend of 6s. 8d. in the pound out of the funds in his hands on an early date next month, thus discharging a third of the liabilities of the bank. We hear that he entertains the hope of paying within a reasonable period another dividend of the same amount; there will then only remain payable a further 6s. 8d. to discharge the bank's liabilities. The liquidator has estimated in his report that a surplus will be left after paying creditors in full.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 16th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were—to Calcutta, £190,134; to Madras, £9,865; and to Bombay, £150,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras, at 1s. 10½d., will receive about 39 per cent.; and on Bombay, at 1s. 10½d., about 69 per cent. All above these prices will receive in full.

THE ORDER OF THE BATH FOR THE PACHA OF EGYPT.—A private letter from Malta states that the insignia of Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath was to leave Southampton on the 12th inst.; that it was to be sent by the English Government, addressed to Lord Clarence Paget, and that his lordship, as soon as he receives it, will leave Malta and proceed to Alexandria with the fleet under his command, to invest his Highness the Pacha of Egypt with the Order.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Jan. 18.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Delta, Captain Kellock, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived here this afternoon. IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT IN ARTIFICIAL TEETH, AND GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY,
SURGEON DENTIST,

9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE,
 Sole Inventor and exclusive Patentee of Artificial Teeth on a soft, elastic, chemically-prepared india-rubber gum. No wires or unsightly fastenings are required; they are more natural, durable, and comfortable than any yet introduced, and are about the specific gravity of cork, thus combining lightness and durability beyond any yet introduced. They are selfadhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within the reach of all.

Consultations free.

. Observe. No connection with any one of the same name.

EPHRAIM MOSELY on the TEETH fully explains his

STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

"To none is the public more indebted than to Mr. Day."— Illustrated News, page 826, June 9.

"Mr. Day has succeeded in robbing tooth extraction of its horrors, and we think we are only fulfilling an act of duty in giving publicity to the fact."—Court Journal, p. 582, May 26.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

"Mineralised India-Rubber.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection very improbable, and is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system must prove invaluable."—Globe, May 21, 1866.

"A vast amount of ingenuity has been displayed, not only in the formation of the artificial teeth themselves, but in the method or manner of fixing them."—Morning Advertiser, May 26, 1866.

"Mr. Day has not only succeeded in adding important items to the science of dentistry, but has reduced the operation of painless 'anaesthetic' to a matter of form."—Sunday Times,
 May 27, 1866.

These and every description of Teeth, combining the latest inventions and improvements in dental mechanism, may be procured from MR. DAY, Dentist (late Principal Assistant to Mr. ESKELL, of 8, Grosvenor-street, W.), 291, Regent-street (three doors from the Polytechnic).

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

DYSENTERY.

DR. LOWE, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered. THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with the sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshah . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review, May 15.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman, March 17.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner September 15.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta mail brings us no Calcutta papers, and we shall probably have no more by that route. From Madras we have files to the 27th, and from Ceylon to the 30th of December.

Almost the only news contained in the Madras papers is in reference to the sad accident we mentioned in our last, which led to the death, by drowning, of Colonel Temple, President of the Municipal Board, and Superintendent of Stamps, Captain F. H. Hope, 1st Royals, A.D.C. to the Governor, and two daughters of Mr. McIver, Secretary and Treasurer of the Bank of Madras. The party, it seems—with the addition of Mr. Bostock, the local agent of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, who is the solitary survivor—were taking a rowing excursion on the Adyar river. Between seven and eight in the evening, when it was quite dark, the boat grounded on a sandbank, and although she was got off and regained the channel, she must have sustained serious damage, for she filled with water almost immediately afterwards, and all of a sudden went down. Her occupants finding themselves immersed, the gentlemen took to swimming, Colonel Temple and Mr. Hope each supporting one of the young ladies. They were thus seen by Mr. Bostock, who had only himself to save, and was fortunate enough to escape. The current appears to have been too strong for the two officers, who, with their living burthens, were borne away. The event has caused great affliction to all classes of our countrymen at Madras, and made Christmas a very melancholy celebration. It is observable that nearly all the European community of Madras—including Lord and Lady Napier—attended the funeral of the sufferers.

Such is the dearth of topics at Madras that the Athenaeum and Daily News has devoted a leading article of nearly three columns in length to the new magazine, Belgravia.

It appears from a resolution of the Government of India that the duty of the famine commission, of which Mr. Justice Campbell is president, will be to inquire carefully and to report clearly its opinion on the following points:—

What were the causes which led to the scarcity and famine.

Whether timely and sufficient measures were taken to meet the evil, and to relieve the distressed, and if not, whether valid reasons exist to account for the absence of such measures; and

In what way, if any, action may be taken by the Government to prevent the recurrence of a similar visitation, or to mitigate its effects, should it recur.

The instructions already issued to Mr. Dampier, we are told, appear to the Governor general to be very full and suitable, and of a character such as may generally guide the commission in its investigations, though they should not be held to confine the commission literally to the limits laid down. There are districts under the local government which have suffered from scarcity, but which have been excluded from inquiry under the instructions issued by Sir Cecil Beadon to Mr. Dampier. As regards these (the Behar districts), the Lieutenant-governor has deputed a separate officer to make inquiry. The distress in Behar has not, the Governor-general believes, approached in severity or extent that which prevailed in Orissa and elsewhere in the neighbourhood of Calcutta. The circumstances, too, of Behar differ entirely from those of Orissa, whilst the field of inquiry indicated in the Lieutenant-governor's instructions to Mr. Dampier is already sufficiently extensive. It appears to his Excellency, therefore, that a separate officer may unobjectionably make inquiry into the scarcity in Behar.

A Bombay paper—the Saturday Review—which has reached us by this mail contains an article called "An Indian Reform Bill," in which the writer gives "people at home" a good rating for their indifference to Indian politics. "What is wanted," he says, "is an intelligent public opinion on Indian matters, and facilities for bringing that opinion to bear on the authorities. Under the present system neither the one nor the other of these desiderata is attainable. In a country like England one of the best ways of creating the first and effecting the second is Parliamentary discussion, but what takes place in the House on an Indian night cannot be called a discussion. The minister makes his statement to benches all but empty. When he has done, Mr. Smollet, who, we are sorry to say, is an 'Old Indian,' gives vent to a few astounding statements and amazing theories; a late minister makes a few courteous remarks, and the cotton representatives utter tirades about their favourite staple not being grown in sufficient quantities. After this all retire, feeling that they have done their duty to their country and to India. The papers next day give a rechauffe of the minister's speech, and the 'brightest jewel in the English crown' is left alone for another year, unless some commander-in-chief or general gives rise to a scandal, in which case a good deal of interest is displayed by honourable members." Adverting to a proposed remedy for these defects in the shape of Indian representatives in Parliament, the writer goes on to say:—"We cannot but look on such a scheme as, for the present, at least, utterly Utopian. It sounds very well, but that is all. In the first place, the number of such members would necessarily be very small, and would be lost in the large number of English representatives, with whom they would have little in common. Again, they would come to be looked on as a separate caste, and, as such, would lose weight. They might, it is true, if men of great abilities, occasionally perform the herculean task of making the House take an interest in India, but we cannot always rely on being able to secure the services of men of commanding talents. Such men, too, would for the most part prefer representing an English county or borough. The only feasible remedy for the defects in the present system, it appears to us, is to have as many men in Parliament with some knowledge of India as possible." The writer, in short, leaves the question very much as he found it.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay Mail, which has not yet been telegraphed from Suez, but is due in London on the 6th of February.

Among the notices of forthcoming books we see "Sir Charles Wood's Administration of Indian Affairs from 1859 to 1866," by Mr. West, lately his private secretary. The favourable opportunities which Mr. West enjoyed of access to the most authentic sources of information will render his work of much interest and of great value in regard to the consideration of the numerous important questions which were dealt with during the period of Sir Charles Wood's tenure of office as Secretary of State for India.

A committee has been appointed to inquire into the working of the India-office establishment, with a view to extensive reductions.

The new Governor of Bombay has appointed Captain Filgate, his son-in-law, to be his military secretary. Some of the papers are complaining of the appointment, inasmuch as Captain Filgate has retired from the service.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, January 30, 1867.

A VICTORY OF PEACE.

LIEUTENANT HENRY CHARLES KEMBLE, of the 2nd Bengal Cavalry, has just rendered a signal service to the State against the greatest enemy we have in India. He has met, and resisted with complete success, an attack of cholera upon the men of the squadron of which he was in detached command, routing the foe and effecting its utter extermination.

It appears from the account of the affair given in orders that Mr. Kemble was commanding the escort with Lieutenant-colonel Eden, agent for the Governor-general in Rajpootana, during the journey of that officer to Agra in the month of November last. The escort, numbering a hundred sabres, but subsequently considerably augmented by another detachment, joined Colonel Eden's camp at Erinpoorah in September. Cholera was then prevalent at Palee, a large and populous native city on the Nusseerabad road, about forty miles off. Colonel Eden, therefore took the precaution of avoiding that road, and marched instead via Ahwa to Ajmere. After leaving Jeypore, and when distant only a day's march from Bhurt-pore, the colonel received intelligence of the presence of cholera at that place, and the epidemic almost immediately made its appearance in camp, then at a village called Helena. Upon this it was determined to abandon the main road, and march to Agra via Futtehpore Sikri instead of Bhurt-pore. Ten miles distant from the latter place two men who had been attacked died. Owing to the reports of cholera at and around Bhurt-pore quarantine was now established, and all vakeels and others were stopped along the road. Upon nearing Agra the escort was refused admission to that station, and detained at a place called Baroda, about ten miles off. The European officers of the escort, however, with all political agents and their subordinates, were permitted to encamp within the station. Here one of the natives in the moonshee's office experienced an attack which terminated fatally. On this the whole native office camp was struck, and ordered out of cantonments, the spot they had occupied being well fumigated and cleansed.

In the meantime the escort at Baroda were still worse off. One morning Mr. Kemble, while at Agra, received a hasty message from the Rissaldar whom he had left in charge, informing him that a trumpeter, two sowars, and two syces, had been simultaneously seized with cholera. Mr. Kemble immediately despatched an urgent official request for medical aid, and proceeded himself at once to the camp. Here he was joined by the native doctor, who had been ordered to remain at Futtehpore Sikri with the vakeels. There had been no medical assistance at hand when the outbreak took place. Although eight hours had elapsed since the first seizure, the men were still lying in the lines, one of them being in a state of collapse. Mr. Kemble immediately ordered the sufferers to be removed, and the ground they had been lying on to be burnt up. He selected as cholera hospital a spot well away, but at an easy distance in case of fresh seizures. He then marched the squadron to a village called Merakor. These measures were taken on the 5th of November, on the morning of which he had received the Rissaldar's report. That Mr. Kemble lost no time is shown by the fact that he was in camp two hours after the report reached him. During the rest of the day he occupied himself in cheering up the men, who seemed very much depressed—and not without some cause, for two of the sowars died, and several fresh seizures took place. In the evening arrived Dr. Cunningham, of the Meywar Agency, accompanied by Lieut. Gataker, of the Deolee Infantry, a party of which were also under Mr. Kemble's command. There were many more seizures by that time. The entire number of cases admitted into hospital on that day was twenty-one, and of these thirteen proved fatal. On the 6th the state of the patients was such as not to admit of a long march, and yet it was necessary to change the position. By Dr. Cunningham's advice a spot was selected between four and five miles to the right of the Futtehpore Sikri road, near a large village called Malpoora. Here ten cases of cholera were admitted into hospital, five terminating fatally. On the 7th Mr. Kemble still remained at Malpoora, and a further decrease took place in the number of seizures, seven fresh cases occurring, and one death. On the 8th he again removed the camp, marching, at right angles, the course pursued on the previous march, to a spot some two miles off, near the Khairaghur and Dholpore road. On that day one man was seized, and died. On the 9th Mr. Kemble continued to occupy the same ground, which was of a very advantageous character. A large plain enabled him to extend his squadron over some four hundred yards of high open ground, while the infantry were accommodated by a tope of trees, and an open space, surrounded by trees, served for the cholera hospital. On that day there was again one admission and one death. On the 10th no fresh cases occurred, and one that was admitted on the 11th proved, on inquiry, to have originated on the 9th, so that, from the 9th to the 20th, the date of the official communication in which these facts are embodied, there were no fresh cases, and it was evident that the epidemic had disappeared. Indeed, on the 14th Dr. Cunningham declared all his cholera patients convalescent, and was relieved from his charge.

It will be seen that, considering the thorough manner in which the disease had taken hold of the troops, as shown by the number and suddenness of the attacks, the loss of life was far below the proportion which might have been expected—judging from precedents which have been so frequent of late years. And, with every respect for the professional abilities of Dr. Cunningham—of whom Mr. Kemble speaks in the highest terms—there appears no doubt that the main credit in the matter is due to the latter officer, who was in command of the detachment and responsible for everything that was done from first to last. We all know that in dealing with cholera—especially among large bodies of men under the same influences, as in the case of troops—something more than medical treatment is required. In the present case the movements of the camp seem to have been made with much judgment and discretion; and besides shifting ground Mr. Kemble chose situations which were open and high rather than confined and low. Moreover, he took the additional precautions of burning all spare grass from the cavalry lines, and heaps of dried leaves on all spots that had been occupied by the hospital, and on which a cholera patient had been lying; visiting the men in hospital three or four times daily; promulgating amusements, with a view of keeping up the spirits of the men, such as football, and firing mounted at bottles; allowing all so disposed to shoot over the country; and in short, as this officer says, “leaving no measure untried tending to prevent depression and fear during the first and worst period of the outbreak.” So highly, indeed, did Lieut.-colonel Jackson, commanding the 2nd Cavalry, think of his subaltern's conduct that he sent a very strong recommendation of it to Head Quarters, dwelling particularly upon the fact that “from the first case until all signs of the disease had left his detachment, Mr. Kemble remained at his post.” And the Colonel very sensibly adds, “And though his duty was so to do, still when I know that there were many temptations, during the Vice-roy's visit to Agra, for a young officer to join the festivities, I consider great credit is due to him for the self-denial and proper sense of duty he showed in refraining from the many invitations I knew him to receive.”

The latter sacrifice involves a degree of moral heroism which would be more difficult to many young officers than charging a battery. Indeed, Colonel Jackson hints at this opinion when he adds:—“I have known Lieutenant Kemble to be a zealous and intelligent officer in all his regimental duties, have witnessed him well forward in a charge in action, and seen him with pleasure emerge therefrom with only his coat and horse cut; but my opinion of him is considerably enhanced from the behaviour he has shown during the time his detachment was suffering from cholera; and I most cordially commend him to the notice of his Excellency.”

The Commander-in-Chief, in his turn, has passed a high eulogium upon Mr. Kemble's conduct, and submitted it to the favourable consideration of the Governor-general. It is to be hoped, therefore, that this young officer will meet with some substantial reward. It may be that he only did his duty; but there are different ways of doing duty; and Mr. Kemble might have performed his in such a way as to have been unimpeachable by authority, and yet have allowed the cholera to carry off two-thirds of the men under his command.

BENGAL.

THE DYCE SOMBRE CASE.

This extraordinary case has lately been heard in appeal before the Chief Court of the Punjab at Lahore. The litigation has lasted twenty years already, and seems likely to last for several more. The evidence carries us back to the infancy of our Indian dominion, and the value of the property is estimated in crores of rupees.

In the days when the genius of Dupleix bade fair to crush the feeble resistance of the English Company and to make French influence paramount in India, a common sailor in a French ship left his vessel, entered the army, and rose to the rank of Sergeant, but speedily transferred his services to the Nabob of Bengal.

Few pages of history are blacker than that which records the massacre of the English prisoners at Patna in 1763. Even the Bengalee soldiers refused to kill the defenceless captives. “Turn them out,” they cried, and let us fight them. We are soldiers, not butchers.” But Walter Reynard, French sailor formerly, was there. With a file of soldiers he marched to the prison, and they fired through the windows until one hundred and fifty Englishmen lay dead or dying on the floor. In the following year Surajah Dowlah sued for peace, and the surrender of Reynard was demanded by the English. He fled to the north-west, where, under the name Sombre or Sumroo, he acted as a partizan chief under Scindia until his death in 1778. He was succeeded in the command of the troops by his widow, the Begum Sumroo. She had been a nautch-girl at Delhi, and became the concubine of Sumroo, but was never married to him. She became nominally a Roman Catholic, having previously been by turns a Hindoo and a Mahomedan. After Sumroo's death she married another Frenchman, named Levasseur, and so proud was she of his supposed descent from the old noblesse, that she had her Christian name, Joanna, engraved on her seal with the title nobilis. She was suspected of tempting her husband to suicide, by a promise that she also would kill herself, but as soon as he fulfilled his part of the bargain, she assumed the command of the army. She contended against the British in the cause of Scindia. Her troops were among the “myriads of Assaye,” against whom Wellesley “flashed with his fiery few and won.”

Then, partly through fear and partly through the blandishments of the British officers, the Begum changed sides and abandoned Scindia. For reward she was confirmed in her possessions at Sirdhana, in the Ganges and Jumna Doab, and at Badshahpore, west of the Jumna, in the west of Goorgoon. In 1834 the Begum executed a deed of gift of the pergunnah of Badshahpore, with certain arms and stores, to Mr. Dyce Sombre, whose mother was a granddaughter of Reynard by another mistress. On the death of the Begum in 1836, the Government took possession of the lands she had occupied, on the ground that the Begum's interest was merely for life. Dyce Sombre afterwards became a lunatic, and in 1848 the present suit was instituted by his representatives, the defendant being originally the Collector of Goorgoon, but now the Secretary of State of India. It was pleaded on behalf of Government, amongst other matters, that the twelve years fixed for limitation of suits had expired, and this view was upheld by the Indian Courts, whose judgment was reversed by the Privy Council on appeal in 1858, and the case remitted to India for trial on the merits. Each party casts upon the other the blame of the seven years' delay which followed. It seems to have arisen out of the transfer of the territory west of the Jumna from the jurisdiction of the north-west provinces to that of the Punjab. At last, in 1865, proceedings were re-commenced in the court of the Deputy-Commissioner of Delhi, (Captain MacMahon) whose judgment was on every point in favour of the defendant. The case came in appeal before the chief court on the 5th instant, and the arguments of counsel occupied no less than eight days. Only a fragmentary account of the questions raised can be given in one short article.

First, then, Government "plead to the jurisdiction," that is to say, they declare that Badshahpore was taken possession of by the East India Company as an act of state, and that the civil courts have no right to inquire into such acts. This plea was passed over in the first inquiry in 1848, and was not raised by either side on the appeal. It is now contended for the plaintiffs that by omitting to raise the question before the Privy Council the defendant has forfeited his right to plead it now. On a point so purely technical it may be sufficient to remark that the Privy Council had an undoubted right to inquire into the decision of the inferior courts, and hence there was no necessity for the defendants to raise the question at all before the tribunal. But supposing that they may still adopt this line of defence, what is its legal and moral value?

It must be remembered that the Begum held land both at Sirdhana and Badshahpore. In determining the weight of a political plea, it is essential to ask whether the Begum had a political position. The learned counsel for the plaintiffs let himself be led away into a denial that the Emperor of the French was a sovereign, because he like the Begum was destitute of "sovereign blood." But in fact the Begum was not a sovereign in the same sense in which the Emperor of the French is a sovereign. It would seem that in Sirdhana she did indeed exercise most of the internal functions of government. The processes of the Company's courts did not run within her domain, criminals fled thither from the English raj and could be secured only by a regular application for their extradition. The Begum had her own troops and had bound herself to the British Government by an agreement which had all the essentials of a treaty. But it is clear, on the other hand, that this sovereignty existed only on sufferance, and in international relations right is based very largely upon might. A delegated sovereignty of this description would, in our opinion, rank in the eyes of jurists as no sovereignty at all. However it appears that it was recognised as a sovereignty by the British Government, and it is a rule too well known to deserve all the attention it has received in the course of this trial, that the civil courts must accept as facts the independence and sovereignty of all States recognised as such by the Government of the country. The Court is bound to consider the position of the Begum to have been what it was recognised by the Company as being, and it seems to have been considered as a position of independence. But the evidence would suggest that while the Begum was sovereign in Sirdhana, she held her lands at Badshahpore by a purely private tenure, in precisely the same mode as the native Rajahs have palaces in the cities of our empire. It is here that the plea of jurisdiction fails. The suit relates to British land, and is therefore cognisable in British courts. The result of such an inquiry might well be that the British Government had a right to confiscate all the property of the Begum of Sirdhana, and Badshahpore among the rest, but so far as Badshahpore is concerned it is for them to prove this right to the satisfaction of the Court. If the arguments by which Government seeks to establish their plea were allowed for a moment, there would be an end to all security against tyranny. The plea "act of State" could be used to cover the most monstrous injustice, and private lands could be seized with impunity, provided they were done in bare connection of the most remote kind with a seizure of foreign territory.

Supposing then that the courts have jurisdiction, what is the evidence in support of the plaintiffs' claim? The most important part of it consists of copies of two sunnuds, purporting to have been issued by Shah Alum, Emperor of Delhi, in the year 1789. Unfortunately no original documents relating to these sunnuds have been produced. The plaintiffs exhibit copies which were obtained in 1847 from the office of the King of Delhi. Witnesses were called who stated that they had copied the documents produced from the record kept in the King's office. The office passed away with so many other things in the mutiny of 1857. But even while it existed it would seem to have been in strange confusion. The records were kept in private houses in the city, tied up in loose cloths and exposed to the attacks of insects. Yet all who are acquainted with the way in which the most important business in transacted by natives, and have seen deeds and thousands of rupees emerge from holes and handkerchiefs in dirty shops in the bazaar, will hesitate before they pronounce these documents to be forgeries merely because they came from what to English ideas was an insecure custody. Those of our readers who attach importance to the internal evidence will hardly believe that any forger's imagination could have been riotous enough to devise the following titles of the Vizier which occur in one of these sunnuds:—"The superior and exalted in dignity, elevator of the standard of magnificence and pomp, ornamentor of the carpet of splendour and respect, support of majesty, prop of sovereignty and of the conquest of countries, bestower of victories in the field of battle for the protection of the world, glitter of the mirror of sincerity and gratitude, light of the lamp of uniformity and candour, associate and exhilarator of the special assembly, knower of the secrets of the closet of fidelity, wielder of the sword and pen, regulator of the affairs of mankind, chief among the peers of dignified station, vazeer prudent in counsels of the Empire, ameer enlightened in mind, having the power of Solomon, vazeer of the kingdom, support of the country, centre of affairs, Dirnadoodowla Asufghah Boochanusmooth Aloemunsoor Sufdurdjung Shoojaooddoulah Tepyah Khan Asnfooddowlah Bahadur Hoozubijung Yarifadar Sipeh Salar Rootsum-i-kind." It will probably be impossible now to determine conclusively whether these sunnuds are genuine or not. The reasoning from dates and the want of the royal mark, on which the Deputy-Commissioner lays much stress, appears to us to be weak in the extreme, nor has anything been alleged on the part of Government to show that the documents are forgeries. But to the layman as well as to the lawyer there will appear grave reasons against giving much weight to evidence of so inferior a character, and it is this general objection rather than any particular flaws which have been pointed out, which the plaintiffs will find most difficult to overcome.

The other issues are not unimportant, but they are comparatively uninteresting, relating as they do to legal questions of limitation and estoppel.

Upon the whole, the plaintiffs' case appears to be rather a weak one. They have too many things to prove and too many points to carry to leave them much hope of success. Their case has been strengthened rather than weakened by the mutiny, for it has given them the opportunity of saying that all the documents that were in favour of their case have disappeared from the Government records. Few men will for a moment believe that Government or its officers would stoop to anything so base as this, yet it must be admitted that this case has disclosed some startling irregularities.

These are of so much public importance, that they ought not to be passed over without a cursory notice. At the trial some altercation arose between the learned counsel respecting the conduct of Mr. Fitzpatrick, the Government agent in the case. It appeared that Mr. Fitzpatrick had been allowed to tear out of the book of record in the Meerut collector's office such letters as he required for the purposes of the case, and although there did not appear to be any reason for supposing that there was any sinister motive in this, yet the public will not readily acquiesce in the view which Government officials appear to have entertained respecting their position and duty. It had been thought that they were the repositories of justice, not mere ex parte ministers of the executive power. It had been supposed that the most sacred interests of the subject could be safely entrusted to their honour, and that conflicting claims would be weighed in an equal balance even when Government might be a party to the suit; and it is a matter of surprise that those original and important papers on which the decision of the case might be expected to turn should have been allowed to leave the custody of the officer responsible for their safe keeping, and put into the hands of an officer directly interested in the case. One cannot help exclaiming in despair—"Quis custodiet ipsos custodes."—Delhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE EDEN GARDENS.—There appears to be a pretty little quarrel in Calcutta with Mr. Hogg, in consequence of certain restrictions upon entrance to these gardens. The nature of the dissatisfaction will be gathered from the following:—We have for some time past been pestered with letters, reproaches, articles, &c., &c., on the course which Mr. Hogg, the Commissioner of Police, has thought fit to pursue with regard to the admission to the Eden Gardens. Public opinion, such as there is of it in Calcutta, appears so strongly opposed to the restrictions laid down by the Commissioner, that we think an official explanation or withdrawal of the notice ought to take place. Is part of the subscription asked for to go to the support of the town band? Such had been rumoured, but the public want to know if it be a fact. Rumour also assigns what is unpopular in the notification to a higher source than the Commissioner of Police, but Rumour is a sad jade, and has lately been playing mischief with reputations, especially in high latitudes.—Englishman.—Sir, Will you please decide the following bet:—Our friend Jones (who comes of a very respectable family, although not a Bengal civilian) in a rash moment applied for a season ticket of admission to the select enclosure of the Eden Gardens—and got it—in the hope of there meeting the secret object of his young affections. On Saturday evening he mooned about the place, but found her not! He was furious at the thought of the bare possibility of her papa having been refused a ticket, but we pacified him by suggesting that the probability was that he was not such a fool as to apply for one. Jones did not see it in this light before, and now wishes he had not been and gone and done it—and paid for it. He can't get his money back, but he consoles himself with hoping it may turn out to be Rs. 12 well invested, for he says he is shortly going home via the Continent, and he expects that the production of the ticket, signed S. Hogg, Commissioner of Police, will give him the entree at all the Foreign Courts—in fact, will be the equivalent of a certificate of introduction at the Court of St. James's. We bet him the value of a family ticket that his ticket is worthless out of Calcutta, and not only that, reminded him that he has overlooked the chance of its being in the meantime "withdrawn" by the exalted major! This was a shut up for poor Jones; he, however, anxiously awaits your decision, and so do your obedient servants, BROWN & ROBINSON.—Ibid.—Fresh troubles appear to gather around the Gardens of Eden.

The officers of the rifle brigade, not appreciating the joke of having to pay to hear their own band in these gardens, determined that it should perform on the old course. Upon this an order was given to admit soldiers to the gardens free. This, however, has not had the effect of increasing the subscription list. Many of those who are determined not to subscribe to the shady groves of Paradise, but who subscribe to the town band, insist upon that band playing on the old course, or where the subscribers can go and listen to it. All this must rather complicate the troubles of the authorities, who still insist on placing the silver bar across the gate of Eden.—Ibid.

THE PROPOSED FORT AT PESHAWUR.—Some twelve or fifteen days ago a telegram was received to the effect that the works for the construction of a fort at Peshawur had been suspended in consequence of orders from the Secretary of State for India. A contemporary of the Railway Times, who appears to take a special interest in railway (more particularly Punjab Railway) matters, doubted the correctness of the intimation, apparently because the Secretary to the Government of the Punjab in the Public Works Department, was alleged to be ignorant of orders to this effect. After a while, however, the scales of belief dropped from the eyes of the sceptic, and he admitted generally that there might be some foundation for the "rumour," and proceeded to argue on the advisability of the step. It may therefore be assumed that the building of the fortified works at Peshawur has been suspended, and presumed that a work of unheard of folly in the present state of Indian finances, is not to be carried out. How it ever entered the heads of the "authorities" to fortify the cantonments beyond the Attock at the enormous estimated expense of eight hundred thousand pounds sterling, to be swelled ad libitum to perhaps as much more, to meet unconsidered contingencies, appears inexplicable in the face of the fact that a railway bridge over the Indus at Attock would cost only £380,000. That such a bridge would place the Peshawur valley in a better state of defence than twenty forts, at the cost of millions of money, must be patent to every man of common sense. But then common sense is often the one thing wanting in men of small minds. The Secretary of State who has, in his place in Parliament, pronounced on the necessity of a line of railway from Lahore to Peshawur, has no doubt seen the folly of wasting public money on an "idea," and it is therefore a matter of congratulation that such a waste as was contemplated in this instance has been nipped in the bud. It is to be hoped that nothing more will be heard of this miserable attempt at a most unsatisfactory expedient for investing many a million of money on unproductive bricks and mortar.—Railway Times, Dec. 15.

ANOTHER SCANDAL AT THE DURBAR.—The Indian Daily News remarks upon the conduct of some of the officers of the 88th Regiment who were present at the Scindian fete at the Taj:—"After the Viceroy had retired," says the writer, "we were following his example, and had to pass the table at which his Excellency had been seated. In passing, the editor of this journal was twice struck by loaves of bread thrown from the table at which these 'officers and gentlemen' were seated. It fortunately happens that there can be no mistake about it, for we were accompanied by a gentleman who is in the postal department, and who, we have no doubt, will confirm the statement. Our friend was struck once; and, to be certain of the offenders, we went near and passed them for the sole and express purpose of looking at their numbers. Whether Colonel Maxwell speaks from as good evidence when he speaks so positively, we presume not to say. But we leave him to the choice of swallowing his positive assertions, or of accepting the conduct of his subordinates as being that of 'officers and gentlemen' according to his own standard. We do not wish our remarks to apply in the least beyond the point to which they were applicable. And we state this the more readily as from Mogul Serai to Sahibgunge we were accompanied by two officers of the 88th in charge of invalids; and they behaved, even under great provocation, in every respect as 'officers and gentlemen,' while some of those of the Taj did not. We wish to give the devil his due; but we shall not permit even Colonel Maxwell to cast imputation on our veracity, in a matter where our testimony is unimpeachable and can be supported by respectable witnesses. As to the steps that are 'about to be taken with reference to the Daily News,' we await them with the fullest confidence."

TOO BAD.—We take the following from the Delhi Gazette:—"Some three years ago our readers may remember an affecting poetical address in our columns to Sir Charles Wood beginning—

"Oh wert thou in a shady lane!
Where none could see, where none could see,
A cudgel to thy wooden head
I'd give it Thee! I'd give it Thee!"

Which was (confidentially of course) communicated to us for prominent publication by the late Lord Elgin; well, we are happy, nay more than happy, to find that the present Viceroy, despite his prosaic reputation and appearance, is also given at uncertain times to "courting the Muse"—a harmless kind of flirtation to which it would be very desirable to limit lieutenant-governors also—and, under this influence, has been induced to contribute to his most honest, if not most fawning, supporter of the fourth estate the following stanza:—

ADDRESS TO THE MAHARAJAH OF GWALIOR.

"Scindia is my only joy
Faithless as the winds or seas,
Sometimes forward, sometimes coy,
Yet he never fails to please!
If e'er I frown, he's not cast down,
Scindia, smiling and beguiling,
Seems much happier than before.
Scindia is, &c.

"That he buys arms I hope to find —
In many a plot I could him fix,
Yet the moment he is kind
I forgive him all his tricks!
Plain though they be, I'll not them see,
He deceiving, I believing,
What can Cranborne wish for more?
Scindia is, &c."

RATHER TOO STRINGENT.—The recent order of Government, G.G.O., No. 899, dated 25th October, presses very hard upon those officers concerned. It lays down that any failure on the part of an officer to remit his subscription to the military or other funds will entail a loss of their benefits and a consequent loss of all the subscriptions previously made, upon the unfortunate subscribers. We have our doubts whether if the case were tried at law such an order could be upheld. But it is undesirable to make regulations and pass orders which lead officers going to law with Government. The order as it stands is a foolish and an unjust one, and the sooner it is modified the better. Officers are informed "that any neglect on their part to pay their subscriptions at the proper time will entail on them and on their families the forfeiture of all advantages accruing to them as well as all sums paid by them to the fund." Was there ever such a curt, bashaw, Blue Beard production in the shape of a G.G.O. as this?—Delhi Gazette.

INDISPOSITION OF THE HON. ASHLEY EDEN.—The Honourable Ashley Eden is suffering from severe indisposition, and has been compelled to take a short trip to sea. Mr. Geoghegan is also obliged by sickness to return home by the next steamer. Mr. Stuart Bayley will take charge of the Bengal Office during his absence.—Englishman.

THE RAILWAY TO DARJEELING.—For many years the Indian public have been tantalised with the prospect of reaching Darjeeling with as much ease as they can now reach Allahabad. Invalids sighing for the refreshing breezes of the hills have looked forward to the days when palkees and dak gharries would be things of the past, whilst commerce has waited for the conveniences, which a railway to the foot of the Himalayas would place at her disposal, for securing a certain and profitable trade with Tibet. The Ganges and Darjeeling road, it was hoped, would obviate much that was a subject of complaint, but with the proverbial luck of the efforts of the P. W. D. this road became one of the greatest afflictions ever inflicted on travellers. The line, however, has at last secured support in high places. The Viceroy, we hear, has taken up the matter. The project will now probably assume a definite and practical shape, and be carried into effect without any very great delay.—Englishman.

THE RAILWAY BETWEEN CANNUPUR AND LUCKNOW.—We are glad to hear that it is the purpose of Mr. Wilson, agent of the Indian Branch Railway, to open the line between Cawnpore and Lucknow on Monday next the 24th Dec. (Christmas-eve). On this occasion Mr. Wilson will reward those who aspire to the honour of being foremost in their manifestation of confidence in the excellence of the line, by carrying them to and fro free of charge. It is said that this line between Lucknow and Cawnpore is to be conducted upon thorough republican principles. There are to be no "classes;" Mr. Wilson (and we believe all railway agents) finds it does not pay companies to provide for "dignities." Under these circumstances we consider it only right that all wasteful expenditure should be eschewed.—Pioneer.

THE LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR'S CAMP moves on Thursday; during his stay his Honour has given a succession of dinner parties of the most agreeable sort. The 93rd Highlanders marched yesterday towards Jhansi, so you will soon see them in Agra, and should their fine band play in public as it did here, take my advice, go and listen to it. The Left Wing 98th is shortly expected, and 3rd Buffs go direct to Meerut, their camp equipage having been sent on to meet them at Gazeabad.—Delhi Gazette, Dec. 20.

DR. SINCLAIR, Director of Public Instruction, Berar, has set agoing two High Schools, one at Oomrawttee and the other at Akola. There are now 57 schools working under the Director of Public Instruction in Berar, and within the next three months there will be upwards of 150. An annual examination is to be held, at which exhibitions, amounting to sums varying from Rs. 5 to Rs. 20, will be given to the boys who gain the highest number of marks.

THE STAFF CORPS.—An important notification has appeared to the effect that under authority from the Secretary of State, his Excellency the Viceroy notifies that officers who join the Staff Corps under G.G.O. 808, 26th September, 1866, will not be liable to be put on half pay upon any other grounds than what would have rendered them in any case liable to be removed from the active strength of the army.

THE MISHMEES TROUBLESOME AGAIN.—As usual, the savages Sir Cecil Beadon would convert into good neighbours by the payment of black mail, have signalled the opening of the cold weather. A branch of the Mishmees, it is reported from Luckimpore, belonging to the Binkhakata clan, have made a raid upon a village in the Juddya Pergunnah, and committed a variety of the atrocities peculiar to such events.—Englishman.

THE SHERIFF OF CALCUTTA.—It is rumoured that Mr. Henry Crooke, of the firm of Messrs. Crooke and Rome, will be appointed Sheriff of Calcutta for the ensuing year.

THE CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—Calcutta Volunteer Rifles: The regiment is now re-organised, each company having elected officers; the names are as follows:—Mercantile and Bankers: Captain C. J. Connew; Lieutenant John Morison; Ensign Hawarth. Trades: Captain Charles Kelvey; Lieutenant A. Strand; Ensign Gordon Robb. Professions: Captain James Bruce; Lieutenant C. R. Smith. Government and Servants: Captain F. G. Teales Lieutenant H. Ronaldson. The election by the regiment of Captain G. R. Fenwick as major in place of Major Pitcher, resigned, is now before Government for confirmation. With the above staff, and a military man as commandant, the regiment ought to turn out effective.

MADRAS.

THE FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE ADYAR RIVER.

This anniversary of Christmas has been, we lament to say, a very sorrowful one for the society of Madras, and of deep affliction to some members of it, who have suffered terrible bereavements by means of a most tragical and unexpected accident, to which the annals of this place afford no parallel, that we can remember. On the evening of the 23rd instant a party of ladies and gentlemen went out for a rowing excursion on the Adyar river. It consisted of Lieutenant-colonel Temple, president of the municipal board and superintendent of stamps, Captain F. H. Hope, First Royals, A.D.C. to his Excellency the Governor, two daughters of Mr. McIver, secretary and treasurer of the Bank of Madras, and Mr. Bostock, agent here of the P. and O. Company. The tragical occurrences which followed are thus narrated in our daily issue:—

While returning home, and when their frail craft was nearly opposite to Captain Carr's residence, at the mouth of the river, it touched the ground on a sandbank, the tide, which was on the flow, setting strongly up the river at the time. It was about twenty minutes past seven when this mishap occurred, and of course quite dark. On the boat grounding all the party got out, in order to lighten the boat, and the channel being found by Mr. Bostock, the boat was speedily floated again, and the ladies placed in her, Colonel Temple and Captain Hope starting to row, while Mr. Bostock stood in the bows and used the boat-hook as a pole to keep the boat in the proper channel. While thus engaged with his back to the other occupants of the boat, he felt the shock of the boat sinking, from which he only recovered to find himself struggling alone in deep water, without an idea of the direction in which he should strike out to reach the shore. Mr. Bostock, at the inquest held last evening upon the three bodies which have been found, stated that he did not observe the water rising in the boat, and had no idea of the danger the party were in till the craft plunged beneath the surface, bows foremost. When in the water, one of the other gentlemen called out to know if Mr. Bostock could swim, and on his replying in the affirmative, the same voice exclaimed, "Then its all right," and the two deceased gentlemen then struck out for the shore, each supporting one of the young ladies, from which moment none of the four were again seen alive, nor is anything known by Mr. Bostock of the course they took, though he called to them to "swim with the current." After drifting some distance with the tide, Mr. Bostock was landed on a small sand key in the vicinity of the house occupied by Mr. J. D. Mayne, who happened to hear exclamations which appeared to proceed from some one calling out to know if his companions were in safety, and suspecting something wrong, Mr. Mayne procured a boat and put off to the rescue, finding Mr. Bostock in a pitiable plight, but in a still more pitiable state of mind regarding the fate of his friends. A careful search was at once instituted, and the spot where the accident occurred being pointed out by the survivor, the body of Colonel Temple was recovered about midnight, just where the fatal accident took place. Yesterday (24th) morning the remains of Captain Hope were found washed up nearly opposite to Brodie Castle on the Adyar, evidently carried there by the tide, and at three in the afternoon the body of Miss Catherine Mary McIver was also recovered from the treacherous waters of the Adyar, the remains of her elder sister not having as yet been found. The precise causes which led to the boat sinking can only be conjectured, but the probabilities are that in grounding it got strained and sprung a leak somewhere, its rapid filling after being shortly before quite tight and dry making this the most likely solution. The darkness of the hour, added to the suddenness of the accident, no doubt deprived the unfortunate victims momentarily of that presence of mind which might have enabled them to reach the bank on which their boat grounded, and the swift current hurried them away into deep water, to perish within easy reach of a friendly shore. It is with feelings of deep sorrow that we give these heart-rending details of a more lamentable catastrophe than it has ever fallen to our lot to record, and the mournful sympathies of our readers, no less than our own, will, we feel sure, be with the sorrowing and bereaved friends of the unhappy victims of a circumstance which, slight in itself, was one over which the manly arms guiding the ill-fated boat had no control. The remains of the unfortunate gentlemen were interred with military honours in St. Mary's Burying-ground yesterday evening (24th), the whole of the 60th Rifles forming the funeral party. The Right Hon. the Governor, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, the judges of the High Court and members of Council, and nearly all the members of Madras society having joined the funeral procession.

The bodies of the two deceased officers, and that of one of Mr. McIver's daughters, were recovered during the night and next morning, but that of Miss McIver was only found on Tuesday morning (25th) in the surf, having been carried over the bar by the turn of the tide. The funeral obsequies of the much lamented victims of this terrible mischance were attended by all classes of society. Lord and Lady Napier, the Commander-in-Chief, the Members of Council, the Judges of the High Court and the other heads of the community being present to pay the last token of respect to persons who were not only respected, but likewise loved, by those who knew them in their lifetime. Their deaths, so awfully sudden and unlooked for, have cast a terrible shadow over Madras. The common mirth of the season has been hushed under the wings of the angel of death, not merely hovering over us, but using his dart in a remarkable way. The young and the strong, who had apparently many years of happiness before them, have been cut off as it were in a moment, and survivors generally share the grief of the families affected by a great calamity, which time cannot banish from their memories, and for which it can afford no relief.—Athenæum and Daily News, Dec. 27.

ARTIFICIAL STONE.

The architectural beauties of Madras are exceedingly few. At a distance, as we approach Madras in a ship, the North Beach, with the Supreme Court and railway terminus, give one the idea of a city, while away to the left the Government workshops, ice house, and St. Thome suggest ideas about cotton spinning and suburban retreats. But when we land one building looks as much like another as do the stars, differing from each other only in magnitude, that is, as regards buildings for Europeans. A number of large and small square or oblong rooms stuck together, and a verandah fringe about the outside of the whole, or a part, of them constitute the Madras house. The slightest divergence from straight lines and right angles makes a house in Madras as great a landmark as a church. The reason for this great sameness is undoubtedly that the useful has been much more generally cultivated than the ornamental. We think the prevalent opinion with regard to the houses which exhibit the original genius of their architects is that they are not so comfortable as those built in the most ordinary manner. Indeed, people from the present and future (?) capitals of India who come to see friends in Madras are astonished to find us living in such comfortable houses, and to see us growing, if we are of an agricultural turn, our own grass and grain, to say nothing of green peas and other garden produce, enjoying all the blessings of a rustic life with the advantage of a town residence. Flying visitors to Madras who put into Black Town to find out what kind of a place the benighted Presidency is, of course tell different stories from those who go to the Club, to Nungumbakum, or Adyar. One says that we live in villas, and another says we live in hovels, one says that our hotels are clean comfortable boarding-houses, and another says that they are dirty, and the haunts of the most reckless class of mariners. In fact, two different visitors contrast Black Town with the tract covered by European habitations, although it must be said, on the other hand, that there are fine buildings in Black Town, and miserable things like those that even the past quiet monsoon has thrown down, in the suburbs. We have studied the useful and the comfortable in the European habitations, to the neglect of the ornamental. As regards native houses, they certainly improve a little, but neither the economical, useful, nor beautiful has had that attention paid it which it really deserves at the hands of a commercial community. Something is to be said as regards cost and quality of materials for a large building, or, indeed, any ornamental structure, that is, anything going beyond the region of plain colours and chunam work. Hewn stone is costly in the extreme, and we have no material between that and chunam, coloured and plain. This want of superior building materials no doubt led the native architects and artists to relieve the monotony of white chunam by artificial colouring, such as that which adorns, or is supposed to adorn, the cricket pavilion at Chepauk; or in its higher phases, such as may be seen behind the pials of native houses, sometimes assuming the most fantastic shapes, occasionally picturing pugilists, tigers of extraordinary dimensions, and females with enormous jewels suspended from their ears and noses. If we could invent some mode of building which would give variety and ornament, independently of chunam and paint, there would be a new impetus given to building, and particularly among the natives. The money spent on the beautiful paint, out of which diagrams of tigers are made, would be more readily spent on solid masonry if any variety were possible. We fully believe that there are few things that would pay better than building and letting respectable native houses, but the European hesitates to undertake the task because nothing of the beautiful is suggested by a street of native houses, and partly because the aggregate rental, if large, is made up of so many small rents; and the native hesitates to undertake anything new until the experiment has been tried by Europeans. He can scarcely believe in anything that is not hallowed by tradition until he has a practical demonstration. It took him a long time to believe that cotton was worth such a sum as it was during the American war, but when he got hold of the money all doubts were dispelled, and probably it will take him as long a time to believe that cotton is falling in price. Directly he finds tree planting remunerative he plants, and he founds mutual benefit societies in imitation of societies founded by Europeans. If we could only show him that the demolition of some of the groups of huts which disfigure our town, and the erection on the site of regularly built and clean little houses, would pay more than 12 per cent., he would soon commence operations. It is to the public advantage that the filthy holes inhabited by the families of the class from which domestic servants are drawn should be removed altogether, and in their places something more substantial and more pleasing to the eye and nose erected in their places. And surely it is worth while making a start. The small may be made as pleasing to the eye as the large, and it is the cheap houses in England which are the most remunerative to the builder, as a rule. The revenue from them is more regular, the tenants less troublesome, and expenditure is seldom demanded in large sums. Dealing in what the "million" wants, indeed, is seldom attended with much risk. The hatred for grain merchants shows that these men do a good steady business to say the least; the third class passengers pay the best on our railways; and we are convinced that a trial of third class houses will prove them to be no exception to the rule.

To turn again to houses of the larger class, it is quite clear that Madras must expand. Her trade is increasing, the natives have just been wakened up out of centuries of sleep by finding money in their pockets or in their cloths, and have caught an active desire to increase it. One company formed by natives sets out in its prospectus that it is prepared to do or undertake anything that will pay more than 12 per cent., which is very characteristic of native enterprise. These are indications that Madras must have more houses in the same space than she has now. Already bungalows are being squeezed into corners of compounds and taking away land from cultivation. As this goes on the irregularity of the buildings will be increased to grotesqueness, unless some principle of building be adopted. Something ought to be done to prevent the formation, away from Black Town of anything like Poplar's Broadway, which is an admixture of fine buildings and mere dens. We have laid great stress above on the deficiency of materials at the command of the designer, and indeed we have been specially induced to bring the whole question forward at the present time, because our attention has been drawn to what in India is, we believe, an entirely new building material which, if all is true that is said about it, must change all the architectural features of a place like Madras. A company has been formed in Calcutta for building with artificial stone, and the accounts which are placed before us, though wanting these great guides—figures—are truly wonderful. If the stone invention is one-twentieth part as useful as it is described, we wonder why we have seen nothing of it. By means of it we can dwell in monolithic houses, worship in monolithic churches. We can have monolithic sewers and monolithic carvings at a less expense than brick in chunam, and of even a more durable kind than the monolithic temples, baths, and figures among the rocks at the Seven Pagodas. If the whole story is not too good to be true, why not build some specimens in Madras, showing the kind of work done, its stability and cost? If the relations these last bear to each other have been correctly stated, we should soon give up brick in chunam. We should soon have handsome, unpainted buildings, both small and large. We should get monolithic streets of native houses with most perfect monolithic drains. We should have a new market built at

—we dare not say what fraction of the cost—of one built of brick in chunam and floored with hewn granite. European houses of "original design" would spring up, fortresses against white ants, rats, and other vermin which it is unpleasant to "dwell upon." We are somewhat incredulous regarding the great value of agglomerated beton, because we cannot reconcile it with the slow rate at which the compound has been adopted. We are in a difficulty, as we have never heard the material condemned, though we have seen it puffed up considerably. We should consequently be glad if some explanation why the use of such a cheap and excellent building-substance is not more widely spread could be given to us and our readers.—Athenæum and Daily News.

THE DOVETON PROTESTANT COLLEGE.—The annual distribution of prizes took place on the evening of 21st December, Sir Adam Bittleston presiding. The gathering of friends was the largest we remember to have seen for several years past, and may, we hope, be accepted as an earnest of the desire of the community to rally round and support the institution. The reports of the examiners having been read, and the prizes awarded, the Rev. W. Miller read an address in which he said:—Allow me to lay before you a short statement of the present condition of our institution, and of the principal incidents that have varied our school life during the year that is now drawing to a close. We opened in January with 153 students on the books; we have now 155—eight in the college department, fifty-four in the high school, and ninety-three in the primary; this has been about our average number for the last twelve months. The attendance of the boys has been, on the whole, very regular, and their conduct, with two or three exceptions, satisfactory. Of the students who went up for the matriculation test in December, 1865, eleven passed—three in the first class, and eight in the second; out of the former, one, W. L. Bower, had a Government Scholarship of ten rupees a month conferred upon him. As nine of these successful candidates returned to the Institution, the College Department, which had been in abeyance since the end of 1863, was re-opened in February, and a Fine Arts Class formed. We have this month sent up to the University examination eight for the Fine Arts, and twelve for the Matriculation. In connection with this subject, I am sure that all old pupils who were companions of Barry will be glad to learn that he headed the list of successful candidates at Sandhurst this year. Marsden, also, a contemporary of Barry, has distinguished himself by bearing away, this year, the highest prize of the Peter Cator's Exhibition. They both matriculated from Doveton College in 1864.

THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—The Governor-general in Council, in May last, recommended to the Secretary of State that the 3rd and 5th regiments of infantry Hyderabad Contingent might be allowed to bear on their colours the words "Central India," in consideration of their service in the campaign of 1857-58, under Sir Hugh Rose. Lord Cranborne, in a despatch dated Oct. 16, replies that her Majesty's Government willingly sanction this recommendation on the presumption that this distinction will be gratifying to his Highness the Nizam, as well as to the officers and men of the regiments. There can be no doubt as to the feelings of the officers and men—but as to the Nizam, his Highness knows as much about the troops of the contingent as if they were serving at Kamschatka. Although paid from the Hyderabad revenues, they are, and have always been, the troops of the British Government. The Nizam is paymaster—but master in no other sense—and their decorations and honours must therefore be a matter of supreme indifference to his Highness.

FREIGHTS.

To London and Liverpool.—Cotton, £2 to £2.10s.; Hides and Skins, £2.15s.

IMPORTS.—Further arrivals of Cotton Goods by the coasting steamers from Bombay have kept prices down in this market. There has been a good amount of business done in Piece Goods in Pondicherry, but the local demand has been very weak. We have had very few transactions in Twist and Coloured Yarns, and the market for these is at present exceedingly dull. Our quotations for Grey Shirtings are—7lbs., Rs. 7-4 to Rs. 7-6; 8½lbs., Rs. 8-12 to Rs. 8-14; Mule Twist, No. 40, Rs. 5. Prints and T-cloths have been in better demand.

EXPORTS.—There have been larger transactions in Cotton during the last fortnight than we have been able to report for some months past. It is estimated that upwards of 3,000 bales have been purchased in Madras since the date of our last circular, the bulk of the purchases having been made at Rs. 165 per candy. Small quantities, however, have been taken at Rs. 164, and transactions are reported at Rs. 160 and Rs. 158. The latest advices from England have given dealers more confidence, and the market closes decidedly firmer. Supplies are now daily arriving from the interior.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A LITTLE SCANDAL.—The Calcutta correspondent of a Bombay paper writes as follows, apropos of some general remarks:—"It was only the other day, for instance, that a Mahomedan of some respectability in Calcutta, and a Government uncovenanted servant, paid a visit to Rampore, ostensibly for the purpose of seeing his relatives, some of whom are in that place, but really to visit the Nawab for purposes which I leave you to find out. He is at present in disgrace with the Government for gross neglect of duty, and has no more influence with the Viceroy than I have. He went to the Agra Durbar unsolicited and uninvited, and was consequently seen flitting about the tents outside, seeking an opportunity of ingress, which he did not find for some time. At last he happened to espy an empty chair, and succeeded in slipping into it. After the tamasha was over, he proceeded to Rampore, where he indulged in an unlimited amount of 'tall talk' as to the wonderful things he could do with Sir Cecil Beadon and Sir John Lawrence. The Nawab thought he had succeeded in securing a treasure, the more so because the Hurkaru had been pelting him rather sharply concerning certain ugly proceedings in a delightful garden-house just outside Rampore, for sundry flirtations with one of the wives of the ex-King of Oude, and for general neglect of his duties as the ruler of a fine province. He accordingly paid the 'illustrious stranger' the greatest attention, made him reside in the palace, and before his departure was closeted with him for four mortal hours. It is said that the interview proved substantially gratifying to the 'stranger,' whatever it might have been to the Prince himself, who, I am afraid, was fed with hopes utterly beyond the power of the visitor aforesaid to forward. Now there is a distinct and positive order of the Government, by which such visits and interviews are strictly forbidden; and I am personally aware of a case in which a contravention of the order was severely punished. A European gentleman (I withhold his name for obvious reasons) was an acting Deputy Magistrate and Collector of Bynour. He called on a Rajah and had a little quiet talk with him about things in general and nothing in particular. This circumstance came to the knowledge of his superiors, and the result was that after a lot of inquiries by sundry committees, the unfortunate official was discharged, though no evidence was at all forthcoming that money had been taken by him from the Rajah on the occasion in question. He had been long in the service of Government, and had always enjoyed the unlimited confidence of his masters, yet this unhappy visit ensured dismissal from the service. It would be as well if the Government were equally active and inquisitive in this case, as I venture to think that some very ugly matters would turn up. I am pretty sure that the Nawab of Rampore is not the only native chief who has been deceived by natives from Calcutta both Hindoo and Mahomedan, who find it pleasant and remunerative to boast of the immense influence they have with the Government."

AN ORIENTAL ROMANCE.—The Times of India has been telling a romantic story about the sister of the Sultan of Zanzibar. The Bombay Gazette gives the following, which professes to be a true version:—"It is a pity to take the romance out of the pretty story of 'Fatima the Faithful,' published in the Times of India; but we are afraid our contemporary's powerful imagination and sympathy with the fair heroine have induced him to give a more poetic colouring to the tale than it deserves. The hero who gained the affections of the sister of the Sultan of Zanzibar is a German store-keeper who has lived for several years in the island. How it came to pass we know not. But they saw and loved one another, and the houses in Zanzibar being conveniently built with flat roofs which afford a secret and easy mode of communication from house to house for enterprising Don Juans, a clandestine correspondence was established which soon resulted in the seduction of Fatima by her German admirer. When the Sultan heard of what had happened he became furious with indignation, but, curiously enough, seems to have taken no steps to revenge himself on the obscure foreigner who had dishonoured his house; and contented himself, for the time at all events, with shutting Fatima in prison. The girl soon managed to make her escape and found a refuge on board H.M.S. Highflyer, which took her to Aden, where she is now living awaiting her confinement. The lover (if alive) is still at Zanzibar; and though he had been afraid at first to venture out of his house, by his accounts he was going about as usual; though probably by this time he has been put out of the way. It does not much matter what becomes of him, or, for that matter, of fair Fatima either; for we cannot feel very enthusiastic about the conversion to Christianity of a young woman who has seemingly only changed her religion because the new faith gives her an opportunity of indulging her natural inclination to lead an immoral life. The serious part of the story is that an unpardonable insult has been offered to the Arab ruler of Zanzibar—for the Sultan and the girl who has been seduced are children not only of the same father but of the same mother, which will make the prince more keenly sensible of the disgrace, and that there will probably, in consequence, be bitter ill-feeling if not deadly feuds between the Arabs and the Europeans at Zanzibar for fifty years to come—rather a heavy price to pay for the gratification of the illicit fancy of a German shop-keeper. Possibly, too, the captain of the Highflyer acted beyond his power in carrying off the fair fugitive, though one can hardly blame the gallant sailor for running some risk in order to succour beauty in distress."

GOVERNMENT AND THE VOLUNTEERS.—It was hardly to be expected that the Government would receive the proposal to establish a volunteer force in this city in a niggard or ungenerous spirit. The promoters of the movement have been in communication with Government upon the subject, and it is gratifying to learn that in reply Government "expresses to the gentlemen who have joined the movement the great satisfaction with which it has heard of their resolve," and it promises "to farther as far as lies in the power of Government, an undertaking which may prove of great public value and importance." Nothing remains now but for the volunteers to expedite their own arrangements.

COLONEL STRACHEY, who had gone up to Kurrachee on a tour of inspection, made good use of his day's stay in Bombay, visiting every reclamation along the foreshore of the harbour from Colaba to Mazagon, and walking over the ground to see the work done and in progress. Colonel Strachey will, we believe, return to Bombay, after a month's absence in Sind, and will probably remain here for some time before visiting other parts of the country to make a general inspection of Indian public works.

CHINA & JAPAN.

The China news is politically unimportant. The Peiho was frozen on the 26th of November. The Viceroy had returned to Shanghai, having, according to native accounts, gained immense victories over the Nien-fei. The Chinese at Shanghai had been invited, by proclamation from the Taotai, to send objects of interest to the Paris Exhibition. A severe typhoon had been encountered in the neighbourhood of Shanghai. The Hong Kong dollar had been proclaimed a legal tender to the Customs at Canton. The Mint Commission had sent in its report, but it had not been made public. There was a rumour that the Canton authorities intended to erect light-houses in the Pearl River, from Hong Kong to Canton.

The most important news from Japan is that of the great fire at Yokohama, on the 26th of November, by which nearly two-thirds of the native town and one-sixth of the foreign settlement at Yokohama were consumed. The following account of the disaster is taken from the China Mail:—

"At a little before nine in the morning the fire bell rung its alarm, and all rushed to the scene, which was found to be the street leading from Bentendori to Yoshiwara. In a few minutes flames were seen issuing in various quarters simultaneously. The flames worked up against the wind from the locality in which the fire originated, and in half an hour the whole of Yoshiwara was destroyed. With the exception of one or two fire-proof godowns and the temple at the end, not a single stick was standing to mark the boundaries of dwellings. The fire spread towards and in the foreign settlement. The new American consulate was soon level with the ground, and remnants flew around; then No. 1, the private residence of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson, and Co., caught. In a few seconds it reached the whole settlement, and soon the private residence of Walsh, Hall, and Co. was on fire. Simultaneously with this the whole range of old consular buildings, French, Prussian, American, and English, in which latter several gentlemen of the English legation and consulate were residing, were swept off like so much tinder. The wind increased almost to a typhoon, the sparks communicated to the old native Custom-house, and in a short time it was a thing of the past. Next the new bonded warehouse was destroyed. Other strips of buildings caught, and soon the whole blocks 70, 50, 42, to 43, and 1 and 2 were in a blaze.

"About eleven o'clock the wind shifted a little more easterly, and quickly laid hold of the houses and godowns in the new direction. No. 71 and part of No. 72 in the main street, and Nos. 51, 52, and 53 were speedily attacked; proceeding in the same direction Nos. 44 and 49, Nos. 24 to 28, and 3 to 8 became sharers in the general woe. The club was not consumed, although it caught fire once or twice; but it was terribly shaken by the explosions, and much damage was done to it. In most instances the houses blown down subsequently ignited and became an easy prey to the flames. On the bund the first building that escaped was the French hospital. Some of the other buildings on the lot were destroyed. At one time it seemed that Nos. 54 to 58 in the main street must inevitably go; but happily, although all received some damage, it is of no very great extent. The blocks destroyed, then, are 1, 2, 3, 4, a part of 5, 7 (bungalow saved, but much damaged), 8, 21, 22, 23 (small bungalow saved), 24, 25, 26, 27, part of 28, part of 29 (blown down), 40, 41, 41A, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48 (part saved but much injured), 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, part of 54, 70, 71, 72, and No. 89. In addition to these, the block of buildings containing the French, American, Portuguese, and Prussian Consulates, and the old British Consulate buildings, the newly-built American Consulate, the whole of bonded warehouse A, and all the adjoining buildings, the whole of the Japanese Custom-house, and the fire-engine house. Of the native town fully two-thirds were utterly destroyed within two hours of the original bursting forth of the flames.

"We are inclined to estimate the total loss at the fire in Japanese and foreign property—houses, godowns, and goods—at between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 dols.

"It is now ascertained that the fire had its origin in a small cookshop; some grease dripping on the fire caused a blaze and caught the dry woodwork, and in a few minutes attained mastery over the whole place."

CEYLON.

The following is from the Colombo Observer of Dec. 29:—

THE WEATHER has been more favourable of late for coffee drying and curing operations, but the holidays will now interfere with business in Colombo. The export of our staple to the 26th inst., however, shows a continued increase over last year's return to the same period, amounting to 46,177 cwt., this time principally in plantation. The favourable weather up country and the abundance of labour have enabled planters to hurry through picking operations, and the great cry now is for transport to convey crops to Colombo. Carts are said, on all hands, to be scarcer than for many seasons back, and we hear of stores in Kandy being quite full of coffee; but, doubtless, the very early season has created a greater demand for transport than is usual at this time.

FEW EVENTS OF POLITICAL IMPORT have occurred during the past fortnight within our limited colonial arena. The intervention of the Christmas holidays has driven public questions out of mind; and the "Eyre Defence Fund" alone continues to be a subject of controversy.

THE GOVERNOR and Major-general Hodgson are at present at Newera Ellia, and the exodus of society thither from Colombo has already commenced. The Governor returns to close the session of the Legislative Council during the first week in January, after which the Colonial Secretary will also leave for the Sanitarium. It is expected that his Excellency and suite will go on a tour through the Northern Province in January, or early in February. The Governor has quite recovered from the recent attack of fever, a few days in the bracing climate of Newera Ellia having quite set him up. There are few or no changes to note in the civil service this time, if we except the appointment of Mr. Trotter as acting postmaster-general, Captain Barton having got a further extension of leave. Should Mr. Morris, agent for the Southern Province, retire on a pension in a few months, as has been hinted, considerable changes will take place in the ranks of the civil service.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE.—Visitors to the Crystal Palace are so well provided for with regard to miscellaneous amusements that, although the Palace is shorn of its fair proportions on the north side, consequent upon the ravages of the late fire, the public still find abundance of space and attractions within the building; and during the holiday season vast throngs have visited their favourite resort to witness the great variety of entertainments, which includes a pantomime in its entirety. If we sought in vain the Indian objects, the Ninevah Court, the tropical plants, the library, the collection of naval and engineering models, and found the once splendid Alhambra and Byzantine Courts in ruins—nevertheless, there remained uninjured the remaining eight of the Fine Art Courts, with the whole of that part of the Palace occupied by the exhibitors, and that in which the concerts and amusements take place. The damaged portion of the edifice is undergoing careful inspection, preparatory to its restoration or reconstruction, and we believe the Palace will, at no distant interval, become the repository of Eastern Courts as grand as those it has lost, including a new Indian collection. It must be highly gratifying to the proprietors to notice the deep and wide spread feeling of sympathy with the Palace which the recent misfortune has called forth from all classes of the community, from her Majesty downwards, a sympathy which has already, as we have mentioned, brought many offers of objects to replace those destroyed. The desire of the public is to re-erect the fabric by subscription, with which the company concur; it is expected the cost will be between £50,000 and £60,000, a sum of money which it would not be difficult to raise by even a shilling subscription. We sincerely wish to see the restoration of so noble a temple of the arts as the Palace at Sydenham fully accomplished.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY COMPANY.—With reference to the H capital of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central Indian Railway Company, the directors have determined, with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India in Council, to issue the sum of £750,000, in 37,500 shares of £20 each, bearing a guaranteed interest of 5 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, in January and July.

THE MANSFIELD-JERVIS CASE.—The Army and Navy Gazette has good reason for anticipating that the decision come to by the authorities at home as regards the case of Sir William Mansfield and his late aide-de-camp, Captain Jervis, will have the effect of leaving things as they are. The sentence of dismissal on Captain Jervis, passed by the court, will stand good, a result with which, on the whole, there is not perhaps much reason to quarrel. With respect to the more important part of the case, the continuance of Sir William Mansfield in the chief command of the Army in India, we believe that after much deliberation his Royal Highness and Lord Cranborne are unwilling to resort to so strong a step as a recall. But, if we do not err, it will be found that the opinion of the home authorities is expressed in no doubtful or qualified way of the unfortunate and objectionable course into which the Commander-in-Chief in India allowed himself to be betrayed in the matter.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.—At the meeting on Monday evening, Sir R. I. Murchison, Bart., president, in the chair, a paper was read "On the Best Site for a New Capital of India," by Mr. George Campbell. The author assigned various reasons, political as well as otherwise, for changing the site of the capital of India. The political subjects were, in accordance with the rules of the institution, as much as possible excluded from the subjects discussed. If, the author argued, it be conceded that a new capital is wanted, and that there are no insuperable obstacles to moving to a new place, and no reason for delay; if, moreover, there be a pretty general agreement on the most essential requisites for a European capital in India, it only remains to go forth, map in hand, and to try and find a suitable place. The following points should be specially considered in the selection. It should be, as far as possible, central, geographically and politically, and easily accessible from the different parts of India; it should be within easy reach of the sea, but not so near as to be exposed to danger from attack; and, ceteris paribus, that coast would be preferable from which there is the most rapid and direct communication with Europe; that the climate should be temperate, and, with such aid as local surroundings may afford, tolerable throughout the seven or eight warm months of the year; that the site should be sufficiently roomy, should afford space for some European settlement, and should possess such amenities in itself and in the neighbourhood as might be expected to attract settlers, schools, &c.; and finally, that it should be within reach of the influences of the public opinion of a great European and civilised native community engaged in practical business. If right in respect to these obligatory conditions, the author thought the inquiry might be narrowed very much. It might be assumed that no place within fifty miles of the sea will answer the purpose. If, again, it be admitted that it is necessary to be in easy communication with, and to be within the immediate influence of one of the present great centres of Indian business and civilisation, the question is much farther narrowed, and becomes simply this—is there within a few hours' journey of Calcutta or Bombay a place suited by climate and position for the new capital? We know that there is no such place near Calcutta; the alternative, therefore, is whether any such suitable place is to be found near Bombay. With reference to the climate, the author thought Calcutta a dangerous place for new arrivals, but perhaps, on the whole, not more trying to acclimated sedentary residents than would be an up-country station. The present capitals of the different provinces are insufficiently good instances of the climate of the plains and of the coast, and no other places similarly situated are likely to be chosen to supersede them. With the exception that the cold weather is inferior to that of Northern India, the Deccan climate is clearly vastly superior to anything known in the plains. That this is the case is clearly shown in the military statistics, the average annual mortality of European troops at these stations being between seventeen and eighteen per thousand. In point of population and trade Bombay is now little if at all inferior to Calcutta, and in point of available wealth, that is ready money, it is probably superior.
The European community is, however, neither so large, so varied, nor so advanced in the arts of material comforts. On the other hand, the author considered the native community to be a population among or near whom the seat of Government would be most advantageously located. Taking all matters into consideration, he proposed Nassick, on the plain of the Upper Godavery, and now the head-quarters of the civil establishments, as the most suitable site.

The Great Indian Peninsula Railway, which runs at an elevation of 2,000 feet, passes within five miles; and the place is by rail, if anything, nearer to Bombay than Poonah, being 116 miles. The town contains 30,000 inhabitants, and the surrounding country is fertile and well watered. A long discussion followed, opened by Mr. W. J. Hamilton, one of the directors of the Indian Peninsula Railway. Sir Robert Montgomery testified to the ability of Mr. Campbell, but could not agree with his conclusions as to the site. He viewed Calcutta as having an advantageous position for the Governor-general to exercise control over Pegu, Penang, and China. Sir Charles Trevelyan commented on the subject at great length, and argued very pertinently for some actually central situation beyond the influences of any of the particular local governments into which India is subdivided. Sir Erskine Perry and Sir Henry Rawlinson also spoke, the latter urging the new postal arrangements with Bombay as an additional reason for favouring the predilections of the author of the paper for that purpose.

TROOPS ON LONG VOYAGES.—In the year 1859 Captain Sir W. Hamilton, of the Bengal Artillery, returning to England round the Cape of Good Hope in command of discharged troops, was impressed with the evils arising from the men being crowded together for months without the means of suitable employment or recreation; and, in anticipation of returning to India in command of artillery recruits, he submitted to the Commander-in-Chief a scheme for providing for them not only a school, but also instruction in such trades as tailoring and shoemaking, and likewise reading and games of various kinds. The first experiment was made in July, 1862, when Sir W. Hamilton proceeded to India with a detachment of artillery; but owing to some error in the shipping department the school materials and games alone were placed on board, and the school proved powerless to attract more than a portion of the detachment. At the Cape he procured further supplies; and on sailing again he issued an order that all men who did not attend school for an hour and a half in the morning and a like time in the afternoon would be enrolled for drill on deck, men who chose to work at trades for six hours a day being excused. This proved very successful; the school was well attended, and the gymnastic bar was voluntarily used throughout the day. Sir W. Hamilton's report led to the adoption of a code of regulations in 1865; and the first experiment under these instructions was made in that year by the 49th Regiment, which proceeded to Bombay, the head-quarters, under Major Gosling, in the transport Countess Russell, with detachments in the ships Melbourne and Michael Scott, under Major Fitzgerald and Captain Corban. No gymnastic apparatus was supplied to any of these ships; such substitutes as could be contrived had to be adopted. These were found to afford a very popular amusement, greatly beneficial to health and muscular development. School was well attended, and the alternative of compulsory parades was found unnecessary. On board the Michael Scott short lectures, not exceeding twenty minutes, were delivered by the medical officer. The subjects were well selected, referring principally to voyages, the phenomena of the ocean, and Indian manners and architecture; and the lectures excited great interest, and had a crowded attendance. Concerts, given periodically, were also very popular, and the quarter-deck would be densely crowded with men, women, and children nearly an hour before the performance commenced. On evenings when there was neither a lecture nor a concert there was dancing on the quarter-deck. For the sake of variety, the soldiers and sailors united in getting up performances in the "Christy Minstrel" style, and, after a good deal of practice, formed an admirable troupe. These entertainments included the banjo, tambourine, bones, fife, and drum, varied with negro songs and dances, melodies, and conundrums, and they gave a most enjoyable hour's amusement once a-week. Captain Corban's energy and tact were rewarded with eminent success. The monotony of the voyage was relieved; the troops were very healthy, their conduct was most exemplary, and not a single case of insubordination occurred. Later in the same year the 26th Cameronians sailed for Bombay, also without gymnastic apparatus being embarked. The school was very successful; it was well attended voluntarily. The schoolmaster managed the distribution of a supply of games, which were in great request, and of much value in promoting the amusement and cheerfulness of the troops. The schoolmaster likewise gave frequent readings from popular works, and lectures on subjects of interest, and every day he pointed out on a chart the position of the ship, a proceeding which gave much satisfaction, and caused great excitement at noon. In the same year the 41st Welsh Regiment proceeded to Calcutta again without gymnastic apparatus being supplied. The commanding officer made no special report, but it appears that on board the Albert Victor, which carried a detachment of the regiment, the deficiency of gymnastic apparatus was in a great degree remedied by temporary arrangements, and the success of the school was very satisfactory; fifty-six men learned to write a little, and many who had come on board totally ignorant showed decided progress. The officer commanding the 26th reports that he had a lending library of 100 books; books of fiction were the most popular, but books referring to Hindustan and the Hindoos were in much request. Hardly one of the men could be induced to take out any work on the Hindustani language; but the only book not issued at all in the whole voyage was "Advice to the British Soldier," by a quartermaster-sergeant. The Council of Military Education, in their report just issued, bring down the cases no later; but here is enough to show how much may be done to convert a long voyage, once a fertile cause of demoralisation to the soldier, into an occasion of actual improvement, physical and educational.—Army and Navy Gazette.

JUSTICE TO INDIAN MEDICAL OFFICERS.—The authorities are never weary of complaining of the discontent and grumbling of the medical servants of the State. Flog high or low, the doctors will not be satisfied. From time to time the press in this country has endeavoured to explain the reason why; but somehow the authorities cannot be made to see it. However, by a little perseverance, "line upon line, precept upon precept," we may in time be more successful. By way of contribution to the store of facts already on record, we submit the following for the consideration of Lord Cranborne and his Council. We derive our information from a careful perusal of official documents bearing on the subject, without which, we assure our readers, we could not have believed it possible that any Government could have acted as we are about to describe:—Two years ago or thereabouts, Sir Charles Wood promulgated in this country the new scale of pay for medical officers of the Indian service. Great pains were taken by the authorities of the India-office to make the new scheme generally known. We were not, however, told that, by an order sent out at the same time, the new scale was only, in the first instance, to apply to officers doing military duty—that is, attached to regiments; the Government of India being instructed to prepare a scheme of pay for medical officers in civil employ. The Government of India consumed two years in hatching the new scheme, the civil surgeons in the meantime drawing a scale of pay inferior to their brethren doing military duty. We except the few fortunate holders of certain highly-paid civil appointments. But this was not all. In Bengal the Government of India at once compelled the medical officers in civil employ to contribute to the Military Fund, as if they were in the enjoyment of the increased rate of pay. That is to say, an officer whose relative rank was that of lieutenant, and whose "pay proper" corresponded with that rank, was mulcted in the subscription of a captain; one whose position and emoluments corresponded with those of captain had to pay as a major; a major as a lieutenant-colonel. When at last the pay of civil and military staff was equalised, the officers who had suffered in this way memorialised the Government of India to have their arrears of pay made good, or to be credited with the overcharge to the Military Fund. Both requests have been flatly refused. This, we add for the information of the Secretary of India, in whose name this flagrant injustice was perpetrated, is one of many reasons why the medical officers of the State "grumble and are dissatisfied," and why so many young medical men hesitate to commit their fortunes to the keeping of those who do not scruple to treat them in this faithless manner. We do not suppose that so just a man as Lord Cranborne is known to be would act as we have shown has been done in his name, if the facts were fairly placed before him. But the truth is, questions of this kind are either settled by subordinates, who use, according to the well-known routine in all public departments, the name of the Minister at the head of it; or the facts are so carelessly drawn up, that the chief is misled into a decision such as the one we have just exposed. The result in either case is gross injustice and great injury to individuals first, and to the public service in the long run.—British Medical Journal.

INDIAN CARRYING COMPANY (LIMITED).—The annual ordinary general meeting of this company has been held at the offices of the company, South-street, Finsbury-square, Sir Macdonald Stephenson in the chair. The report was taken as read. The chairman, in moving its adoption, said that in common with almost every other industrial enterprise the Indian Carrying Company had suffered, but only to the extent of a reduction of dividend to 3 per cent. instead of the 6 per cent. which had previously been declared without interruption. The reduction was caused by the heavy losses in the Bombay agency. A recurrence of disaster in that presidency was, however, not apprehended, and the profits from the other presidencies were very gratifying. Mr. J. Walker seconded the adoption of the report. The chairman, in reply to questions, said the company had experienced such losses in Bombay that they could not think at present of re-opening trade there, but as it was likely the port of Bombay would become the chief in India, the interest was retained, and the business could be resumed at any moment. The report was unanimously adopted, and Mr. S. D. Hadow and Mr. J. Walker were re-elected directors, and Mr. J. E. Colman and Mr. G. Enstrom auditors.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION OF INDIA AND THE EAST.—In consequence of the receipt of telegraphic advice of remittances from Bombay, the official liquidator of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East will at once apply to the Court of Chancery to be allowed to increase the proposed first dividend from 6s. 8d. to 10s. in the pound, as originally intended. Dividend notices have been forwarded to creditors by the official liquidator for the first payment of 10s. in the pound, payable on the 19th, 20th, and 21st of February. Creditors of £50 and under are to be paid in full on the 13th February next.

9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE,

Sole Inventor and exclusive Patentee of Artificial Teeth on a soft, elastic, chemically-prepared india-rubber gum. No wires or unsightly fastenings are required; they are more natural, durable, and comfortable than any yet introduced, and are about the specific gravity of cork, thus combining lightness and durability beyond any yet introduced. They are self-adhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within the reach of all.

Consultations free.

. Observe. No connection with any one of the same name.

EPHRAIM MOSELY on the TEETH fully explains his system and exclusive patent. Free on application.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. It is no secret that of late local anesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

"To none is the public more indebted than to Mr. Day."—Illustrated News, page 826, June 9.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

"Mineralised India-Rubber.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection very improbable, and is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system must prove invaluable."—Globe, May 31, 1866.

"A vast amount of ingenuity has been displayed, not only in the formation of the artificial teeth themselves, but in the method or manner of fixing them."—Morning Advertiser, May 26, 1866.

"Mr. Day has not only succeeded in adding important items to the science of dentistry, but has reduced the operation of painless 'anesthesia' to a matter of form."—Sunday Times, May 27, 1866.

These and every description of Teeth, combining the latest inventions and improvements in dental mechanism, may be procured from Mr. DAY, Dentist (late Principal Assistant to Mr. Estlin, of 8, Grosvenor-street, W.), 291, Regent-street (three doors from the Polytechnic).

NEW ENGLISH BALLADS and NEW PIANO MUSIC.

Those interested in harmony ought to obtain, which they can gratuitously, the elaborate catalogue of Messrs. Robert Cocks and Co., the well-known Music Publishers of New Burlington-street. Many of the pieces issued by this eminent firm have attained deserved celebrity. Amongst the popular favourites may be mentioned the 'Helena Waltz,' bearing the name of Mr. Fred. Godfrey. For the pianoforte nothing could be more suitable than Brinley Richards's 'Maid of Judah' and 'Viva la Reine'—a lively and spirited 'galop de concert.' Amongst the sentimental ballads, by Mr. W. T. Wrighton, the English ballad composer, and songs, we must particularly notice 'A wearied dove,' very appropriately dedicated to the queen of benevolence, Miss Burdett Coutts; 'They tell me I am quite forgot,' 'Grieve not for me,' &c. We consider the musical public are greatly indebted to Messrs Cocks, and we should advise our readers, at home and abroad, to make application forthwith for a copy of their catalogue.—Vide the British Mail.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for if taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagious or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Covent-street London, W.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

EFFECT OF COLD.—Numerous and severe are the diseases resulting from exposure to low temperature. Skin, muscles, lungs, and circulation become disordered and serious diseases succeed, unless the derangement receive timely attention. Holloway's soothing Ointment, well rubbed on the affected parts, is an instantaneous remedy. When the lungs or heart have an irregular action the Ointment must be well rubbed upon the chest, and assisted in its curative efforts by Holloway's Pills. These noble medicaments mutually assist each other. All disorders springing from neglected colds, chills, wet, or other atmospheric vicissitudes are thus safely and speedily checked in their course, and freed from pain and danger by Holloway's preparations.

Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, so general in India, Captain Clements of the ship Marseilles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES and COSTUMES of the PEOPLE of INDIA

BY J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial 4to, morocco back, cloth, with numerous Coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

"If the manufacturer studies this book carefully he may add thousands a year to his profits, and there are not five books in the world of which that could be said. Altogether this book is thoroughly creditable to Dr. Forbes Watson's industry and acumen, and to the liberality of the India-office."—Spectator, Jan. 5, 1867.

"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author, Dr. J. Forbes Watson, is conclusive evidence of his being the right man in the right place. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce. We ought to state that the Secretary of State for India not only deserves the highest praise for having had this work prepared and distributed, but likewise for having allowed a publisher to use the type and photographic plates so as to be able to produce a certain number of copies for sale. In no other way could copies of this unique and costly volume have been offered to the public at a reasonable price."—Morning Post, Jan. 3, 1867.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with the sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshahur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review, May 15.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman, March 17.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner, September 15.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay mail brings our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 5th and Bombay to the 12th of January. We have also received a copy of the Madras Times of the 5th, by the French steamer.

The last mail brought news of a sad accident at Madras; by the present mail we receive accounts of a still greater disaster at Calcutta, by which some twenty lives appear to be sacrificed. It seems that there was a fancy fair at Howrah, to celebrate New Year's Day, and that one of the river steamers, the Calcutta, after leaving the gardens at five P.M., on her passage up the river (having gone some three or four hundred yards out of her way), struck upon the wreck of the Satellite, which was sunk during the cyclone of 1864.

The engine-room immediately began to fill with water, and it was evident the vessel could float only for a short time longer. The panic which seized upon the passengers baffles description, and, according to current accounts, the terror which the danger inspired caused the loss of life which followed. The native passengers, losing all self-control, shrieked for boats; the European ladies, who were returning home after their day's enjoyment, "imagined themselves face to face with death," and joined in the terrible cry; and the frantic fears of everybody exceeded all bounds. When the vessel struck it was nearly dark, and a writer describing the scene says that the bitter cries of alarm from the passengers "went echoing over the river through 'the fast deepening darkness, startling the crews of the neighbouring vessels and tugs.'" The steamer was instantly surrounded by native boats and the boats of neighbouring vessels. Ladies threw themselves into the water to reach the boats, and gentlemen tore up chairs, benches, &c., by which to float ashore. It is stated that a river steamer, which was two or three hundred yards distant when the accident occurred, went to the rescue, and that the rush to get on board of it was so tremendous that many jumped through her awning and the captain was obliged to sheer off a little.

The question remains—Why was the steamer so far out of its course? We regret to state that the evidence which is being taken at the inquest goes to show that the captain was intoxicated, and this seems to be popularly assigned as the cause of the accident, though some of the witnesses assert their belief that the captain was quite sober. If he was, he has to account for steering the vessel so far out of its course and right over a danger which was indicated by a conspicuous signal. It remains also, as the Bombay Gazette remarks, a remarkable tribute to the foresight and prudence of an Indian Government that an old sunken hulk has been allowed to block up the river in the very line of traffic for upwards of a couple of years.

A Calcutta paper says:—"The news burst upon the city last evening like a thunder-clap. New Year parties were broken up, and everyone hastened to the river-side to seek a friend, or hear if possible the fate of wife or child, mother or brother, sister or husband. Far into the night sorrowing and anxious groups moved restlessly about from ghat to ghat, in the vain hope of hearing what they half feared to hear, and scarcely had the morning dawned ere the scene of the wreck was crowded with the boats of those in search of the missing, whilst many waited on the bank for the tidings which have proved so sorrowful."

H.R.H. the Duc d'Alençon is in Bengal, where he arrived recently from Ceylon.

The Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum for the last half-year, and increased its reserve fund to £200,000.

General Sir Neville Chamberlain is said to be likely to succeed Colonel Durand in the military membership of the Supreme Court.

A raid has been committed by one tribe on another in the hills beyond the Luckimpore British frontier; some children were killed, but the assailants were afterwards repulsed.

We are to receive a visit, it appears, from the young Maharajah of Bhurtpore, who is to travel under the care of the Political Agent, Captain Walter. The Maharajah is a very intelligent youth, and has received an excellent English education, for which he has mainly to thank Colonel Nixon, who, while Agent at the Court, took great pains with his development.

The Delhi Railway was to be opened up to the terminus on the 1st of January.

The progress of Russia in Central Asia seems to have alarmed the King of Bokhara, as well as a certain excitable portion of the British public. A special messenger from Bokhara was said to have arrived, a few weeks ago, in the camp of the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, on his way to Calcutta, to solicit an interview with the Viceroy. It is believed that this envoy will be received with all due consideration, as we have no doubt his position and personal character merit; but whether Sir John Lawrence will listen to the proposals he has to offer is quite another matter, and is considered in the last degree unlikely. The latest "authentic intelligence" from Russian Turkestan is to the effect that "after the capture of Oratippa the Russians advanced to Juzak, the scene of General Tcherniayeff's discomfiture last February. They found the city freshly fortified, and defended by the Ameer's best troops. After a five days' siege this, the last of the King of Bokhara's strongholds in the valley of the Jaxartes, was taken by storm on the 30th October. Most of the besieged were killed or taken prisoners; few escaped. The Russian trophies were 26 flags, 53 guns, and a quantity of valuable booty; their loss 100 men, including 4 officers wounded. Shortly afterwards the King of Bokhara is said to have implored peace; and General Kryzhanovski, the Governor-general of Orenburg, considering the King sufficiently chastised, returned to the headquarters of his government, and on the 26th of November telegraphed to St. Petersburg as follows:—"The province of Turkestan is perfectly quiet. The war with Bokhara, as far as we are concerned, is over—I hope for long—if only the Ameer will not himself renew it. Amicable relations are established with Kokand. Trade is everywhere re-opened. A great many caravans are passing from Bokhara and back. The troops ordered temporarily to the province of Turkestan from Western Siberia are returning to their former quarters." It will be observed that this news indicates an aggressive policy on the part of the Russians. This account, the Times of India considers, is probably the corrected version of a monstrous engagement reported some three months ago.

Colonel Crawford Chamberlain has been appointed successor to Colonel Daly as Political Agent in Western Malwa.

Captain Fain Brooke, H.M.'s 41st Regiment, has succeeded Major Vicars as aide-de-camp to H.E. the Viceroy.

Government, it is said, has obtained reliable information of the death of Feroze Shah, the only great Delhi rebel who escaped punishment in 1857. After intriguing vainly against the British Government both in Arabia and Central Asia, he became a pensioner at the Court of the Ameer of Bokhara, who allowed him ten tungas or Rs. 4 a day. He died of fever at Bokhara on 23rd August last, and was buried in the garden of Huzrut Imaum. This information was verified by our agents on the spot. Would that we had equally satisfactory intelligence as to the end of the Nana, to whom only Feroze Shah was second in infamy.

The Madras news is mainly confined to the appointment of a successor to the lamented Colonel Temple, in the office of President of the Municipal Commission. The officer selected is a brother to the late Governor of the Presidency, Sir William Denison, and the Madras Times declares this to be his only qualification.

It was stated in Bombay that the first extra mail steamer would leave on the 19th of January; also that the Peninsular and Oriental Company intend issuing return tickets to Europe and back, during the summer, for the accommodation of persons desirous of visiting the Paris Exhibition. Nothing more is said about the Government entering into the arrangements of the P. and O. by giving special leave!

Sir Robert Napier was on a tour of inspection in Scinde, whence Sir Bartle Frere had just returned from a course of "starring." Sir Bartle made a very excellent speech at a Convocation of the Bombay University. We give the substance elsewhere.

The Public Works Loan had been subscribed for, the sum tendered being £884,450, or £284,450 more than required. The average rate of premium for the three issues was £101. 2s. 6d.

It is understood that Government intend to take over charge of the Paper Currency Department from the Bank of Bombay after the expiration of the present month.

The state of the public health continued to be somewhat unsatisfactory, but had improved slightly. The weather was still cool and pleasant.

The latest advices from Aden stated that Colonel Merewether, Political Resident, left in the Victoria for Massowah on the 28th ultimo with the presents and European mechanics from England; but it was understood that they were only to be landed on condition that all the prisoners were to be given up by the Emperor Theodorus.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta Mail, which is due in London on Monday next.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THURSDAY, February 7, 1867.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

INDIA has its usual paragraph in the Royal Speech. The allusion this time is naturally to the famine. Her Majesty says:—"I have heard with deep sorrow that the calamity of famine has pressed heavily on my subjects in some parts of India. Instructions were issued to my Government in that country to make the utmost exertions to mitigate the distress which prevailed during the autumn of last year. The blessing of an abundant harvest has since that time materially improved the condition of the suffering districts."

The only other allusion to this topic was made by Mr. De Grey, the mover of the Address in the House of Commons. That gentleman said:—"One of those dreadful panics which seems to occur periodically in India, has during the past year attacked part of the Bengal and Madras presidencies, and great difficulty was experienced in conveying the necessary relief to the suffering districts; and had it not been for the blessings of an abundant harvest, it would have been impossible to calculate the extent of the lamentable circumstances that must have ensued. There is no doubt that in India there is a great want of public works of improvement, which are calculated to develop the resources of the country, and when there is improved communication by means of railways and canals, the produce which is abundant in some parts of the country will be more easily conveyed to those less fortunate districts, where the necessity for them exists. Nor does the primary cause seem to me altogether beyond our control. In India the streams and rivers are very numerous, and there are many portions of it where, cultivation being only prevented by the prevalence of drought, much may be done to render these lands fertile by means of irrigation, and if steps are taken in time, we may protect the country against the recurrence of such a calamity."

We much mistake, however, if the subject be not brought prominently before the House. Already Mr. Leslie has given notice of a question with regard to it, which he is to put to Lord Cranborne to-night.

MR. JOHNSON IN KHOTAN.

MR. JOHNSON, of the Trigonometrical Survey, whose visit to Khotan has been already noticed in these columns, has addressed a very interesting letter to Lieut.-colonel Walter, the Superintendent of the Survey, at Dehra Doon, conveying information well worth the attention of the Government.

On the night of his arrival at Sanju, Mr. Johnson tells us, he was visited by a man calling himself Gaphoor, and professing to be a German Jew. He declared that he was an agent of the Russian Government, and that a warrant in his possession—which Mr. Johnson saw but was not allowed to handle—authorised him to engage other agents for the same service. He added a distinct proposition to employ Mr. Johnson in such a capacity, regarding him as a qualified person to furnish the authorities at St. Petersburg with the information they needed regarding the country south of Yarkand and the Khotan Boundary. He offered any salary that Mr. Johnson might please to name, with the additional inducement of drawing it in India, where Russian agents were forthcoming for the purpose. He appears to have been very communicative about the movements of the Russian forces, stating freely that his Government had collected an army of 200,000 men at Ak Musid and at Vernoe, in addition to that engaged against Khokan and Bokhara, with the object of conquering the whole of the provinces of Central Asia, and that the Emperor would have carried out his schemes for conquest before but for the Khan Badsha having applied to the British Government for aid, which, if refused, he said, would lead to the over-running of those countries by the Russian troops. His Government, he added, would never allow those countries to remain without rulers, the present state of things being a serious injury to Russian trade. The troops, it was also declared, had taken two of the cities of Illi, whence they intended sending forces against the Kilmak Tartars. These accounts of the Russian movements were also confirmed by the statements of other persons.

With regard to the person commanding the Khan of Khotan's Infantry, whom Mr. Johnson had mentioned in a previous report as having some points of resemblance to the Nana, the writer now declares his strong impression that he is really the man. He calls himself Mohamed Ali, but is said to be a Hindoo, having assumed a Mahomedan name, as no Hindoos are allowed to remain in the country. He is of brown complexion, appearing about fifty years, and some five feet eight inches in height. He is well built, with a broad chest. His hair is partially grey, he is pock-marked, and he has a defect in the left eye, which is nearly closed. His features are of a broad cast, and his teeth are partially decayed. Somebody who saw him at prayer told Mr. Johnson that he had lost one of his small toes. Mr. Johnson noticed upon one occasion that he wore his turban tied like a Mahratta. He was very mysterious as to his antecedents, and could be induced to say no more than this—that he had been for some years in India, and had seen a great deal of Europeans, with whom he had been on friendly terms. This statement seems confirmed by the fact that he understands and speaks English; and another suspicious point is his intimate acquaintance with Hindustanee, of which he affects ignorance when any of the Khotan people are about. He is apparently in affluent circumstances, and feeds, daily, some 400 relatives of the sepoys under his command. He has three followers, who arrived at Khotan in his company, and who are equally mysterious with their master. It is worthy of note that, although Mahomed Ali commands the Infantry, he cannot put them through any manœuvres and seems to know nothing of military tactics. He is said, however, to have great influence over them, and this is apparently his recommendation with the Khan.

These facts are, as we have said, well worthy the attention of Government; not with a view to interference—for which we could find no justification—but in order that we may be fully informed of the extent of Russian progress towards our frontier. Mr. Johnson, it should be remembered, is no amateur travelling gentleman collecting literary or political material, and bent upon meeting "sensational" discoveries half way, but a scientific man, engaged upon an official investigation, and communicating his discoveries in official form. We have, therefore, some kind of guarantee that he is not likely to be led away by idle tales. At the same time it is more than probable that the Russian agent who offered him the engagement gave a too flattering account of his master's resources in the way of troops (a reserve force of 200,000 men is too much to credit); while, as regards the man supposed to be the Nana, there is the same difficulty in this as in former cases. Except in respect to stature and general characteristics which he shares with thousands of his countrymen, the murderer of Cawnpore must, if alive, have changed immensely during the ten years that he has been hiding away, and most certainly he would not allow any strong points of resemblance to be displayed in such dangerous company as that of Mr. Johnson. The last person apprehended on suspicion of being the criminal in question seems to have been denounced on the principle of making such a liberal allowance for the change worked by time as to render entire dissimilarity a case against him. And really, under all circumstances, it is no easy task to draw the line.

A COURAGEOUS ACT.—A notorious burglar, named Izzut Khan (a Pathan), was being escorted by a sergeant and a constable of the Delhi police towards Benares. The party travelled by rail, and as Izzut Khan had been conviction of several offences, and had on a former occasion escaped from custody, the heaviest irons procurable were placed on him. Whilst the train was at speed, Izzut Khan seized a favourable opportunity and jumped out of the window of the railway carriage, the constable, however, immediately, at the risk of his life, followed suit and jumped out too, arresting the prisoner before he had time to make off. We hear the man has been promoted for this act of daring. Had the East Indian Railway prison vans on the model of those in use on the Punjab line such an attempt to escape would have been impossible. Ordinary carriages, filled as they are with other passengers, afford great facilities for escapes, and make it possible for the friends of a prisoner to accompany him and render him material assistance.

BENGAL.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN THE HOOGLHY.

On New Year's-day a very calamitous accident took place, by which at least twenty Europeans and several natives lost their lives in the Hooghly. On the same day news reached Calcutta of the loss of four lives during a boating trip in the Adyar at Madras. After the annual fancy fair in the Botanical Gardens, opposite Garden Reach, the East India Company ferry steamer Calcutta, commanded by Captain Taylor, conveyed a crowd of passengers from the gardens. She is allowed to carry six hundred, but all our informants, eyewitnesses of and sufferers from the accident, declare that nearly a thousand were on board. The number of Europeans and East Indians was very large. She left the gardens for Armenian Ghaut at 5.10 P.M., and first discharged several passengers at the Ghaut opposite. On reaching a point nearly in the middle of the Hooghly, more than half a mile broad, and just opposite the Public Library, the crowded steamer ran upon the wreck of the tug steamer Satellite, which was not properly blown up by Lieutenant Wallace after the cyclone. The wreck is marked off by a buoy, which the captain ought to have avoided. As the water rushed into the machinery and the passengers became aware of what had happened, a scene ensued which baffles description. The captain had no command, and many of the passengers began to utter the most piercing cries for help and to offer prayer, believing that their last hour was come. Ladies stripped themselves of their outer garments, ready for the worst, children cried piteously, and even men lost all presence of mind. The dusk, for it was close on six o'clock, added to a panic which the slightest assumption of command by any resolute person on board would have sufficed to still. The steamer did not sink far, for next morning her lower decks were high and dry at low water. The piercing cries of the passengers soon brought boats alongside from the neighbouring vessels, and the steamer Olga, Captain F. Thomas, which had passed the Calcutta just before the accident, soon turned to her assistance. The other railway steamer Howrah, learning what had occurred about two hundred yards below the Howrah terminus, sailed to assist, but by some mischance also ran on the sunken wreck and became useless. In little more than an hour, however, the hundreds of passengers had left the Calcutta. The accidents which occurred seem to have been due entirely to panic. The captain's share of the blame must be assigned by the coroner's jury which sat yesterday evening. The inquest was held on the body of Mr. J. Simeon, a lawyer's clerk. Of the two witnesses examined one deposed "that in his opinion the captain was drunk—had noticed that his speech was incoherent—saw nothing of him after the vessel struck." The other "was near the captain, and from all he could see was of opinion that he was sober. When abreast of Fort Point the vessel was steered over to the Howrah side; he wondered at this, but thought that it was to land some passengers; considered it certainly an error of the captain to be in such shoal water, where it was known that several wrecks had taken place during the late cyclone." The captain was present, in custody. Mr. Woodroffe, barrister, attended to watch the case on his behalf.

We have failed to obtain from the police and railway authorities what may be regarded as a reliable list of the drowned. But the following names, partially taken from a narrative of the calamity promptly published yesterday by the Englishman, may be accepted as at least not beyond the truth. The following are missing :—

Mr. R. T. Harris, No. 3, Cooper's-lane.
Mr. R. J. Hay, No. 3, Cooper's-lane.
Mrs. Sophia Robertson, No. 13, Sempatollah.

Two Misses George, 21, Entally.
Mr. J. Simeon (body recovered).
Mrs. Dyas, unknown.
Mrs. Stewart, Royd-street.
Mr. and Mrs. Oman, unknown.
Mr. George Smith, Merchant's Clerk, Ballygunge.
Mr. Godfrey, E.I. Railway Clerk.
Mrs. Dyer, Post-office.
Miss Taylor, do.
Mrs. Schragar, unknown.
Mr. Dugan, unknown, Engineer.
Abdul Rohman, Colootollah.
Ernest Mozzy and two boys and two girls.

None of the accounts say anything of the natives on board, but two of the subordinate establishment of this journal, one of whom saved himself by swimming, and the other in a boat, affirm that several native lives were lost, besides the one given in the above list. We ought to state that while the police report the above as missing the railway inspector estimates the loss of life at only six, and the number on board at the time of the accident at only five hundred. The railway report thus concludes :—"It is impossible to state to what degree Captain Taylor is responsible for this sad accident, but he is now under arrest, and his conduct will be thoroughly investigated. One thing, however, seems certain, that he took the steamer nearer the buoy than it was at all safe or prudent to do.—Friend of India."

From a supplementary account in the Delhi Gazette we take the following :—

Mrs. Brown, Dhurumtollah.
Mr. McGuire.
Mr. Graham.
Mrs. Heeley, senior.
Mrs. Heeley, junior.
Mrs. J. Templeton.

Baboo Denonauth Shaw, Mr. Fleming, Mrs. Schragar, and Mr. and Mrs. Oman, who were reported amongst the missing, made, we are glad to say, their appearance late in the afternoon.

Amongst the things found by the police were a pair of pantaloons, some crinolines, part of a silk skirt, some petticoats, a gold ring, a gold chain, a pair of gold spectacles, a pair of gold earrings, &c., &c. Some clothes which were marked were sent to their owners, and the rest were made over to the Malkhana.

All day drags were employed without effect on the Seepore Sand; the only body yet recovered appears to be that of Mr. Simeon. The reports that the body of a lady had been found at Armenian Ghat, and that of a child opposite the Custom House, turned out to be unfounded.

In conclusion, we have to note that at high water the hurricane deck only was out of water, and that the Calcutta lies straight up and down the stream,—why was no attempt made to turn her towards the Howrah Bank?

From another account we gather that Mr. Dyas, reported as one of the sufferers, turned out to be in safety. It is probable that the person referred to is not Mr. but Mrs. Dyas, mentioned above.

HOW TO ANSWER THE AMBASSADOR FROM BOKHARA.

The Royal Geographical Society's soirees have generally been looked upon as outlets for the after-dinner enthusiasm of sundry elderly gentlemen, who meet together to indulge in a little friendly discourse on pleasant topics, and in a fair amount of mutual compliment. But in one instance at all events these soirees have been productive of great practical benefit to the country at large, as well as to the cause of civilisation. Sir H. Rawlinson, in bringing to the prominent notice it deserves, Mr. Johnson's report of his visit to Khoten, has made the public in England alive to the fact that our interests in Central Asia might be materially advanced. Sir John Lawrence and Sir Henry Rawlinson may be looked upon as the two extremes of the small but increasing party of thinkers on the Central Asian question. The Viceroy will not stir hand or foot beyond the frontier, and is very chary of spending a rupee within our territory, in order to open out trade with the countries on the north of the Himalayas. Sir H. Rawlinson, on the other side, would wish to see Russian and English Consuls established in the principal cities of Central Asia, and good feeling and honourable emulation excited between the two European Powers. The responsibility of failure rests with the Viceroy, and he must well remember the reply of Dost Mahomed when, as Chief Commissioner of the Punjab, he pressed the old Ameer to agree to the presence of an English political agent in Cabul in 1856—"Take back your money (we were paying the Affghans a lac a month), for I could not guarantee his life an hour."

We certainly do not wish another Bhootan or Abyssinian business. But almost all the conditions of the case have changed of late in favour of a commercial agent in Bokhara. The time, we fear, is far distant when our Consuls will be able to send daily quotations from the Bokhara market; now that attention is being attracted to the subject, some progress may be made. Formerly the very name of Bokhara caused Englishmen to shudder, and to think of going there would have been absolute madness. But the advance of the Russians, and the dread of their approach, which pervades every country in Central Asia, have completely altered the case. An ambassador is now on his way to the Viceroy, with a letter to the Queen of England asking for our friendship. He states that the Russians have shut the Bokhara merchants out of Nizni Novogorod, and have confiscated a quantity of property belonging to their traders in Orenburg. Thus they are driven to look elsewhere for the supply of their market, and are anxious to open out commercial relations with us. His chief wish of course is that we should espouse his master's cause and send a well equipped army to drive the Russians back to the other side of the Syr-Daria. But this is out of the question, and he knows it, and therefore he desires to gain the second and not less important point, and establish trading relations on a firm basis. The ambassador describes the road between Bokhara and Candahar as free from all obstacle to caravans, and however much the Affghan Sirdars may quarrel amongst themselves, they are not likely to molest caravans that may pass to and fro between Bokhara and Kurrachee. Afzul Khan is not only a friend of the Bokhara Ameer, but has offered to supply 25,000 men to help him against the Russians, and according to the envoy's statement, the Affghans are now ready to combine against the common enemy which threatens them from Russia. Be this as it may, we apprehend that it would cost the Government of India very little money, and involve them in no evil consequences, if they deputed an embassy to Bokhara to open out commercial relations with that country. If we could once do so, and cause a flow of English merchandise to pass from Kurrachee, through Sukkur, Candahar and Balkh, we might command the whole of the market in that part of the world. Our trade should be protected by a consul stationed at Bokhara, and the fact of the Russians having possession of that country would only tend to the security of our relations there. In any case, we are bound not to send the ambassador back to his country empty handed. A return embassy ought to be sent with him, and every effort be made to push our trade into the countries south of the Syr-Daria and to those east of the Hindoo Koosh.

Yarkund and Khoten are themselves of comparatively small importance, but they are the gates to a large tract of country where our goods might penetrate, with a prospect of competing successfully with Russian merchandise in the bazaars of Ili and Mongolia. Yarkund and Khoten may be approached by three routes. The western route, by the Swat and Chitral valleys, has been described by Colonel Gardiner and Major James as the most direct, though perhaps the most difficult, and considering the hostility and variety of tribes who would have to be encountered and bought over, it would be unwise at present to offer such a temptation to their cupidity as would be given by the passage of a band of merchants through their borders. The most Eastern route is thus described by a writer in the Times:—"There is an old and really good road, with wood, water, and provisions at every station, and paved in the time of the Moghul Emperors, practicable for wheeled carriages throughout the year, and which leads through a pass in the Kuen-Lin chain, far to the east of Cashmere, straight down to the north-west provinces, and thus opens this vast region of Chinese Turkestan to British commerce in the safest and most desirable way." This road goes over the Niti Pass, and comes out into Rohilkund; but though it undoubtedly is the easiest and shortest way to the highlands north of the Himalayas, it brings us out into Chinese territory, all progress through which is jealously watched and prohibited. Traders from Hindostan are allowed to go as far as Rudokh, at a certain season of the year, but they must go by a particular line, at a particular time, and are not allowed to advance one step beyond; so that not much advantage is to be gained from the road being wooded and paved. Beyond Rudokh the road passes through wilds where wood and water are scarce, and thieves abound. The third, and at present only practicable, line from Yarkund and Khoten is through Ladakh, and here there is a choice of two routes, one over the Kara Korum Pass to Leh, and so down to Sreenugur, or direct to Lahoul and Rooloo. The other route skirts the Kuen-Lin range to the east, passing by Changehemoo, Panggong Lake, Pooga, cutting across an angle of Ladakh territory, and coming down by the Bara Lacha Pass to Lahoul and Rooloo. Another route bifurcates from the Panggong Lake through Spiti to Rampoor Bussahir, and comes down the Hindustan and Thibet road to Simla. But until our relations with China are improved, and we are allowed free access to Rudokh and Gartope, the Hindustan and Thibet road will remain useless.

For all practical purposes then at present we are reduced to two great outlets for our trade with Central Asia,—by Afghanistan to Bokhara, and by Ladakh to Khoten and Yarkund. The trade with Bokhara cannot be looked upon as insignificant, and properly fostered might be increased to any extent. That by Ladakh, to Yarkund and Khoten is at present small and by Lahoul and Rooloo has been well nigh smothered. The returns show however that Rs. 54,000 worth of goods passed over the road through Leh in the month of September and the Maharaja is doubtless as anxious to extend his trade as we are. But what we have to complain of is that in the desire to do so he has not adopted the principle of free trade to all, but has endeavoured to enrich himself at our expense. A writer in the Times takes up the cudgels in favour of the much abused Maharaja of Cashmere, and says he does not really oppose any obstacle to the prospect of trade thus opened. Undoubtedly he does not oppose trade that flows through his own channel, but we have ample proof that he has tried his utmost to stop up all other channels.

This is not a time for delay, but for action. If this opportunity be lost, it will be lost for ever. Once let the Bokhariots feel the disgust natural on the disappointment of their hopes, and once let the Russians have complete command of the market, and the trade with Central Asia will pass out of our hands altogether.

LATEST FROM RUSSIAN TURKESTAN.

On going to press we received the following important authentic intelligence:—

After the capture of Oratippa, the Russians advanced to Juzak, the scene of General Tcherniayeff's discomfiture last February. They found the city freshly fortified, and defended by the Ameer's best troops. After a five days' siege, this, the last of the King of Bokhara's strongholds in the valley of the Jaxartes, was taken by storm on the 30th October. Most of the besieged were killed or taken prisoners; few escaped. The Russian trophies were 26 flags, 53 guns, and a quantity of valuable booty; their loss 100 men, including 4 officers wounded. Shortly afterwards the King of Bokhara implored peace, and General Kryjanovski, the Governor-General of Orenburg, considering the King sufficiently chastised, returned to the head-quarters of his Government, and on the 26th of November telegraphed to St. Petersburg as follows:—"The province of Turkestan is perfectly quiet. The war with Bokhara, as far as we are concerned, is over—I hope for long—if only the Ameer will not himself renew it. Amicable relations are established with Kokand. Trade is everywhere reopened. A great many caravans are passing from Bokhara and back. The troops ordered temporarily to the province of Turkestan from Western Siberia are returning to their former quarters."—Friend of India.

THE JUBBULPORE EXHIBITION.

The correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, in his account of the opening ceremony, says:—

When it was decided to hold an Exhibition at Jubbulpore, in the year of grace, 1866, the first idea was to use the railway station of the East Indian Railway in the same way as the terminal buildings of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway had been used for the Nagpore Exhibition. But after a month or two of expectation it seemed unlikely that the two railway companies would finish their squabbles about station room in time to have any buildings at all ready by Christmas 1866. The new central jail was just being built on the rising ground between the railway line and the ridges to the north of Jubbulpore. The design of the jail was on the system of radiating wards and a central tower. Four of the wards were far advanced, and the grounds round the site were ample and unoccupied.

The central committee of the Exhibition, presided over by Colonel Spence, decided to make the unfinished jail the scene of their operations. During the last four months the long radiating wards, with their iron-gated windows, have been metamorphosed into fairy corridors full of products, manufactures, and machinery, with flowering creepers trailed over the windows and doors. The massive central watch tower has been changed, as by some wizard's wand, into a fine circular hall, surmounted by a dome, and surrounded by a number of courts devoted to jewels, cutlery, and fabrics of special beauty or excellence. The irregular, uneven surface of the jail enclosure has been turned into a glassy lawn, with flower beds and rockeries. The whole Exhibition grounds are encircled by a fence bright with glittering banners. And, in fine, the site, the shape of the buildings, their bright colour, the creepers, the flowers, the banners, the green lawns, the well kept walks and drives, the crowds of gaily-dressed natives, the strings of elephants and carriages thronging the gates, all combine to make the Jubbulpore Exhibition a peculiar—perhaps even a striking—sight.

By twelve o'clock on Wednesday, the 26th, everything was in its place. The last flag had been run up the huge bamboo 90 feet high, which had been sent from the Bhundara jungles, the last picture had been hung, the last shawl draped. Ladies who were admitted to see the opening ceremony took their seats in the domed hall, while the choir who were to sing the opening anthem ranged themselves round the dais. Natives, and indeed all season-ticket holders, thronged the roads and drives inside the enclosure, but only a selected number of chiefs were accommodated inside the central hall. The chief commissioner, accompanied by a cortege of European officers and native chiefs, proceeded slowly towards the Exhibition. The procession was headed by cavalry and a military band. Mr. Temple entered the building and walked up to the dais while a salute was being fired. But it was observed that he was lame and that he looked ill. I afterwards learned that he was suffering from influenza and fever, and from a sprained ankle. The sprain perhaps accounted for the look of pain on his face; while influenza caused his voice to show signs of breaking down just at the end of his speech.

In his speech upon the subject in question Mr. Temple paid a well merited tribute to the gentlemen to whom the success of the Exhibition is mainly due:—"When you shall survey the spectacle on which you are about to enter, you will surely give a more than passing thought to those by whose labour this result has been brought about. When you look around at the building in which we are now standing, with its fair proportions and its lofty dome, you may remember that it was designed by Major Allen; was raised up by Mr. O'Donnell with strenuous exertions; and was embellished by Mr. Thomas, whose support to the general objects of the Exhibition has been unflinching. When you wander through these grounds, lately so rugged and desolate, now turned into gardens, when you see the management with which so many hundred head of live stock have been accommodated, and note the system and discipline which pervade the whole space so thronged with crowds, you will be able to appreciate the exertions of Colonel Moxon. And if the fountains and the aqueducts shall afford you satisfaction, then your thanks will be due to Colonel Cautley. When the minute classification of the endless varieties of raw products, whether obtained from cultivated fields, or from the wilds and forests, shall come under your inspection, the care and patience bestowed by Major Ranken and his sub-committee on this very important part of the show will doubtless be present to your recollection. If, as is probable, you shall consider that the machinery both inside the compartments and out of doors in the grounds, constitutes one of the finest and completest parts of the Exhibition, and has been displayed and worked to the best advantage, then your memories would fittingly revert to Major Allen, the president of that sub-committee; and to Mr. Wright, of the railway department, a gentleman whose services in the cause of the Exhibition have been conspicuous and unceasing."

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE BISHOP COTTON.—Lord Cranborne writes thus to the Government of India of the death of the late Bishop of Calcutta:—"The loss of a Prelate, who discharged the duties of his high office with such zeal, devotedness, charity, and sound judgment, cannot fail to be sensibly felt both by the Government with which he was connected, and by the diocese over which he presided; and I have to express my entire concurrence in the sentiments recorded by your Government in your public notification."

ANOTHER COURT-MARTIAL.—A general court-martial will shortly be convened at Meer Meer, for the trial of Dr. Quinlan, of H.M. 38th Regiment. The charges for which he is to be tried are drunkenness, and insubordination, in threatening to draw his sword on his commanding officer.—Lahore Chronicle.

DEPREDACTIONS COMMITTED BY WILD ANIMALS.—Some time ago a circular was addressed by the Government of Bengal to the commissioners of the different districts, calling for special reports relating to the depredations committed by wild animals, accompanied by returns of deaths caused by those animals during the last six years. Of the reports received that from the division of Bhaugulpore shows the large number of 1,150 persons having been killed by tigers during the last six years, while only the comparatively small number of 666 tigers have been killed during the same period. In the Assam division 733 human beings had been killed by tigers, and no less than 4,474 of those animals had been killed by hunters. In the report from the division of Cuttack, the commissioner in noticing the destructiveness of wild elephants in the Gurjats remarks that they roam about in herds of from 80 to 200, but that, notwithstanding, that a Government reward of Rs. 50 has been offered for the destruction of each elephant, the natives will not, and dare not, shoot them, and he suggests that this reward should be doubled, but thinks that it would be best to form kheddahs for their capture. The following communication on this subject has been addressed by the Under-Secretary to the Government of Bengal, to the Secretary to the Government of India:—"I am directed to submit, for the consideration and orders of the Government of India, a copy of the correspondence in regard to the organisation of kheddahs for the capture of wild elephants in the Gurjat Mehals of Cuttack, to the north of the Mahanuddy River. It seems to the Lieutenant-Governor a pity that, in view of the great demand for elephants both on the part of Government and of private persons, such large herds should be left to roam about untouched, when their capture would supply a pressing want and relieve the cultivators in the neighbourhood of their haunts from the loss to which their depredations at present occasion. "His honour would strongly urge on the Government of India the expediency of establishing active kheddah operations in Cuttack, and instructs me to suggest that decoy elephants might be obtained for this purpose in the Rungpore district."—Englishman.

BARBAROUS, IF TRUE.—The Bengalee, a native journal, charges a magistrate with flogging a boy to death; but we must decline to credit the tale without further confirmation. The circumstances of the alleged offence will be gathered from the following:—"With a brutality equalled only at Cawnpore, this child of eight years, who had stolen a solitary guava, and had screamed and bellowed for mercy whilst undergoing heavy flagellation, was, for this second offence of screaming and bellowing, ordered to receive thirty stripes! The bayonet thrust of the mutineer had at least this advantage, that it killed outright without prolonging the sufferings of the infants subjected to the appalling massacre. But the mercy of Mr. Humphrey made his victim die a hundred deaths before death more mercifully interposed and released him from torture and pain. Each crack of the rod must have frozen the life-blood of the poor little creature as he lay writhing and rolling upon the ground. Could Christian eyes behold this and not weep? A curse settles at the point of our pen, but we fling it out as insane and unmanly. We denounce the man who, placed in charge of a sub-division, perpetrated a monstrous murder. The child had fainted before the full thirty stripes could be completed. He was carried to his home, where he immediately died."

A UNIFORM SYSTEM OF COPPER CURRENCY.—The Secretary of State for India has, in a recent despatch, desired the local Government to introduce a uniform system of copper currency throughout India. He has also desired it to endeavour to induce the independent native chiefs to adopt the same system of copper currency now in force in the British territories in India, and to request them to send out sufficient quantity of copper annually or half-yearly to the British Mints at the several Presidencies for coinage to meet their requirements. Lord Cranborne has also called upon the Government of India to submit a return of the amount of copper coins struck annually in the several Mints in India, and has directed that, besides the half and quarter anna pieces, sufficient amount of copper pie should be coined at the Mints for the convenience of the trading community.—Indian Daily News and Bengal Hurkaru, Dec. 22.

DELHI, Dec. 25th.—The right wing 79th Cameron Highlanders marched into Delhi on the 20th, and relieved the 101st from the fort duties. The wing 101st, at least what was left of them (one company having gone two days before by train to Cawnpore), marched from this yesterday morning en route for Futtighur. The right wing 98th is still in camp and waiting for the head-quarters and wing from Meerut to join them before proceeding to Calcutta for embarkation. A large detachment of invalids and time-expired men came in on the 23rd, and were yesterday afternoon inspected by Colonel Christie, commanding. The Freemasons of Delhi, with their well-known liberality, give a ball and supper on the 27th instant.

RETIREMENT OF MR. KING.—We hear that Mr. Jeremiah King, Governor of the Great Jail, after a service of about thirty years, intends to retire for good, and has applied for a superannuation pension, amounting to one-half of his pay, but as the existing pension rules limit the maximum amount of a pension to Rs. 3,000 a year, whatever may be the amount of pay of the superannuated officer, the case of Mr. King has been referred to the favourable consideration of the Secretary of State on the ground of long and meritorious services.—Indian Daily News and Bengal Hurkaru.

THE TEA INTEREST.—A private but very influential meeting has been held at Calcutta, at which a committee was appointed to consider what steps should be taken to save the tea interests from utter ruin. It was agreed that this committee should place itself in communication with the tea committee of the Landholders' Association, and when these two committees have agreed upon a course and position to be adopted, that a public meeting be convened of all those interested in tea planting.

THE NEW PRESIDENT OF THE MUNICIPAL BOARD.—The Madras Times of the 5th of January says:—"Last night's Gazette contains the appointment of Colonel Charles Albert Denison, late of the 52nd Regiment, and a brother of Sir William Denison, our late governor, as Colonel Temple's successor at the Madras Municipal Board. The superintendence of stamps has apparently not yet been disposed of; at all events the appointment has not been gazetted; and the general impression is that the two appointments will no longer be amalgamated. Past experience has shown that the duties attached to the office of President of the Municipal Board are ample for one man, and it is generally felt that the board would have succeeded better had its late president not had other official duties to distract his attention from municipal matters. The other members of the board have paid a graceful and well deserved tribute to their late president. They observe truly that his 'great prudence, untiring patience and strict impartiality in the discharge of his arduous and delicate duties,' won for him the good opinion and high esteem not only of themselves, his colleagues, but also of all classes of the community; and his Excellency the Governor in Council, in an order dated the 29th ult., 'fully participates in the sorrow expressed by the Municipal Commissioners at the sudden and untimely death of their late President, and in the opinion entertained by them of that officer's character and services.' The selection of Colonel Denison as his successor is very generally disapproved. This officer's experience of India is comparatively limited; he does not appear to have ever given any attention to those sanitary questions, a knowledge of which is absolutely essential in our chief Municipal authority; and it is not known that he has any general qualifications for the office, unless the fact of his being a brother to our late Governor be considered one."

MONEY MARKET.—On the 2nd inst. the directors of the Bank of Madras declared a dividend of 35 rupees per share for the half-year ended 31st December, 1866. The dividend for the first half of the year was Rs. 50 per share, or altogether 8½ per cent. for the year. During the last half-year trade generally has been so stagnant in Madras that the operations of the bank have necessarily been limited. It was not generally anticipated, however, that the dividend would be so small. The value of the shares has fallen from 65 to 60 premium, but it is not probable that many transactions will be made till after the 10th inst., when the transfer books will be reopened. We learn by telegraph from Calcutta that the Bank of Bengal has declared a dividend of 5 per cent. for the last half-year. The four months' usance came into operation here on the 1st inst., and the quotation for bank bills at this sight is 1s. 11½d. There have, however, been some transactions, through private firms, in six months' bills at 2-0½d. There has not been much activity in the import market since the close of the Christmas holidays; 7lb. Shirtings are quotable at Rs. 7-6 to Rs. 7-8; 8½lbs., at Rs. 8-14, or, to arrive, Rs. 8-12. Western Cotton has been purchased at Rs. 159 per candy, but the price has revived somewhat, and the present quotation is Rs. 162. Cotton is being shipped for London at £2. 7s. 6d. and £2. 10s. per ton.—Madras Times, Jan. 5.

BOMBAY.

SIR BARTLE FRERE'S VISIT TO SCINDE.

A Kurrachee journal, Our Paper, of December 25, says:—Sir Bartle Frere, accompanied by Lady and the two Misses Frere, Major Clerk, Private Secretary to Government; Mr. Chapman, Chief Secretary; Commodore Young, C.B., Dr. Cruickshank, and a few others arrived from Bombay yesterday in the steamer Sir John Lawrence. The moment the vessel was signalled, Mr. Mansfield, our Commissioner, Major General Heath and his son, Colonel Hough, Colonel the Hon. F. Thesiger, Major Southey, Major Lambert, Mr. Moore, Major Bonus, Mr. Coghlan, Colonel Marston, Major Carnegie, Captain Campbell, Messrs. Rawlinson, McNeill, and Ross, Captain Giles, Mr. Cole, and a large number of the principal gentlemen in the station, including the noble-hearted Moorad Khan, drove down to the Bunder, and thence proceeded on board to wait on his Excellency. A full company of H.M.'s 1st Belooches, commanded by a European officer, with the regimental colours and band, received Sir Bartle at the pier-head with the usual compliment. A half battery of the Royal Artillery, which was drawn out in front of the Artillery lines, fired a salute of seventeen guns as the carriage conveying his Excellency arrived in the vicinity of Trinity Church, and a company of H.M.'s 51st King's Own Light Infantry, in full dress, with its officers, regimental colours and superb band, received Sir Bartle and his suite at Government-house at half-past ten A.M. with all honours. The railway authorities had provided a special train for his Excellency and party, but Sir Bartle declined the honour in a very courteous manner. On the Governor's arrival becoming known, many of the ships in the harbour were gaily decorated with flags of all nations, and so were also the staffs at Manora, and at the railway station; the latter was brilliantly illuminated during the night, which produced a very pleasing effect, a large Phung in a conspicuous position on the staff declaring the cause of its novel appearance.

Sir Bartle Frere held a levee at Government-house on Wednesday afternoon (26th Dec.) last, which was attended by all the principal gentlemen of the station, and at the same time Lady Frere received such ladies as desired to present themselves to her. His Excellency with Lady and the Misses Frere left us for Hyderabad by special train at about half-past 10 o'clock yesterday (27th) morning, attended by his suite, Mr. Mansfield, the Commissioner, and Mr. Moore, with Messrs. Rawlinson, McNeill and Ross, of the Scinde Railway accompanying the party. The train started from the Frere-street station, which was most beautifully, we should say artistically, decorated. Across the road leading to the station was constructed a large arch with a smaller one on each side of its sides; these were covered with evergreens, and over the main arch most beautiful flowers were arranged so as to form the words "Welcome, Frere." A compliment is at all times pleasant, but when expressed in so chaste a mode, it cannot but have the effect of striking home to the heart. At the entrance to the station there was a beautiful little fairy palace erected as if by magic, thickly covered with evergreens and flowers emitting the most delightful odours; over the pavilion waved innumerable flags, all surmounted with the railway colours, red, white, and green. This, one would have thought, was ample to express the respect felt for his Excellency, but the railway authorities had their flagstaff and the carriages also gaily decorated, the former with the flags of all nations, and the latter with foliage and banners. Crowds assembled to see the departure of Sir Bartle, which was announced by a salute of 17 guns as soon as the carriages began to move. We learn that both the Joongshae and Kotree stations were similarly ornamented, and that his Excellency and party lunched and rested awhile at the former place. There can be none who having witnessed the Governor's departure from Kurrachee will not concur with us in our expressions of praise of the results which attended the labours of Messrs. McNeill and Ross, for nothing could have been more perfect, nothing more suited to the refined and delicate taste of Sir Bartle Frere, than the devices which we have been endeavouring to sketch. His Excellency, family, and party will return from Hyderabad to-morrow (Dec. 29) afternoon, and the most active arrangements are now in progress for holding a great Durbar at the Frere-hall, on the afternoon of Tuesday next (Jan. 1); the day will be closed with a grand ball at which all the elite of Kurrachee will be present.

Sir Bartle Frere returned from Hyderabad at 1.30 P.M., on Saturday, 29th Dec. The Frere station was, if possible, more gaily decorated for H.E.'s reception than it was when prepared for his departure. On the platform a bower of evergreens had been erected, whilst the approach from Frere-street was spanned by an arch, the whole fluttering, as it were, with small flags. An inscription, tastefully designed, wished his Excellency a long life, in place of the other which, when he proceeded to Kotree, had bid him welcome.

Sir Bartle Frere did not proceed, as rumoured he would do, to the Hubb river on Saturday afternoon. The journey so soon after his arrival from Hyderabad would have been a severe tax upon his Excellency's powers of endurance in his present state of health. The trip was deferred till Monday morning, when the party started early. We understand Khan Bahadoor Moorad Khan, who made every preparation, received his distinguished guests in a befitting manner.

Yesterday his Excellency held a durbar at Frere-hall, and attended the ball given in the same building last night, the Belooches finding guards of honour on both occasions.

The enthusiastic reception Sir Bartle Frere met with on every side, during his short sojourn in this province with whose material progress his name must ever remain associated, has borne ample testimony to the deep respect, and even to a more tender feeling still, which the people of Scinde entertain towards his Excellency; and it is but an earnest of the sincerity with which they shall always wish he may be spared to do more good in the sphere of his usefulness, and to reap higher honours as a further reward for his eminent public services.—Sindian, Jan. 2.

ON New Year's-day, at 12-30 P.M., his Excellency the Governor held a Durbar at the Frere-hall, Kurrachee with the object of bestowing the Insignia of the Companionship of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, on Shet Naomull of our city, of meeting the Municipal Commissioners, and of conferring rewards on such native servants as have distinguished themselves by their zeal and honesty.

BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.

At a Convocation held on the 8th ult. Sir Bartle Frere, as Chancellor of the University, was pleased to nominate the following gentlemen to be fellows of the University of Bombay.—The Hon. Framjee Nusserwanjee; Michael Scott, Esq.; F. S. Arnott, C.B., Deputy-Inspector General Medical Department; Nicholas Dalzell, Esq., M.A.; the Rev. D. Macpherson, M.A.; and Narayan Wasadeojee, Esq. The most interesting part of the proceeding was his Excellency's speech, the most important portions of which were as follows:—

MR. VICE-CHANCELLOR and GENTLEMEN of the SENATE.—I feel it very difficult to find words to express the deep and heartfelt gratification with which I have listened to the address which you have just read following upon the Registrar's Report of the steady and most satisfactory progress which has been observable in the proceedings of this University during the past as in every preceding year since its foundation. I cannot but feel that you have estimated the share I have personally had in promoting the success of the University more favourably than I deserve, but I prize that estimate because I feel assured that the favourable view you have taken of what I have done while Governor of this Presidency is founded not on mere personal partiality, but on sympathy with the great objects we all of us have had in view. I have endeavoured ever since I came to this Government to promote, as far as lay in my power, the efficiency and independence of this University, because I believe that it contains the germ of some of the most valuable gifts which England could bestow upon India. You have spoken of the "forbearance" which, as the head of the "Political Government," I have exhibited towards the University, and you do me no more than justice in inferring that what you term "forbearance" has not been the result of lukewarmness or indifference, but of a clear conviction that the Political Government of this country could hardly commit a greater mistake than by attempting to convert the University into a "mere office or Department of the State." I have ever felt most strongly the importance of those truths which you have so well expressed in your address, that any loss of dignity or independence in the University involves also a loss of the highest kind of efficiency.

You have alluded to the jealousy which centralising and absolute Governments naturally feel as regards any independent institutions, the main object of which is the cultivation of free thought. . . . But England has, as I need not remind you, no such purpose, and need have no such fear. From the day when the sudden brilliancy of the achievements of her sons in this distant country first startled the Parliament and people of England, from the days of Clive and Warren Hastings to this hour, there has ever been a continual protest on the part of those who mould the thought and direct the action of the British nation, against the doctrine that India is to be administered in any other spirit than as a trust from God for the good government of many millions of His creatures; and, however fitfully and imperfectly this purpose may have been carried out, it has in every generation grown in strength, and was never more powerful than at the present moment. However firmly England may resolve that no force shall wrest from her the Empire of India, the root of that resolve has always been a deep conviction that to surrender that Empire would be to betray a high trust. England desires to administer India as she would administer her own colonies, with a single eye to the benefit of the dependency and with a strong assurance that whatever is truly good for the dependency must benefit the Empire at large. To a rule of this kind such a University as you would form can be nothing but a most valuable auxiliary, training minds to understand and appreciate as well as to promote the great purpose of the ruling Power, and even in the short life of this University and the schools which furnish its graduates, I think we find practical proof that this view is the sound one. As I once before remarked from this chair, I remember the opening of the first English High School in this Presidency, and now, wherever I go I find the best exponents of the policy of the English Government, and the most able coadjutors in adjusting that policy to the peculiarities of the nations of India, among the ranks of those educated natives, for increasing whose numbers and for raising whose standard of attainments this University is designed. It is not only here in Bombay but from every part of the Presidency I receive testimony to this fact. From Sind and from Canara, from Kattywar and Guzerat, and from the furthest parts of the Deccan, I have concurrent evidence that, wherever progress, whether intellectual or material, is observable, there the natives who have received a good English education are among the most active in the good cause. And it is to be remarked that this is not observable of Government servants only. It is a healthy result of extended education that it has contributed to cause a diminution of that craving for Government employ which in former days was almost universal. No close observer can fail to have been struck by the increasing popularity of independent employment of every kind. But I do not find that this has been accompanied by any increase of what we in England would call Radicalism. On the contrary I find among the educated natives, who are independent of Government service, the strongest appreciation of the benefits of British rule. In now taking leave of the University of Bombay, it is a satisfaction to me to know that I leave behind me colleagues who I believe concur with me in the views I have endeavoured very inadequately to express regarding the work of this University and the soundness of the foundation which has been laid by yourself and by your accomplished predecessors in your great office of Director-general of Public Instruction in this Presidency. I feel assured that you will have every support in your good work from my successor, who will come among you with a name not undistinguished in one of our great store-houses of active thought and learning to which the freedom and the power of England owe so much. It is a great gratification to me to know that you propose to perpetuate the memory of my tenure of office as your Chancellor. Few things will give me greater pleasure in other lands than to know that I have contributed to carry out any great work begun by one who was loved and lamented like Lord Elphinstone, a work which was foreseen and hoped for by his great namesake and predecessor, and for your purpose in connecting my name with theirs I heartily thank you. But whatever we may attribute to individual agency, or may hope for from individual exertion, there is ever present to our minds in this and in every other great work in this country a prevailing sense of an over-ruling Power, in comparison with whose agency the mightiest works of man are dwarfed to insignificance. Philosophers tell us of the evidence which is afforded by the shores of some of the fairest regions of the earth that some great subterranean force is already at work gradually upheaving or submerging the whole continent. It has always seemed to me that this afforded no unfitting image of our work in this country. We may terrace and adorn the hill sides, we may trim the vine slopes and plant the olive and orange, but there is a Power which, though unseen and often unobserved by us, is ever working with a silent energy of which we can have no conception, to raise or depress whole nations. That that great Power may bless and prosper the great work that you have in hand, and make it fruitful in good results, of which we can have now no clear conception, is my fervent hope, and in that hope I now bid you, Sir and this Convocation, farewell.

The Chancellor having resumed his seat, after a short pause, again rose and pronounced the Convocation dissolved.

A COMPETITION WALLAH IN TROUBLE.—We have hitherto refrained from taking any notice of the recent military-cum-civilian fracas at Surat which has been the source of much scandal on both sides for some time past, because the matter was undecided, and had been referred to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, who, as was to be expected from him under the circumstances, has now decided the matter in a manner which, we feel assured, will be approved of by all impartial bystanders looking on at what actually took place. The facts are exceedingly simple, and are as follows:—It appears that a young civilian—a "competition wallah"—was dining at the mess of Her Majesty's 2nd Bombay Native Infantry (Grenadiers) at Surat, and, being Bacchi plenus, got into an altercation with some of the gentlemen present, and in reply to some observation made by Captain Prendergast Walsh, of the regiment just mentioned, called out "That's a—lie," in the regular railway navy style. Captain Walsh's retort was to raise his right arm, and hit out straight from the shoulder, which had the effect of flooring the young civil servant in question. No one, we imagine, will deny that this prompt display of energy on the part of Captain Walsh was uncalled for, but the "untoward event" having occurred in a regimental mess-room, the rules of the service required that Captain Walsh should be placed under arrest, and this was done by the senior officer of the regiment then present who happened to be the doctor. We have received two versions of the affair as regards the manner of the assault. One is that Capt. Walsh floored the "competition wallah" with his fist; the other that he merely caned him round the billiard-table, and laid into him with such right good will that the "wallah" wheeled round and round to the amusement of all present. The case was, as we have already mentioned referred to his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, who on the consideration of all the circumstances of the case, has ordered that Capt. Walsh be released from arrest, on the ground that the insulting language used towards him by the "wallah" was sufficient provocation for the blow that was struck. We are informed that there are one or two young officers attached to the 2nd Grenadiers who sided in this matter with the "wallah," whom they put up to insult Captain Walsh. Our advice to these young gentlemen, is that they take warning from Sir Robert Napier's decision in this case, and immediately apply to be transferred to some less distinguished corps.—Deccan Herald.

THE 5TH FUSILIERS.—A detachment of the 1st Battalion 5th Foot (strength, 348 men, 42 women and 42 children) arrived at Kurrachee from England per transport Essex last Saturday, in charge of the following officers:—Lieutenant-Colonel William Roberts (in command); Captains E. Townshend, J. R. Newbolt, and C. L. Dashwood; Lieutenants Herbert S. Williams, W. B. Knox, W. C. Ormond, H. R. W. Miles, J. L. Vincent, Edward Drew, W. FitzAllan Way, G. W. Hargreave, A. C. Chichester, and G. H. Dyke; Quarter-master Drake; and Doctors Tippets and Ruttledge. The party disembarked yesterday under the superintendence of Captain Campbell, the Assistant Quarter-master General of the division, and was conveyed by train at 4.30 P.M. to the Frere station, whence the men marched to the tents pitched for their accommodation on the plain between the general parade ground and the Napier barracks.—Our Paper, Dec. 18.

VESSELS SPOKEN AT SEA.—The British ship Benefactress, Captain W. Tate, which arrived in harbour on Saturday last from Liverpool, reports that on Sept. 23rd, in lat. 21° 6' S., long. 24° 26' W., spoke the ship L'Agoahanna, from Liverpool to Bombay; parted company with her on the 29th Sept. in lat. 17° 30' S., long. 33° 50' W. On Nov. 27th in lat. 1° 8' N., long. 69° E., spoke the British barque Flatworth, from Swansea bound to Kurrachee, 109 days out, all well. On Nov. 29th, in lat. 3° 11' N., long., 17° 10' E., spoke the ship Sussex, from Kingston bound to Kurrachee, 94 days out, with troops on board.—Times of India, Dec. 24.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE GANJAM DISTRICT.—Most favourable accounts continue to reach us of the state of Ganjam. The change that a few weeks have brought about in this district is extraordinary. It was only in August that we were receiving heartrending accounts of the famine that prevailed there, and now we learn that "the early paddy crop was almost universally a most abundant one." Rice is selling at fifteen to eighteen measures the rupee, and is, in fact, considerably cheaper than it was this time last year. In consequence of the favourable nature of the season, the demand for labour, and the visible improvement in the condition of the poor, the relief-houses at Aska and Hoomah and the pauper hospital at Rumbah have been closed.—Madras Times, Dec. 17.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN OF INDIA RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts for the week ending December 15, 1866, amounted for passengers, &c., to Rs. 5,196-4-0, and for luggage, goods, &c., to Rs. 4,588-12-0, making together Rs. 9,785-0-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 77-1-0. During the corresponding week of 1865 the receipts were Rs. 6,583-13-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 83-5-0.—Madras Times, Dec. 28.

LORD NAPIER.—It is rumoured that the Right Hon. the Governor of Madras contemplates an early visit to Calcutta—not intending, however, to be away from the presidency for much more than a fortnight.

India-office, London, Nov. 9, 1866.
To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

SIR,—I have received and considered in Council your Excellency's letter No. 147, dated June 30, 1866, relative to a question raised by the Government of Fort St. George, with special reference to the case of Capt. A. C. Grant, of the 11th hussars, A.D.C. to Major-General Haines, commanding the Mysore division, whether an officer of her Majesty's British army, on the strength of a regiment not in India, but holding a staff appointment in that country, can obtain leave to England with the retention of his appointment, and, if so, to what salary he is entitled.

2. In reply, I have to inform you that I have resolved to apply to officers in this category the rules published in [Madras G. O. G. Nov. 5, 1861, No. 391] general order by the governor-general, No. 952 of Oct. 22, 1861, as affecting general officers on the staff.

3. Under this ruling, leave or sick certificate will be restricted to six months with Indian allowances and half staff salary, and on private affairs to four months without pay, the penalty of exceeding such period being loss of appointment, and in no case will more than one grant of leave out of India be allowed.—I have, &c.,

ENTRANCE TO STAFF CORPS.

No. 1,102.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 230, dated Nov. 9, 1866, is published:—

India-office: London, Nov. 9, 1866.
To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

Sir,—Para. 1.—Having under my consideration in Council your Excellency's Despatch No. 258, I addressed to you, on the 5th instant, the following telegraphic message:—

"Your letter of the 21st September, No. 258, received."

"Permission, under recent despatch, to enter staff corps was given only to officers of Indian army. Officers of line regiments have ceased to be officers of the Indian army, therefore they are not to be admitted to staff corps, but bonus compensation should be given them under the terms of the despatch."

"More by letter."

2. With regard to the first inquiry, the measures proposed had reference to the officers of the Indian army, and to no others, and were therefore not intended to apply to officers of artillery and engineers, or those of the new line regiments, whose connection with that service had ceased.

3. With regard to your second inquiry, it was stated in para. 11 of Despatch No. 160, that a committee will be formed at each presidency for the purpose of investigating and reporting upon claims of this nature, on the part of officers borne on the strength of Indian army on Feb. 18, 1861.

4. The terms of that order clearly embrace not only officers who joined the new line regiments from the Indian army, subsequent to Feb. 18, 1861, but also the whole of the officers of the artillery and engineers, late of the Indian army, and they were intended to do so.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) CRANBORNE.

LEAVE—UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.

Dec. 29.—No. 2,610.—From the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India to H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council, No. 264, dated London, Nov. 16, 1866:—

I have received and considered in Council your Financial Letter, dated July 25 last, No. 164, inquiring whether an uncovenanted servant may be allowed accumulated leave on private affairs for one year after a service of twelve years, or an accumulated furlough of two years after a service of eighteen years.

I concur in the opinion of your Government that the present rule, under which an officer may be granted leave on private affairs for six months, with half pay, at intervals of six years, is sufficiently liberal, and I am unable to sanction the accumulation of such leave to twelve months; but I have no objection to an officer being allowed the option of taking his two years' furlough in two periods as at present, or in one period after eighteen years' service.

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE BOOTY.

ROYAL WARRANT granting prize money to the "Central India Field Force" under the command of Major-General Sir Hugh Rose.

VICTORIA, R.

Victoria, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, to all to whom these presents shall come; greeting.

Whereas it has been represented unto us, by the commissioners of our treasury, that in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, a rebellion took place within Central India, that land forces, consisting of our troops and of troops of the East India Company were, for the suppression of the same, organised in three columns, termed respectively the "Central India Field Force," the "Saugor and Nerbudda Field Force," and the "Rajpootanah Field Force," under the respective commands of Major General Sir Hugh Rose, now General Lord Strathnairn, Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath; Major-general Whitlock, now Lieutenant-general Sir George Cornish Whitlock, Knight Commander of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, and Major-general Sir Henry Roberts (since deceased), the whole being under the command of General Sir Colin Campbell, Commander-in-Chief; And whereas it has been further represented unto Us by the said Commissioners of our Treasury that the column or division under the command of the said Major-general Sir Hugh Rose (now Lord Strathnairn) fought the action on the Betwa with the so-called army of the Peishwa, which attempted to relieve Jhansi on the first of April in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight, and stormed Jhansi on the second of that month, and that the subsequent operations of the said force eventuated in the capture of Calpee on the twenty-second of May, and the recapture of Gwalior from the rebels on the nineteenth of June following. That property was captured during the aforesaid operations, the sale proceeds of which have been realised by the Prize Agents employed in collecting, selling, and realising the said booty, or have been otherwise realised, or are about to be realised, amounting or computed to amount with interest, and after deducting the costs incurred in connection therewith, to the sum of five lacs, twenty-two thousand one hundred and twenty-five rupees, and eight pice, or thereabouts; And whereas it has been further represented unto Us by Our said Commissioners, that an application had been made to them by Our Secretary of State for India, that the aforesaid Booty might be granted for the use of the Commander, Officers, and Men belonging to the force employed in the said operations, subject to the rights of the Commander-in-Chief and Officers of his Staff, Personal as well as General, in accordance with the judgment delivered by the Judge of Our High Court of Admiralty, in the case of the Booty captured at Bandah and Kirwee, referred to him by Our Order in Council of the tenth of June, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four, under the provisions of the Statute made and passed in a session of Parliament held in the fourth year of Our Reign, intituled "An Act to Improve the Practice and Jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty of England," to which we are graciously pleased to condescend. And whereas it has been further represented unto Us by the Commissioners of Our Treasury, that regard being had to the unusual character of the whole of the operations in Central India on this occasion, and the responsibility which under the particular circumstances must have been imposed upon the officers in command of the several columns who were engaged in those operations, although acting under the Orders of the Commander-in-Chief, the services of those Officers will not be sufficiently remunerated by the amount of shares to which they will be entitled under the scale hereinafter mentioned, and have recommended unto Us that some addition should be made to the amount aforesaid, to which we are graciously pleased to assent. Now We do hereby give and grant to Our Secretary of State for India in Council for the time being, all the aforesaid booty hereinbefore mentioned to have been captured, and the proceeds thereof as aforesaid in trust for the use of the personal representative or representatives of the late Lord Clyde, formerly Sir Colin Campbell, Commander-in-Chief, and his Staff, personal as well as general, who were in the field at the time, and the Commander, Officers, and Men belonging to the force engaged in the said operations, to be distributed by Our Secretary of State for India in Council for the time being, or by any other person or persons he may appoint, as follows (that is to say):—One twentieth part of the whole of the aforesaid booty and proceeds to the said Lord Clyde and the Officer actually in command of the aforesaid Central India Field Force to be distributed in the proportion of four-fifths of the same to the legal personal representative or representatives of the late Lord Clyde, the Commander-in-Chief, and one-fifth to the Officer actually in command, over and above the number of shares to which he will be entitled as aforesaid, and all the remainder of the said booty and proceeds to be distributed to and divided amongst the General and other Officers and Men engaged in the said operations, according to the following scale, and in the following proportions, as far as the same may be applicable, to the several ranks of Officers and Men so engaged in the same, such scale and proportions being settled and determined and fixed by and according to a calculation of the day-pay of each rank, and being in the proportion of one share for each shilling of such day-pay, that is to say:—

Major-Generals, seventy-six shares each.

Colonels and Lieutenant-Colonels, seventeen shares each.

Majors, sixteen shares each.

Captains, twelve shares each.

Lieutenants, First-Class, after seven years' service, seven and a-half shares each.

Lieutenants, Second-Class, under seven years' service, six and a-half shares each.

Ensigns, five and a half shares each.

The shares of officers in command of regiments to be double the amount of the shares attached or accruing to them according to the day-pay of their regimental rank only.

Staff-Serjeants, three shares.

Colour-Serjeants, two and a half shares each.

Serjeants two shares each.

Corporals, one and a half shares each.

Privates, one share each.

All officers on the divisional, personal, and general staff to be allowed shares according to their staff-pay, added to the half-pay of their respective ranks.

REGIMENTAL STAFF.

Adjutants, ten shares each.
 Quartermasters, six and a-half shares each.
 Paymasters, twelve and a-half shares each.
 Riding Masters, nine shares each.
 Surgeons, fifteen shares each.
 Assistant Surgeons, ten shares each.

Together with any additional shares to which they or any of them may be entitled in virtue of additional pay for length of service. The shares of the Native troops to be fixed in proportion to their day's pay, but no such share to be less than one half of the share of a British private soldier of the Infantry of the line in Our service. Such classes of native Indian non-combatants as water-carriers, bullock drivers, doolie-bearers, as have been accustomed to share according to the usage of the army in India, are to share in the same manner and in the same proportions in relation to the shares of the fighting ranks as they have hitherto been accustomed to share according to such usage. And We are graciously pleased to order and direct, that in case any doubt shall rise in respect of the distribution of the booty or proceeds hereby granted as aforesaid, or respecting any claim or demand on the said booty or proceeds, the same shall be determined by Our Secretary of State for India in Council for the time being, or by such person or persons to whom he shall refer the same, which determination thereupon made, shall with all convenient speed be notified in writing to the Commissioners of Our Treasury, and the same shall be final and conclusive to all intents and purposes, unless, within three months after the receipt thereof at the office of the Commissioners of Our Treasury, We shall be pleased otherwise to order, hereby reserving to our Ourselves to make such other order therein as to us shall seem fit.

Given at Our Court at Windsor, this twenty-second day of November, in the thirtieth year of Our reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six.

By Her Majesty's Command.

ROYAL WARRANT granting Prize Money to the "Saugor Field Force" under the Command of Major-general Whitlock.

[Preamble omitted.]

And whereas it has been further represented unto Us, by the said Commissioners of Our Treasury, that the Column or Division under the command of Major-general Sir George Cornish Whitlock, on the nineteenth day of April, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight, captured the town of Bandah, and on the sixth day of June following, the town of Kirwee; that, on the occupation of the aforesaid towns by the said Troops, property was then captured, which has been since duly sold, and the sale proceeds have been realised by the Prize Agents employed for collecting, selling, and realising the said Booty, or have been otherwise realised, or are about to be realised, amounting, or computed to amount, with interest, after deducting costs, to the sum of fifty-five lacs, fifty thousand rupees, or thereabouts: And whereas the said Commissioners of Our Treasury have further represented unto Us, that a humble Memorial had been presented unto them by Major Chandas F. Clifton, Prize Agent to Major-General Whitlock's Division, praying that the whole of the Booty as aforesaid captured might be granted to Major-General Whitlock, and the force under his command exclusively: And whereas it has been further represented unto us, that claims to participate in the said Booty had been preferred by the late Lord Clyde, as Commander-in-Chief, on behalf of himself and his Personal Staff; by Major-General Sir Hugh Rose, on the ground of his force having co-operated in the actions or movement of the Troops which led to the capture; also by Major-general Smith, and by Colonel Middleton, and that other claims might be preferred by or on behalf of the same or other persons to the property, or some part thereof, captured during the aforesaid operations: And whereas difficulties having arisen as to the distribution of the aforesaid Booty, We deemed it advisable that a reference, under the authority of a certain statute made and passed in a Session of Parliament held in the fourth year of Our reign, intituled "An Act to improve the practice and jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty of England," should be made to the Judge of Our High Court of Admiralty, and accordingly, We were graciously pleased, on the tenth day of June, in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four, to issue Our Order in Council in the following terms:—

"Now, therefore, Her Majesty is pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, by and with the advice of Her Privy Council, that the claims of all parties whomsoever to the property captured during the aforesaid operation, and to the proceeds thereof, be referred to the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty of England, who shall take into his consideration, if it shall appear to him to be necessary for the purposes of justice, any capture that may have been made of any property during the said operations by any of the claimants, and shall make such Order as to him shall seem right, both in regard to the persons who are, and the proportions in which such persons are entitled to share therein, and to the costs and expenses incurred in relation thereto by the respective claimants, whether before or subsequent to this Order, reserving, however, to Her Majesty the right to direct the rates or scale of distribution according to which the said property or the proceeds thereof shall be paid to the several ranks of the force or forces to which such property shall be adjudged."

And whereas, on the thirtieth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six, the Right Honourable the Judge of Our High Court of Admiralty of England pronounced that the personal representatives of the late General Lord Clyde and the Officers of his Staff, personal as well as general, who were in the field at the time, are entitled to share in the Booty captured at Bandah and Kirwee in April and June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight, and subject to this right be awarded the whole of the said Booty to Lieutenant-General Sir George Cornish Whitlock and the force under his command, called the Saugor and Nerbudda Field Force including amongst the latter the Officers and troops under Lieutenant-Colonel Keating, and any other Troops left by General Whitlock on his march, who, at the time of the capture, formed a portion of his Division, and were still under his command, and he disallowed all other claims, and, in pursuance of the power given to him by the said Order in Council, directed that the costs of the various parties be paid out of the fund: And whereas it has been further represented unto Us by the Commissioners of Our Treasury that, regard being had to the unusual character of the whole of the operations in Central India on this occasion, and the responsibility which, under the particular circumstances, must have been imposed upon the Officers in command of the several Columns who were engaged in those operations, although acting under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief, the services of those officers will not be sufficiently remunerated by the amount of shares to which they will be entitled under the scale hereinafter mentioned, and have recommended unto Us that some addition should be made to the amount aforesaid, to which We are graciously pleased to condescend.

Now We do hereby give and grant to Our Secretary of State for India in Council for the time being, all the aforesaid Booty mentioned to have been captured at or in the said towns of Bandah and Kirwee, and the proceeds thereof as aforesaid, in trust for the use of the personal representative or representatives of the late Lord Clyde, formerly Sir Colin Campbell, the Commander-in-chief, and his Staff, personal as well as general, who were in the Field at the time, and the said Major-General Sir George Cornish Whitlock, and the Officers and Men belonging to the Forces engaged in the said captures as aforesaid, including the Troops under Lieutenant-Colonel Keating, and any other Troops left by General Whitlock on his march, and who, at the time of the captures, formed a portion of his division, and was still under his command, such booty and proceeds to be distributed by our Secretary of State for India in Council for the time being, or by any other person or persons he may appoint as follows (that is to say):—

One-twentieth part of the whole of the aforesaid booty and proceeds to the said Lord Clyde, and the officer actually in command of the said Saugor and Nerbudda field force, to be distributed in the proportion of four-fifths of the same to the legal personal representative or representatives of the late Lord Clyde, the Commander-in-chief, and one-fifth to the officer actually in command, over and above the number of shares to which he will be entitled as aforesaid, and all the remainder of the said Booty and proceeds to be distributed to and divided amongst the General and other Officers and Men belonging to the Forces which took part in the aforesaid operations, as specified in the Decree aforesaid, according to the following scale, and in the following proportions, as far as the same may be applicable to the several ranks of Officers and Men so engaged in the same, such scale and proportions being settled and determined and fixed by and according to a calculation of the day's pay of each rank, and being in the proportion of one share for each shilling of day's pay (that is to say):—

Major-Generals, seventy-six shares each.
 Brigadiers, fifty-one shares each.
 Colonels and Lieutenant-Colonels, seventeen shares each.

Adjutants, ten shares each.

The shares of the Native Troops to be fixed in proportion to their day's pay, but no such share to be less than one-half of the share of a British private soldier of the Infantry of the Line in Our Service. Such classes of Native Indian non-combatants as water-carriers, bullock drivers, doolie bearers, as have been accustomed to share according to the usage of the Army in India, are to share in the same manner and in the same proportions, in relation to the shares of the fighting ranks, as they have hitherto been accustomed to share, according to such usage.

OUTBREAK OF CHOLERA AT CALINGAPATAM.—A correspondent writes:—"The cholera is committing dreadful ravages here. It is in part the consequence of famine. The emaciated poor have now food (as paddy is now selling here at 30 coonjums per rupee, the coonjums being 3 seers), but their over-indulgence and greed, very likely aggravated by the reaping work performed in the water, leads to indigestion, the forerunner of cholera; eight or ten souls are, I believe, daily perishing in every village."—Madras Times, Dec. 19.

BISHOP COTTON'S MEMORIAL FUND.

It is proposed, in memory of the late lamented Bishop of Calcutta, to endeavour to carry out the object which he had much at heart, which he had meant to have urged on the English public, had his life been spared to return, and which was cut short by his sudden death. Those numerous friends and pupils to whom Bishop Cotton had personally endeared himself will, doubtless gladly join in the attempt to carry out his wishes. Those who have an interest in the welfare of India will, it is hoped, gladly seize this opportunity of supplying what is confessedly one of the most crying needs of the Indian empire. The object cannot be better stated than in the bishop's own words, in a report addressed to the clergy and laity of his diocese, dated Jan. 6, 1866:—

"It is generally known that the European inhabitants of this country—of the middle class in point of wealth and worldly position—are rapidly increasing. Railways, canals, tea-planting, other branches of agricultural and commercial industry, the development of trade and of the resources of the country, are constantly bringing fresh additions to its population from Europe. The principal clerks in our Government offices, and many in our merchants' houses, belong to families of mixed race, so that there is now hardly any large station in India where there are not parents eager to obtain for their children a sound practical Christian education. On my tours of visitation I am constantly asked to provide this, and letters are constantly written to me soliciting my help to place children at schools where the charges are moderate. It must suffice to repeat generally, that below that richer class of English residents, members of the services, wealthy merchants, and others who send their children home, there is a very large and growing number who cannot possibly afford to do this; so that, unless some provision is made for their wants future generations of nominal Christians in India must grow up in a state of ignorance and degradation, which will bring dishonour on the Gospel and on the English name. The presence in the country of such a population will not only be very injurious to our political position, and diminish the respect in which, if we are to confer any real and lasting benefit on India, Englishmen ought to be regarded by the natives of the country, but will be a positive and growing impediment to missionary operations, since there is no more persuasive evidence of the truth of Christianity than the sight of a living Church of men and women exhibiting in their lives the effects of its doctrines. And if the professing Church does not exhibit these effects this argument is turned the other way. Hindus and Mahometans will hardly be persuaded to believe in the divinity of a creed which has no influence on the hearts and conduct of its adherents. Nor will it be a light evil for England and for Christianity if, through the influence of Government and missionary colleges, now in active operation all over India, for the education of the natives of the country, Hindus and Mahometans surpass Christians in knowledge and intelligence, and therefore in influence and capacity for taking part in public affairs. To prevent or remedy these enormous hindrances to the true welfare of India, various means have been adopted or suggested for establishing schools in different places for Christian boys and girls. And the scheme for which I am now pleading is part of this general effort, and aims at the permanent foundation of three schools in the bracing climate of the Himalayas, where Anglo-Indian boys of the class which I have attempted to describe may receive a physical as well as an intellectual and spiritual training, and so be made, by God's blessing, 'profitable members of the Church and commonwealth.' In order to accomplish this extensive project four funds have been opened, to be closed in three years, when it is hoped that their work will be accomplished. The Archdeacon of Calcutta and myself are pro tempore trustees of these four funds, our trust expiring when we have handed them over, under appropriate covenants and regulations, to the governing bodies already existing, or to be hereafter constituted. The Government of India has wisely and generously encouraged the project, by promising to double from the public revenue all moneys contributed towards it—a promise which at the same time proves the value which statesmen attach to it, as indeed was most emphatically stated by Lord Canning in a minute dated October 29, 1860, and by Sir Charles Trevelyan in a letter to myself printed in 1863."

It is proposed to make over the fund collected in England to the Diocesan Board of Education, established by Bishop Cotton in 1859 (consisting of some of the principal residents and clergymen of Calcutta), which has undertaken the charge of a similar memorial fund set on foot by Archdeacon Pratt in Calcutta. The memorial fund in India is to be devoted to the hill schools, and to the general assistance of schools in the plains, for the children of poor Europeans and those of mixed races. It is the desire of the committee for the memorial fund to be collected in England to provide, at least in the first instance, for the endowment of the three schools in the hills (viz., Simla, Mussoorie, and Darjeeling), according to the design of Bishop Cotton, as expressed in the foregoing report. It is for these that an endowment is absolutely essential. The sum needed for the endowment is £50,000. It is hoped that whatever is contributed from private sources may be doubled by the Indian Government. What the bishop had collected before his death amounted to about £8,000. Therefore what remains to be collected is about £17,000. Of this it may be expected that at least one-half may be supplied from the Memorial Fund in India. The remaining half, viz., £8,500, is what Bishop Cotton's friends hope to see raised in England. With the foundation of these schools his memory is specially connected; and it would be the desire of the committee, in making over this fund to the administrators of the similar fund in India, that these institutions shall bear the name of Bishop Cotton's Schools. Any sum in excess of that which will be required for the endowment of the hill schools will remain at the disposal of the Diocesan Board, to aid in the establishment or improvement of schools for the same object in the plains.

VICE-CHANCELLORS' COURTS, JAN. 31.

(Before Sir JOHN STUART.)

IN RE SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI BANK CORPORATION (LIMITED), AND IN RE THE COMPANIES' ACT, 1862.

This was a petition praying that an agreement of the 29th January inst. might be approved and confirmed by the Court.

The company was incorporated in 1862. In March, 1866, at a meeting of the company, a resolution was passed to wind up voluntarily, and three liquidators were appointed, and they, under the 138th section of the Act of 1862, desired to have the sanction of the Court to an agreement entered into between the company and the National Bank of India (Limited) for the sale to them of certain of the assets of this company, and to pay to the Bank of India a certain amount for liquidating the assets of the company. The original arrangements between the company and the bank were prevented from being carried out in consequence of some of the members of the company dissenting to them. Subsequent negotiations removed the difficulties between the parties interested, and they all now believed that it would be for their interest that the agreement should be approved and confirmed by the Court, so as to enable the liquidators to divide among the shareholders a fund of about £200,000.

Mr. Greene, Q.C., for the petitioners, submitted that the Court had, by the 138th section of the Act of 1862, full power to make the order asked for, as it would be beneficial to the shareholders.

Mr. A. G. Marten appeared for the directors, and consented to the order.

The Vice-Chancellor said it appearing to the Court to be fit and proper, and for the benefit of the shareholders, he would order that the agreement be confirmed.

Solicitors for the parties, Messrs. Clarke, Son, and Rawlins.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ABYSSINIAN CAPTIVES.—The Morning Herald says:—A paragraph appeared yesterday (the 31st ult.) in the columns of a contemporary in regard to the Abyssinian captives which, if not corrected, may lead to considerable misapprehension of the course the Government have taken to procure their release. The paragraph is to the effect that on the 28th December Colonel Merewether had left Aden for Massowah to hand over to the Emperor Theodore the machinery and artisans sent out by the English Government. But it is as well that it should be fully understood that the Government have had nothing whatever to do with the expedition of the artisans. On the recommendation of Mr. Flad, her Majesty's Ministers determined to make that gentleman the bearer of a letter to King Theodore, and to second his efforts on behalf of our imprisoned countrymen by a present of certain machinery, which the Abyssinian ruler was anxious to procure in this country. But the artisans who have gone out to set this machinery up are purely volunteers, going out rather for good pay, or from a love of adventure, in the service of the Emperor Theodore, and engaged by Mr. Flad for that purpose. A curious fact in connection with their engagement is that an impression has been prevalent in some quarters that a certain number of artisans were going out in exchange for the present prisoners; and one engineer, we believe, wrote to the authorities, offering himself as a substitute for Captain Cameron. Assured by them that no such exchange was contemplated, he still persisted in his offer, giving as his reason that he thought Captain Cameron had been long enough in prison, and that he was quite ready to take his place. So far as we know, no news from Abyssinia has arrived since the 5th December, but letters have been received from Colonel Merewether, dated the 25th of that month, stating his intention to proceed to Massowah on the 27th or 28th. There is, therefore, good reason to believe that he did on the 28th actually start for Massowah. As to the two officers mentioned as being associated with his mission, we can only say that their names figure in the Army List, and that the probability of the story is strong. A week or two will, it is to be hoped, suffice to relieve the public of its present terrible anxiety. In the meantime it is satisfactory to know that the last letters received, direct from Captain Cameron, left him with spirits unsubdued and with hope still surviving—uncomplaining, enduring, and patient.

THE FUTURE DIRECTOR-GENERAL OF THE ARMY MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—As it is generally stated that, in case of the retirement of Sir James Gibson, the present Director-General of the Army Medical Department, either Dr. Logan, the Senior Inspector-General of Hospitals, or Dr. Muir, who is second on the list of inspectors-general, will be his successor, it may be interesting to quote the recorded services of these gentlemen. Dr. Beatson, who stands fourth on the list of inspectors, has also been mentioned in some influential circles as a probable successor; and that officer's services are also added. The quotation is taken from the description of the services of the officers of the medical department of the army in the recently published quarterly Army List. Dr. Logan served with the 53rd Regiment throughout the Sutlej campaign of 1845-6, and was present at the affair of Buddiwal, and the actions of Aliwal and Sohraon (medal and one clasp). Served also at the siege of Sebastopol during 1855, and was present at the taking of the quarries on June 7, at the assault of June 18, and as principal medical officer of the Highland Division at the final assault on September 8 (medal and clasp, 5th class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal). Dr. Muir served with the 33rd Regiment in the Light Division of the Eastern army throughout the campaign of 1854-5, including the battles of Alma and Inkerman, sortie of Oct. 26, assaults of the Redan on 18th June and 8th September, siege and fall of Sebastopol (medal and three clasps, Knight of the Legion of Honour, and Turkish medal). Served also against the Indian mutineers in 1857-8. Was principal medical officer of the China expeditionary force under Sir Hope Grant in 1860, and was mentioned in despatches as "having most ably conducted the medical arrangements of the campaign." (Inspector-general, C.B., medal with clasps for Taku and Peking). Dr. Beatson served as surgeon of the 51st Light Infantry throughout the Burmese war of 1852-3 (medal and clasp); was present on board the steam-frigate Feroze in the action with and destruction of the stockades in the Rangoon river, and during the three days' operations ending in the capture of the Great Dagon Pagoda; at the defence of Prome, and repulse of the night attack.—British Medical Journal.

WILL OF THE LATE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The will of the Right Rev. George Edward Lynch Cotton, D.D., Lord Bishop of Calcutta, and Metropolitan in India and Ceylon, was proved in the London Court, on Jan. 16, by Sophia Anne Cotton, the relict, and Henry Richard Tomkinson, Esq., the brother-in-law, the general executors in India and elsewhere; the personality in England being sworn under £12,000. Godfrey Lushington, Esq., of Ockham Park, Surrey, and Mr. Tomkinson are appointed trustees; the bishop's chaplain is appointed as an additional executor to the estate in India; and Mr. Tomkinson and Mrs. Cotton are appointed guardians to infant children. The will is dated in 1864, and his lordship died on Oct. 6, 1866, at Kooshtea, in the East Indies, at the age of 53. It was the desire of this venerable prelate to be buried by the side of his predecessor, Bishop Wilson, in the cathedral at Calcutta. He leaves the bookcases which were erected by him to his successor, and directs that the furniture of the palace be delivered up in as good condition as he received it. The books he leaves to his wife, with the exception of a few to be given to personal friends. The plate he leaves for her use, and then to pass to his son Edward. He has made a provision for his mother and three half sisters, and for his daughter, Ursula. There are various bequests and annuities. The residue of his property he leaves to his wife for her life, and, after her decease, to be divided amongst all his children.

PROPOSED TESTIMONIAL TO THE REV. R. MILMAN.—We (Bucks Advertiser) understand that a number of the leading inhabitants of Great Marlow, desirous of marking their esteem for the Rev. R. Milman, and their appreciation of his zeal and of the many important services he has rendered this parish, have called upon the churchwardens to convene a meeting for the purpose of determining upon presenting the rev. gentleman with a testimonial and a suitable address on the occasion of his appointment to the Bishopric of Calcutta. Mr. Milman will leave England about the middle of February, and will officiate for the last time as vicar of this parish on Sunday, February 10. It is, we believe, proposed to present the testimonial and address on Saturday, February 9. The rev. gentleman was consecrated Bishop of Calcutta by the Archbishop of Canterbury on Saturday last.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 6th inst., at the Bank of England. The proportions allotted were—to Calcutta, £177,570; to Madras, £29,640; and to Bombay, £150,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on all the presidencies. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras, at 1s. 10½d., will receive in full, and on Bombay, about 51 per cent. All tenders above that price will receive in full.

M. PHILARETE CHASLES opened his course of lectures on Foreign Literature, at the College of France, this month, with a minute and highly eulogistic analysis of Mr. Blanchard Jerrold's critical contributions on French Literature, which appears, signed "B. J.," in the Athenæum. The professor said:—"You should see with how much sound sense and wit Mr. Jerrold lays bare our theatre, our papers, our books, and discovers the diseases of that which we are compelled to call our literature. You should see how the British Chroniqueur deals with the leading points of the French Chronique. Less violent than the author of the Odeurs de Paris, Mr. Jerrold has a finer touch than M. Veillot. His analysis of the younger Dumas' last romance is a veritable chef d'œuvre of criticism and satire; his portrait of the Chroniqueur "Peeping Adrien" is quite worthy of La Bruyère.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 2).—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Tanjore, Captain Beasley, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived here this afternoon. She brings ninety-four passengers; specie, value £2,293. 15s. 8d.; also, a general cargo, including 1,744 bales of raw silk, value £150,000 sterling. Amongst the passengers by the Tanjore are fourteen Japanese officers, also seven Japanese men, two women, and three children, jugglers. The officers are from Yokohama, and are going to King's College to be educated.

THE NEWLY-ARRIVED JAPANESE.—The fourteen Japanese officers who arrived on Saturday are youths of high social rank, and have come to England to be educated. In dress, manners, and appearance they differ very little from Englishmen. The twelve Japanese jugglers who arrived in the same ship consist of seven men, two women, two boys, and a girl. The children are whirled round in huge humming tops, the others walk on the slack rope, and do the famous butterfly trick. This is a very clever performance. Artificial butterflies are kept up in the air by means of a fan, and made to alight upon flowers just as butterflies do.

CAPITAL OF THE DELHI RAILWAY.—Within the past month the sum of £122,075 has been paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the Secretary of State for India on account of the capital of the Delhi Railway.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT IN ARTIFICIAL TEETH, AND GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

M. R. EPHRAIM MOSELY, SURGEON DENTIST,

9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE,

Sole Inventor and exclusive Patentee of Artificial Teeth on a soft, elastic, chemically-prepared india-rubber gum. No wires or unsightly fastenings are required; they are more natural, durable, and comfortable than any yet introduced, and are about the specific gravity of cork, thus combining lightness and durability beyond any yet introduced. They are self-adhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within the reach of all.

Consultations free.

. Observe. No connection with any one of the same name.

EPHRAIM MOSELY on the TEETH fully explains his system and exclusive patent. Free on application.

PAINFUL TEETH, OR DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . . It is no secret that of late local anesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

"To none is the public more indebted than to Mr. Day."—Illustrated News, page 826, June 9.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

"Mineralised India-Rubber.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection very improbable, and is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system must prove invaluable."—Globe, May 21, 1866.

"A vast amount of ingenuity has been displayed, not only in the formation of the artificial teeth themselves, but in the method or manner of fixing them."—Morning Advertiser, May 26, 1866.

"Mr. Day has not only succeeded in adding important items to the science of dentistry, but has reduced the operation of painless 'anesthesia' to a matter of form."—Sunday Times, May 27, 1866.

These and every description of Teeth, combining the latest inventions and improvements in dental mechanism, may be procured from Mr. DAY, Dentist (late Principal Assistant to Mr. Rakell, of 8, Grosvenor-street, W.), 291, Regent-street (three doors from the Polytechnic).

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES and COSTUMES of the PEOPLE of INDIA

BY J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial 4to, morocco back, cloth, with numerous Coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

"If the manufacturer studies this book carefully he may add thousands a year to his profits, and there are not five books in the world of which that could be said. . . . Altogether this book is thoroughly creditable to Dr. Forbes Watson's industry and acumen, and to the liberality of the India-office."—Spectator, Jan. 5, 1867.

"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author, Mr. J. Forbes Watson, is conclusive evidence of his being the right man in the right place. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis, or extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art, luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce. We ought to state that the Secretary of State for India not only deserves the highest praise for having had this work prepared and distributed, but likewise for having allowed a publisher to use the type and photographic plates so as to be able to produce a certain number of copies for sale. In no other way could copies of this unique and costly volume have been offered to the public at a reasonable price."—Morning Post, Jan. 3, 1867.

THE HISTORY of LORD SEATON'S

REGIMENT (the 52nd Light Infantry) at the BATTLE of WATERLOO; together with various Incidents connected with that Regiment, not only at Waterloo, but also at Paris, in the North of France, and for several years afterwards. By the Rev. WILLIAM LEFKE, M.A. (of Queen's College, Cambridge), Incumbent of Holbrooke, Derbyshire, and Rural Dean, who carried the 52nd Regimental Colour at Waterloo. The Author claims for Lord Seaton and the 52nd the honour of having defeated, single-handed, without the assistance of the 1st British Guards or any other troops, that portion of the Imperial Guard of France, about 10,000 in number, which advanced to make the last attack on the British position.

M. PHILARETE CHASLES opened his course of lectures on Foreign Literature, at the College of France, this month, with a minute and highly eulogistic analysis of Mr. Blanchard Jerrold's critical contributions on French Literature, which appears, signed "B. J.," in the Athenæum. The professor said:—"You should see with how much sound sense and wit Mr. Jerrold lays bare our theatre, our papers, our books, and discovers the diseases of that which we are compelled to call our literature. You should see how the British Chroniqueur deals with the leading points of the French Chronique. Less violent than the author of the Odeurs de Paris, Mr. Jerrold has a finer touch than M. Veuillot. His analysis of the younger Dumas' last romance is a veritable chef d'œuvre of criticism and satire; his portrait of the Chroniqueur "Peeping Adrien" is quite worthy of La Bruyère.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 2).—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Tanjore, Captain Beasley, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived here this afternoon. She brings ninety-four passengers; specie, value £2,293. 15s. 8d.; also, a general cargo, including 1,744 bales of raw silk, value £150,000 sterling. Amongst the passengers by the Tanjore are fourteen Japanese officers, also seven Japanese men, two women, and three children, jugglers. The officers are from Yokohama, and are going to King's College to be educated.

THE NEWLY-ARRIVED JAPANESE.—The fourteen Japanese officers who arrived on Saturday are youths of high social rank, and have come to England to be educated. In dress, manners, and appearance they differ very little from Englishmen. The twelve Japanese jugglers who arrived in the same ship consist of seven men, two women, two boys, and a girl. The children are whirled round in huge humming tops, the others walk on the slack rope, and do the famous butterfly trick. This is a very clever performance. Artificial butterflies are kept up in the air by means of a fan, and made to alight upon flowers just as butterflies do.

CAPITAL OF THE DELHI RAILWAY.—Within the past month the sum of £122,075 has been paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the Secretary of State for India on account of the capital of the Delhi Railway.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT IN ARTIFICIAL TEETH, AND GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

M. R. EPHRAIM MOSELY,
SURGEON DENTIST,

9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE,

Sole Inventor and exclusive Patentee of Artificial Teeth on a soft, elastic, chemically-prepared india-rubber gum. No wires or unsightly fastenings are required; they are more natural, durable, and comfortable than any yet introduced, and are about the specific gravity of cork, thus combining lightness and durability beyond any yet introduced. They are self-adhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within he reach of all.

Consultations free.

. Observe. No connection with any one of the same name.

EPHRAIM MOSELY on the TEETH fully explains his system and exclusive patent. Free on application.

PAINFUL TEETH, OR DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

"To none is the public more indebted than to Mr. Day."—Illustrated News, page 826, June 9.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

"Mineralised India-Rubber.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection very improbable, and is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system must prove invaluable."—Globe, May 21, 1866.

"A vast amount of ingenuity has been displayed, not only in the formation of the artificial teeth themselves, but in the method or manner of fixing them."—Morning Advertiser, May 26, 1866.

"Mr. Day has not only succeeded in adding important items to the science of dentistry, but has reduced the operation of painless 'anaesthesia' to a matter of form."—Sunday Times, May 27, 1866.

These and every description of Teeth, combining the latest inventions and improvements in dental mechanism, may be procured from Mr. DAY, Dentist (late Principal Assistant to Mr. Russell, of 8, Grosvenor-street, W.), 291, Regent-street (three doors from the Polytechnic).

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES and COSTUMES of the PEOPLE of INDIA

BY J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial 4to, morocco back, cloth, with numerous Coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

"If the manufacturer studies this book carefully he may add thousands a year to his profits, and there are not five books in the world of which that could be said. Altogether this book is thoroughly creditable to Dr. Forbes Watson's industry and acumen, and to the liberality of the India-office."—Spectator, Jan. 5, 1867.

"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author, Dr. J. Forbes Watson, is conclusive evidence of his being the right man in the right place. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis, or extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce. We ought to state that the Secretary of State for India is not only deserving the highest praise for having had this work prepared and distributed, but likewise for having allowed a publisher to use the type and photographic plates so as to be able to produce a certain number of copies for sale. In no other way could copies of this unique and costly volume have been offered to the public at a reasonable price."—Morning Post, Jan. 3, 1867.

THE HISTORY of LORD SEATON'S

REGIMENT (the 52nd Light Infantry) at the BATTLE of WATERLOO; together with various Incidents connected with that Regiment, not only at Waterloo, but also at Paris, in the North of France, and for several years afterwards. By the Rev. WILLIAM LEEKE, M.A. (of Queen's College, Cambridge), Incumbent of Holbrooke, Derbyshire, and Rural Dean, who carried the 52nd Regimental Colour at Waterloo. The Author claims for Lord Seaton and the 52nd the honour of having defeated, single-handed, without the assistance of the 1st British Guards or any other troops, that portion of the Imperial Guard of France, about 10,000 in number, which advanced to make the last attack on the British position.

M. PHILARETE CHASLES opened his course of lectures on Foreign Literature, at the College of France, this month, with a minute and highly eulogistic analysis of Mr. Blanchard Jerrold's critical contributions on French Literature, which appears, signed "B. J.," in the Athenæum. The professor said:—"You should see with how much sound sense and wit Mr. Jerrold lays bare our theatre, our papers, our books, and discovers the diseases of that which we are compelled to call our literature. You should see how the British Chroniqueur deals with the leading points of the French Chronique. Less violent than the author of the Odeurs de Paris, Mr. Jerrold has a finer touch than M. Veuillot. His analysis of the younger Dumas' last romance is a veritable chef d'œuvre of criticism and satire; his portrait of the Chroniqueur "Peeping Adrien" is quite worthy of La Bruyère.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY CALCUTTA AND CHINA MAILS.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 2).—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Tanjore, Captain Beasley, with the heavy portion of the above mails, arrived here this afternoon. She brings ninety-four passengers; specie, value £2,293. 15s. 8d.; also, a general cargo, including 1,744 bales of raw silk, value £150,000 sterling. Amongst the passengers by the Tanjore are fourteen Japanese officers, also seven Japanese men, two women, and three children, jugglers. The officers are from Yokohama, and are going to King's College to be educated.

THE NEWLY-ARRIVED JAPANESE.—The fourteen Japanese officers who arrived on Saturday are youths of high social rank, and have come to England to be educated. In dress, manners, and appearance they differ very little from Englishmen. The twelve Japanese jugglers who arrived in the same ship consist of seven men, two women, two boys, and a girl. The children are whirled round in huge humming tops, the others walk on the slack rope, and do the famous butterfly trick. This is a very clever performance. Artificial butterflies are kept up in the air by means of a fan, and made to alight upon flowers just as butterflies do.

CAPITAL OF THE DELHI RAILWAY.—Within the past month the sum of £122,075 has been paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the Secretary of State for India on account of the capital of the Delhi Railway.

9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE,

Sole Inventor and exclusive Patentee of Artificial Teeth on a soft, elastic, chemically-prepared india-rubber gum. No wires or unsightly fastenings are required; they are more natural, durable, and comfortable than any yet introduced, and are about the specific gravity of cork, thus combining lightness and durability beyond any yet introduced. They are self-adhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within the reach of all.

Consultations free.

. Observe. No connection with any one of the same name.

EPHRAIM MOSELY on the TEETH fully explains his system and exclusive patent. Free on application.

PAINFUL TEETH, OR DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN.

No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. It is no secret that of late local anæsthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

"To none is the public more indebted than to Mr. Day."—Illustrated News, page 826, June 9.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

"Mineralised India-Rubber.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection very improbable, and is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system must prove invaluable."—Globe, May 21, 1866.

"A vast amount of ingenuity has been displayed, not only in the formation of the artificial teeth themselves, but in the method or manner of fixing them."—Morning Advertiser, May 26, 1866.

"Mr. Day has not only succeeded in adding important items to the science of dentistry, but has reduced the operation of painless 'anæsthetic' to a matter of form."—Sunday Times, May 27, 1866.

These and every description of Teeth, combining the latest inventions and improvements in dental mechanism, may be procured from Mr. DAY, Dentist (late Principal Assistant to Mr. Russell, of 8, Grosvenor-street, W.), 291, Regent-street (three doors from the Polytechnic).

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES and COSTUMES of the PEOPLE of INDIA

BY J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial 4to, morocco back, cloth, with numerous Coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

"If the manufacturer studies this book carefully he may add thousands a year to his profits, and there are not five books in the world of which that could be said. Altogether this book is thoroughly creditable to Dr. Forbes Watson's industry and acumen, and to the liberality of the India-office."—Spectator, Jan. 5, 1867.

"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author, Dr. J. Forbes Watson, is conclusive evidence of his being the right man in the right place. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis, or extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce. We ought to state that the Secretary of State for India not only deserves the highest praise for having had this work prepared and distributed, but likewise for having allowed a publisher to use the type and photographic plates so as to be able to produce a certain number of copies for sale. In no other way could copies of this unique and costly volume have been offered to the public at a reasonable price."—Morning Post, Jan. 3, 1867.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

ACUTE RHEUMATISM.—In all severe pains in the joints and muscles, after due fomentation with hot water, the soothing action of this Ointment is most remarkable; it seems at once to lessen inflammation, ease pain, reduce the swelling, restore the free circulation, and expel the disease. In these complaints, indeed, Holloway's Ointment and Pills are an invaluable specific. The Ointment should be rubbed as near the part in pain as the patient can bear; it is absorbed and directly conveyed to the diseased textures, when, acting on nerves, vessels, and glands, it will arrest disease and again establish healthy action. The aperient and purifying qualities of the Pills have the happiest effect in assisting the Ointment.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta mail—via Bombay—brings us our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 11th, Madras to the 14th, and Bombay to the 19th of January.

This is the first of the extra mails, with regard to which the Times of India says:—"The P. and O. Co.'s steamer Ottawa leaves for Suez to-day with the first of the extra mails, and which for the present are to be despatched alternately with the regular mails. The steamers will run in conjunction with the Calcutta mails, but the time of despatch being only four or five days later than the regular mail, the arrangement is not generally looked upon as more than a preliminary step to the establishment of the regular weekly service."

Among the few items of news from Calcutta may be notified the conclusion of the inquest connected with the accident on the Hoogley. The result was a verdict of culpable homicide against Captain Taylor, the commander of the steamer, who has been committed for trial.

The Ambassador from Bokhara, who lately arrived in Lahore, and had an interview with the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, had come to Calcutta. He arrived on the 7th ult. It was said when he was at Lahore that he would be accompanied on his visit to Calcutta by Pundit Munphool, the native officer who lately returned from Central Asia. The result of the mission is not difficult to anticipate, if only from the fact that Sir John Lawrence has just informed the envoy of the Khan of Kokan, who recently entreated his assistance against the Russians, that he cannot interfere with the domestic affairs of that country. In the meantime news had reached Calcutta that the Russians were pushing their recent advantages against the Emir of Bokhara with much vigour. After having been defeated in three battles the Emir had taken up his position at Samarcand with the remnants of his army, consisting of 10,000 men, and was there awaiting the enemy's advance.

The members of the Famine Commission had nearly concluded their inquiries in Orissa, and were soon to return to Calcutta. It is said they have found the result to have been under rather than over estimated, and that the total number of deaths by starvation amounted to about a million and a-half.

The official flight to Simla is not to be delayed so long this year as it was last, for we hear from Calcutta that all the office establishments are to leave that city during the first week of March.

A very proper circular has been addressed to officers commanding divisions, districts, stations, and batteries, to the effect that, "in consequence of unwholesome foods and drinks having been sold to a detachment of European troops very recently at Sahibgunge by native vendors, whereby the health of many of the men was greatly affected, the Commander-in-Chief finds it necessary to enjoin upon all officers in charge of detachments, or camping grounds and rest houses, on the line of rail or elsewhere, the necessity for constant and careful supervision over the purchase by their men of every description of food and drink offered for sale by native or other vendors. The precautions on this head, detailed in Adjutant-General's circular of 13th June, 1863 (republished in G.O.C.C. of the 9th September, 1865), should be adopted as far as possible on the march, as well as in quarters."

It is said that Mr. Massey contemplates the establishment of savings banks in India, and using the funds as advances to the local governments for minor agricultural improvements.

Madras seems to be principally occupied in discussing the appointment of Colonel Denison to the place of the late Colonel Temple. The Athenæum and Daily News says:—"The community in general looked with considerable anxiety for Lord Napier's appointment of a successor to Colonel Temple, which has now taken place, and has occasioned deep and universal disappointment, his lordship's choice having fallen on Lieutenant-Colonel A. Denison, brother of our late Governor, who possesses no known qualification for that responsible post. Whatever his abilities may be, he has never yet displayed them in any conspicuous way, and he is probably as ignorant of municipal affairs, and as much unacquainted with the physical condition, and wants of the presidency as the veriest stranger in it. No one can conceive what led Lord Napier to use his patronage in such an improper and unpopular way." The Madras Times, which strongly condemns the job, has learnt "that the selection of Colonel Denison did not arise from any promise made to Sir William that his relative should be cared for when an opportunity of quartering him on the public purse offered itself; nor yet was it attributable to the private solicitations of that officer himself. His nomination, it is said, was purely spontaneous on the governor's part, which is the strangest feature of the business."

The Athenæum is uncertain about Burmese affairs. "We are unable," it says, "to state with any confidence what has really been the upshot of Colonel Phayre's mission to Mandalay. That it was received with high honour, and that the King of Burmah warmly acknowledged the important services rendered to him by the British authorities during the late revolutionary crisis is certain. The execution of a new treaty is also positively asserted on the one hand, and we are told that under the operation of it the country will soon be restored to a state of prosperity. British steamers will be allowed to proceed up to the head waters of navigation in the Irrawaddy. Except the payment of a fixed rate of customs duties, all obstacles and trammels are removed from trade, and it is anticipated that the treaty will no doubt place our political and commercial relations with the Burmese on the most satisfactory footing. Four native deputies of the King accompanied the Chief Commissioner back to Rangoon, for the presumed purpose of going with him to Calcutta on a mission to the Viceroy. All this is satisfactory if correct, but then, on the other hand, we find it asserted that no treaty was agreed to by his Majesty, who is averse from contracting fresh engagements of any kind. Time only can tell us which of these two stories comes nearest to the truth. We fear, however, that no concession has been either asked or made on the grand subject of the railway between British Burmah and the Chinese frontier, whatever else the Treaty (if a fact) may contain; as the Supreme Government have declined to sanction expenditure even for the survey of the country through which the line would run, and will only improve existing communications by a small outlay. The vast importance of the railway is still unperceived at Calcutta; a melancholy instance of blindness which cannot be too much deplored."

According to a statement which we quote in another column, Calcutta is not so blind in this respect as is made out, a survey for the railway having been actually ordered.

From Bombay we learn that the Governor had received telegraphic information that his successor, Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald, would probably arrive about the 16th February.

The farewell dinner by the Byculia Club to H.E. Sir Bartle Frere had been postponed, as his Excellency would remain in India a week or two longer than was expected.

Mr. Stuart had arrived and taken up his appointment as Secretary to the Bank of Bombay. Mr. D. Robertson, the Acting Secretary, comes home on leave of absence.

The proprietors of the Bank of Bombay have confirmed the resolution to reduce the capital stock 50 per cent. On a motion proposing a vote of thanks to the directors, a long discussion took place as to the securities still held by the bank, but the shareholders failed in their efforts to obtain any definite information.

The Bombay Government has expressed its willingness to renew, under certain conditions, its agreement with the Bank of Bombay regarding the Treasury for another year.

The Hon. Mr. Shaw Stewart's Bill to facilitate the transshipment of goods imported into Bombay by steamers has been referred to a select committee.

A Marine Court of Inquiry has been held at Bombay to inquire into the cause of the troop ship Edwin Fox striking on a reef at the Maldiv Islands, on her passage to Bombay. The Court exonerated the commander (Captain A. J. Molison) of all blame, and commended him for the seamanlike measures which he adopted to save the lives of all on board.

The Murrees had committed a raid at Nusserabad, Scinde, and driven away 200 camels.

A fire recently occurred at Sholapore, by which 1,000 bales of cotton were destroyed.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, February 12, 1867.

MR. KINNAIRD'S QUESTIONS.

MR. KINNAIRD did not make much by his questions of Friday. The Government, it seems, have not yet determined upon any measures in consequence of the decision in respect to the rights of the Ryots in Oude. With regard to the Famine, Lord Cranborne simply announced the appointment of the Commission, adding that there is every hope of a speedy report. Mr. Bright, who appears to consider that every man in an official position—even though so independent an one as that of a judge—must have a natural turn for telling lies, wanted to know whether any "independent" gentlemen formed any portion of the Commission, so that it might be likely to obtain greater public confidence. Lord Cranborne was obliged to own the soft impeachment that, besides Judge Campbell, one of the Commissioners belonged to the revenue department, and to confess that another was a Colonel. The objection was characteristic of Mr. Bright, who should remember that Governments cannot always command the gratuitous services of "independent" gentlemen, and that if paid they cease to be independent in the sense understood. When the Government here had to send out a Commission to Jamaica the other day, they did not get a merchant out of the City, but appointed such persons as a legal functionary from the Bench and a General Officer.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE'S FOREIGN POLICY.

In the last number of the Edinburgh Review there is a semi-official article on the foreign policy of Sir John Lawrence. The inspired writer must be rather disappointed to find that his ideas with reference to His Excellency's intentions have not proved correct, and that "masterly inactivity" is not the aim of his policy. We read that forts are to be erected on the Punjab frontier, evidently with the object of opposing some enemy's progress. Sir John Lawrence has probably calculated the cost of these useful public works, and from whence the men to garrison the forts are to be found. Assuming the news to be true, we cannot protest too strongly against such waste of money. On all sides the cry in India is for useful public works. Irrigation, roads, and railroads, these are absolute wants. Yet we are to erect fortresses, and drain our strength from India by sending garrisons to these prisons, thereby spending thousands, when our subjects are dying and produce rotting, because we have no food to give them, or because we have no means of conveying what food we have to them.

The Friend of India has given out a note of fear lest we should lose the Central Asian trade, and the article seems to doubt Sir John Lawrence's capacity for negotiating with the Bokharian envoy. Why should we treat with men who have never had the smallest respect for embassies or treaties, who have repulsed every approach to their country, and who have even fostered intrigues against our Government? Again, is the moral and religious view of the question never to be considered? Are we to prefer Mussulmans, ignorant fanatics, men without any knowledge or respect for the laws of nations—are we to prefer them to Russians? There must be room for the trade of both Russia and ourselves in these vast countries. United we might really do something towards the advancement of the nation. Commerce would be free and safe, civilisation would penetrate into hitherto almost unknown parts, and the inhabitants now oppressed would soon learn to hail the presence of those combined Powers who would no longer be aggressive but protective, who would labour, not for war but for peace.

HOW PEOPLE ARE DROWNED IN INDIA.

ACCIDENTS by water have been frequent and fatal of late in India. The drowning of Bishop Cotton—followed so curiously by a misadventure which well nigh brought a similar fate upon his officiating successor—was only the first of a series of catastrophes resulting in the deaths among the boating party on the Adyar, and the holiday excursionists of the Hoogley steamer.

Our countrymen in India have such inveterate enemies in the climate and the cholera that they may well be more stringent than other communities in guarding against casualties within human control, as well as more jealous of neglect on the part of those whose duty it is to make provision for the purpose. The inevitable dangers of Indian life are undoubtedly great, but they are not many in number. They are mainly comprised under the two heads referred to—the climate and the cholera—and there are a large proportion of European constitutions which may afford to brave the one, while it is not everybody whose fate brings them in contact with the other. Reasonably strong persons, indeed, enjoying average health, and taking proper care of themselves, may expect to go through an ordinary career in India without much damage, while there are thousands who have never had to face the ravages of a deadly disease. As for other perils which “people at home” are apt to associate with the daily life of an Asiatic country, they are such as with ordinary care may be avoided altogether, and without ordinary care will be found to fall upon a very small proportion of the population. How many of our countrymen, for instance, are bitten by snakes or centipedes in the course of a year? How many are mauled by tigers, hugged by bears, or gored by wild boars? Many persons live half their lives in India and never see half-a-dozen snakes; and although centipedes are more obtrusive, they are not aggressive, and will not bite unless you are incautious enough to tread upon them. As for wild beasts, it must be in very savage districts indeed where a traveller will be attacked by them unless he be pursuing them as game, purposely intruding into their haunts, and himself taking the initiative in hostilities. And after all there are fewer sportsmen killed by wild beasts in India than are killed at home through horse accidents in the hunting field, or gun accidents in the shooting preserves.

But our business is with the late misadventures in which water is concerned. Of the three referred to only one is traceable to natural causes, and that only to a partial extent. The boating party on the Adyar grounded on a sandbank, but—apart from other possibilities in which want of skill or experience may be concerned—it is not to be supposed that the channel would have been lost had not the occupants of the boat allowed night to overtake them—the darkness, under such circumstances, necessarily rendering navigation hazardous in the extreme. Moreover, although the two officers who lost their lives were doubtless carried away through the strength of the current being greater than they could encounter, it must be remembered that the ladies whom they attempted to save were a source of embarrassment, preventing the employment of their full force. Indeed, it must be considered that Col. Temple and Mr. Hope lost their lives mainly through their gallant and humane endeavours to save the lives of others. It is certain that Mr. Bostock, who had nobody to take care of but himself, was able to secure his own safety. As for the accident to Bishop Cotton, the circumstances are very simple, and admit of no doubt. The lamented prelate was sacrificed to the insufficiency of the arrangements made for his landing, considering his age and physically weak condition. With regard to the catastrophe on the Hoogley there is less certainty in respect to some points, but none as concerns the principal point of all. It may be a question whether the captain of the Calcutta was drunk or not. The line between intoxication and sobriety is proverbially difficult to draw when the decision depends upon evidence. Some men look drunk when they are sober; others look sober when they are drunk. Some may be drunk and keep all their faculties effective for the duty to which they are accustomed; others may be irreproachably sober, and yet blunder whatever they are about, through nervousness and timidity. There are instances in which a man has done the most essential service through a “happy thought” suggested by a state which has been lyrically described as making him as great as a king. Nothing is more difficult, in fact, than to say in certain cases how far a man is drunk and how far he is sober, and, supposing him to be drunk, how far, for practical purposes, he is “the worse” for liquor. As for the witnesses, some observe more than the fact, others less, and some do not observe at all. Some, too, with every capacity for forming a fair judgment, find it difficult to recall their exact impressions.

There appear to have been all the usual difficulties in estimating the precise condition of the captain of the Calcutta. But whatever his state may have been, there was no doubt as to the immediate cause of the calamity—the striking of the vessel upon the sunken wreck. That wreck had lain for more than two years in the midst of the channel of the river, and was known to be such a source of danger that it was deemed necessary to warn off passing craft by means of a buoy. At Bombay, when vessels sink in the harbour, attempts are made to get them up again, and in instances which have occurred of late, attended by success. But the Government of Bengal seems to take no heed of any such duty, and navigation is left to take its chance in the Hoogley, just as the poor were left to take their chance in Orissa. It is of no use blaming the Government of India for this omission. It is distinctly the local government of Bengal upon which the responsibility rests. The loss of the Calcutta and of the twenty unfortunates who shared its fate is one more link in the chain of misgovernment with which Sir Cecil Beadon has so long bound Bengal.

COLONELS OF THE STAFF CORPS.—It has been determined that colonels of the Staff Corps, on becoming entitled to colonel's allowance, will be allowed the pay of colonel, or twenty-five shillings per diem. This decision, together with other impending concessions, will probably necessitate the extension of the dates of entry to the Staff Corps as laid down in Lord Cranborne's despatch of the 8th August.

BENGAL.

THE STEAMBOAT ACCIDENT ON THE HOOGHLY.

The inquest upon the body of Mr. Simeon was concluded on the 9th January. The following evidence is important, as being that of the master attendant :—

Captain H. Howe : I am officiating master attendant and conservator of the Port of Calcutta. I produce a chart of the port, corrected up to January, 1865, and I believe it to be a correct chart of the river. I know the course a steamer, such as the ferry-boat Calcutta, should take, plying from Neemuk Mehal Ghaut to the railway jetties, either at Armenian Ghaut or Howrah. (Witness marked the course on the chart.) I have marked a red ink line on the chart to show the course to be taken. That is the only authorised channel that there is, but according to the time of tide and daylight, a man might make a shorter track by threading his way among the shipping, but after dark this is the only safe track in the regulated channel. I know the position of the Satellite wreck buoy. It is on the port hand or the Howrah side of the river going up. I know the steam ferry boat Calcutta, and her draught of water. In my opinion a course for such a steamer laden with over seven hundred passengers, crossing from Fort Point to the Howrah side, and continuing that course in a line with the Satellite buoy, would be most certainly an improper course at near the end of the ebb, at or about half-past five or six o'clock. I decidedly say it would be a most dangerous course, and such a course as any experienced commander ought to know would be highly dangerous. (Captain Thoms' deposition was read over to the witness by the coroner.) From Mr. Thoms' deposition I know the course taken by the steamer as described by him, and I say he was pursuing a course over shoal water for half a mile leading him direct up to that wreck buoy, instead of keeping in the authorised channel. She was in most imminent and certain danger. All things considered by me in respect of the steering of the steamer, I cannot imagine any reason for Captain Taylor taking the Calcutta into the position described by Mr. Thoms. I think that if a commander were in liquor, it would sufficiently account to my mind for the position of the vessel and of her subsequent foundering. In my opinion it needed all the captain's care, skill, and attention on that steamer, freighted as she was with so many hundreds of passengers, and dusk coming on. I have no personal knowledge of Captain Taylor, but I believe he has considerable reputation as a commander. The buoy is such a buoy as is known to all commanders as a wreck buoy. It is marked with a large W, signifying wreck. It was not only hazardous, but certain wreck and destruction to take the vessel on the buoy. I sounded the river all round the Calcutta with Mr. Peterson, the Harbour Master, the morning after the accident, and found a small hole with eighteen feet of water about two hundred feet to the S. W. of her. The Calcutta was just on the edge of the shoal, and there was three fathoms water on the starboard side of her. Supposing the vessel to have struck and passed over the buoy and then struck and appearing to be going down by the head, it was not unreasonable that there should be great fear on the part of the passengers. I think all things considered that it was a natural consequence for them to take to the water to save themselves by swimming off to the craft near. There was a fear of the vessel blowing up, as the steam had not been blown off. I do not, as I know the facts, and have experience, say that it was wise for them to take to the water. Every soul would have been saved had they remained quietly on board, barring the blowing up. The generality of the passengers would not be likely to know the extent of the danger or otherwise. A vessel that had struck and filled with water, and which was apparently going down, would appear highly dangerous to all on board who were not acquainted with the locality. I cannot suggest any other reason but the most utter recklessness on the part of the commander of the Calcutta in allowing his vessel to get into the position he was for five or ten minutes before he struck the buoy. As the facts are stated in this case, the nearest safe course would have been between the line of moorings and the ships, about 500 feet to the eastward of the buoy. As to mere depth of water he might have passed within fifty feet of it, but I should think that a reckless and careless course, and highly dangerous. I consider even excitement from liquor on the part of a captain with the charge of a vessel largely freighted with passengers highly improper and culpable. I don't think there was any danger of the vessel taking a broad sheer if the captain had been attending to his duty, and looking after the sea-cunny. From the position of the wreck I do not think she did take a broad sheer. There was no possibility of the sea-cunny giving the vessel a broad sheer if the captain had been looking after him. There was no occasion in this case to turn round to make the Armenian Ghaut Jetty, as it was ebb tide. Supposing the captain to be going to the Howrah Jetty, it would not in any way authorise him to be where he was. It is all shoal water to the westward of the buoy. At that time of the ebb, supposing the Calcutta had gone over the buoy alone at full speed, and without getting upon the wreck, it might have caused her to start a plate and become a wreck. We have had the locality of the wreck examined, and we have found a portion of the segment of the iron wheel of the Satellite, and I think the Calcutta must have struck upon that. It was found about twenty or thirty feet to the westward of the buoy, and there was only three feet water above it. The wreck was blown up as effectually as the engineer could do it, but the pieces of iron work that would not float remained, and this buoy was placed expressly to warn vessels off this dangerous ground.

Some further depositions having been taken, the coroner summed up the evidence, and drew the attention of the jurors to the law regarding "culpable homicide, amounting to murder, and culpable homicide not amounting to murder." The jury, after some deliberation, returned the following verdict, "That Job Simeon came to his death by drowning, in consequence of the wreck of the steamer Calcutta, commanded by Capt. Taylor, on board of which he was one of the passengers;" and the jury are of opinion that inasmuch as the wreck with loss of life was caused by the gross mismanagement of the commander, he, Capt. Taylor, is guilty of culpable homicide, not amounting to murder." The coroner then committed the prisoner to take his trial at the ensuing criminal sessions of the High Court, and he was removed in custody.

We take the following from a Calcutta paper :—

We believe that another body was found in the river yesterday evening, which is supposed to be that of Miss Sophia Robertson, one of the unfortunate number drowned on New Year's evening. A brooch and some other trifling articles of jewellery were found on the deceased.

The body of a child was picked up yesterday morning nearly off Prinsep's Ghaut. It is supposed to be one of the number lost on New Year's evening. This makes the eleventh body recovered.

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS IN CHINA.—We commend the following description of the examination halls at Canton to the three Universities of India which find it so difficult to prevent fraud among the candidates. It is given by Dr. Keer in a paper read to the North China branch of the Asiatic Society. For upwards of a thousand years has the system of competitive examination for literary degrees existed in China; and it has received not only the sanction but also the support of every dynasty which has ruled the empire. The particular hall described is intended for the triennial examinations at which the graduates of the first degree, Sui Tsai, are required to be present; and it forms a specimen of similar buildings which exist in every province. Its length is 1,330 ft., and its width 583 ft., the whole being surrounded by a high wall, there being two gates near the respective south ends of the east and west walls leading to the enclosure which admits to the main entrance. The hall has two great divisions, the ranges of cells for the candidates, and the apartment for the officers who superintend the examination. There are no less than 8,653 cells; which are 5 ft. 9 in. deep and 3 ft. 8 in. wide. A groove in the side wall admits a plank, which answers the purpose of a bed at night and a seat or table during the day time. The part of the hall occupied by the examiners is subdivided into two sections, which communicate with each other. The first or outer part is occupied by the officers; the second or inner part is devoted to the imperial commissioners and their assistants, whose business it is to examine the essays. At the end of the Avenue is the Chi Kung-Tong, or hall of perfect honesty, where the essays are examined. Each candidate is put in his cell the night before to collect his thoughts. At daylight the next morning a printed copy of the texts which have been collected by the Imperial Commissioner is placed in the hands of each, and instantly ten thousand brains are at work, ten thousand pencils commit to paper the learned, eloquent, and poetical thoughts which spring into existence from the magic influence of the words of Confucius and Mencius. Many toil on through the night, and some have only finished at dawn; but those who are ready hand in their composition before daylight and return to their lodging for a day's rest and to recruit the over-taxed energies for another struggle. Often there are eight or ten thousand candidates of ages varying from that of the youth of twenty to that of the grey-haired patriarch who has already taken the first degree. After the examination is concluded the names of the successful candidates are announced at the entrance to the Governor's Yamen; and messengers carry the joyful news by express to all parts of the province. A feast is given by the Governor to the new graduates, after which they go in State dress to worship the tablets of their ancestors, and to make calls on relatives and friends. The examination is described by the North China Herald as involving a gigantic exercise of memory on old saws and abstract moralisms, to the exclusion of practical and useful knowledge.

THE CASHMERE CHIEF AND TRADE WITH CENTRAL ASIA.—Mr. Forsyth's remonstrances on the oppressive and illegal exactions of the Cashmere chief, which have nearly killed our trade with Central Asia through Ladak, have borne fruit. The Maharajah of Cashmere in 1863-64 made what the Punjab Government considered "very material and beneficial" modifications of his tariff. In consequence of the remission of all customs' duties on the Peshawur and Derajat border by Sir John Lawrence, when Acting-Resident at Lahore in 1848, the trade with Afghanistan, particularly by the routes leading from Peshawur, greatly increased. It was at the same time pointed out that access to the markets of Eastern Turkistan through the natural route passing through Cashmere was virtually barred by the excessive duties exacted under the orders of the Maharajah. Sir Henry Lawrence made an agreement subsequently binding the Maharaja to collect only the "ancient duties," but no one knew their amount, and oppression was as great as ever. On Sir R. Montgomery's representations he agreed to reduce his arbitrary rates if allowed to acquire the Taluqua of Bijwat, in commutation of a loan which he had made to the British Government of six lacs of rupees. Subsequently he did promise to reduce the duties, and their amount may be imagined from the fact that the rate on tea was lowered from 78 to 12½ per cent. A uniform transit duty of 5 per cent. was fixed for goods going to Leh. The trader to Yarkand by Srinuggur is thus placed in a position financially not less advantageous than that of one trading with Bokhara by Peshawur. Characteristically, however, the alteration in the rates was not made generally known to the merchants interested in the trade. When it was discovered that all these promises were empty air, so far as Kooloo at least is concerned, the Punjab Government addressed the Maharaja on the 8th ultimo, took steps to inform the traders of the reduced rates, and deputed a native news-writer to Ladakh to report all arbitrary exactions. This may do something to encourage trade between Khoten and British India for a time. But the Cashmere officials should be closely watched, and no native news-writer will be listened to. An English agent must be stationed in Ladakh.—Friend of India.

ANGLO-INDIAN LITERATURE.—The Englishman says:—With the New Year the first number of the new magazine, Indian Society, made its appearance. Taking into consideration the many difficulties and disadvantages under which the promoters of such a publication labour in this country, I was not prepared for anything very superior, and have not consequently been disappointed in my expectations. Indeed, I may safely say that as a whole the magazine is most decidedly a success, very neatly got up altogether, but wanting perhaps in some of those genuine, good, sterling articles, to the production of which this country seems unfavourable. A neatly designed cover, and a very fair table of contents, recommend the magazine to the Indian reader, in whose eyes it must, as a purely local publication, possess some degree of interest. I shall notice briefly the contents of the periodical, and as an impartial critic, "I will nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice." There are four page illustrations, which, with the cover, do some credit to the pencil of the amateur artist. The prologue, which is cleverly written, and the opening address, are so modest that they fairly disarm criticism. The poetry is equal to the ordinary run of such productions. Then we have a very readable article, well-suited to a magazine, "On a few co-incident superstitions"; another which promises well, when we have a little more of it, "On Calcutta Birds," and as a specimen of the gorgeous style, we are treated to a few thoughts on the "Famine in Orissa," the said "thoughts" disclosing no new or brilliant ideas. "Christmas tide" is a nice bit of prose writing, &c., &c.—A new publication at Jubbulpore is thus referred to by the Delhi Gazette:—There is no holding the Central Provinces. It is clear that the "Nisf Jehan" must be removed at once from Ispahan to Jubbulpore. Not content with being the model province in political economy and fine arts, Templeistan now comes boldly forward in the arena of literature, and a most creditable attempt it makes. Under the patronage of the Central Committee of the Jubbulpore Exhibition, "Once in a Way," a publication of 100 pages, has made its appearance. We have not had time yet to do more than glance over its contents. We have, however, given our readers an opportunity of judging of its literary merits by the republication of an amusing poem from the pen of Ingoldsby, jun., called, "Dawk Bungalow Cheer." The miscellany is exceedingly well got up, being published by Wyman and Co., well printed, and on good paper, and has much less of a colonial look about it than any magazine we have ever before seen published in India. The table of contents is as follows:—"Christmas—Forward (a Dream and Medley)—Muddun Mahulf. (The Ancient Legend. The Modern Lay)—The Padre's Story; or the Ferry Waits—The Scenery of the Nerbudda—Ayodhya in the Olden Time—Witchcraft in the Central Provinces. (An Attempt at Historic Parallel)—Hindoo Dissenters—Dawk Bungalow Cheer. Stray Leaves of an Indian Horace—What the Sepoys Saw at Thebes—Hero's Lament—The Death of the Old Year."

PRESENT STATE OF BALASORE.—A correspondent writes from Balasore to the Indian Daily News to the effect that the local officials are redoubling their energy in relieving the famine since the appointment of an independent Commission. "Many are the shifts made, and various the schemes formed to prove things to the satisfaction of the Commission. At Balasore the relief committee, or, in other words, the officials, have doubled their attentions to the very scanty number of paupers that still live to eat their food. Sheds are fast rising at a place called Shamblepore, a mile from the station, where the sick paupers will be taken particular care of. This is the first time that proper attention has been directed to the sick. Some European members have busied themselves in collecting, with the help of the meheters, the bones of the dead that lie scattered here and there, and almost everywhere, and have buried them carefully underground, to remove, as it were, all traces of death." The writer goes so far as to assert that, in their anxiety to shield themselves, the officials do not scruple to conceal facts, and cites a case in which, after it had been proved that from the neglect of a certain official to send rice to Santipore there was an appalling number of deaths, the matter was dropped, not being even recorded in the committee's proceedings. There is doubtless exaggeration in this, but that no exaggeration can misrepresent the unbelief of the local officials as to the absence of rice in the very months when the mortality was greatest all testimony is unanimous.

NATIVE OPINION.—The comments of the Bengalee papers on the refusal of the Government of India to interfere in the always barbarous, and sometimes murderous, custom of immersing the dying in the Ganges mud and water, are significant. Those that go in for all the monstrosities of idolatrous orthodoxy are loud in their praises of the Government's indifference. For instance the Som Prokash condemns Sir Cecil Beadon, who happened for once to be right, and the Education Gazette condemns Sir John Lawrence, whom all philanthropists, native and English, consider to have been misled by the grossly inaccurate representations of an orthodox Baboo. The latter writes:—"We do not wish Government to interfere with religious matters, nor do we ask that they should hurt the feelings of the people; but we must in justice say that many dying people who do not believe in the efficacy of dying on the banks of the Ganges have to submit to the wishes of their relatives regarding their removal. That some discipline should be exercised in such cases is neither contrary to religion nor reason."

DRIVERS FOR THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—A very large number of men have been trained on the East Indian Railway line as drivers, and many such drivers are now in the service. Europeans and Eurasians having no previous knowledge of the work, but offering themselves for employment, are, on condition of their physical capability, taken on as firemen, from which position they are periodically advanced to the higher grades of shedmen, shunters, pilotmen, and drivers. Their advancement to each successive grade depends on their competency and conduct. So far the experiment of training drivers in India has been a complete success. The railway officers do not believe, however, that an attempt to carry the experiment beyond Eurasians could result in anything but failure. In any case of emergency of danger, the native would, it seems, almost certainly be entirely in want of that coolness and presence of mind by which so many serious accidents to life and property are averted, even at the last moment of imminent peril.

MISS CARPENTER IN CALCUTTA.—Mr. Justice Phear, who has succeeded Major Malleson as President of the Bethune Society, presided at a meeting at which Miss Carpenter addressed a large audience, chiefly of natives, on female education and juvenile reformatories. She illustrated her striking statements as to the success of the reformatory which she conducts in Bristol by photographs, showing what the young thieves were when they entered and what many have since become in the colonies and America. Mr. Phear stated that when he first entered on the administration of justice in this country he found it painful when he discovered there were no reformatories to send juvenile offenders to. More especially in India he thought that simple punishment would act very poorly as a deterring influence. He ascribed the comparative absence of juvenile criminals in this country to the native mode of life, families living together in such a way that each individual man or woman, boy or girl, is not entirely dependent on his or her own earnings for their daily bread. On the other hand, Mr. Phear should have remembered that crime is in India a hereditary profession, and that more efforts are needed than even in England to rescue the young from the vicious and criminal pursuits to which so many of them are born, and which they consider, like Thuggee, not only innocent, but praiseworthy.

A GROWL AT THE P. AND O.—The unfortunate 140 passengers crowded in the P. and O. steamer Mongolia, which, after a tedious voyage from Suez, altogether broke down at Galle, have addressed earnest remonstrances to the Calcutta agent. Eight passengers, who were doctors, sign a separate memorial describing a state of filth and consequent malaria and sickness on board, such as we hesitate to quote, and was sufficient to make all invalids fit to go home instead of coming out to India. The sherry on board was most obviously adulterated, nauseous to the palate, and unwholesome to the digestion; it was only consumed at all from the absence of any other wine which could be considered a tolerable substitute. For days there were no potatoes or lime juice. And remonstrance was ineffectual. There were two baths for seventy gentlemen, the third bath being used for condensing fresh water, and the bathing water was frequently mixed with coal dust. This company must look to it. Complaints against it are chronic, and have sometimes been factious. But those of the Mongolia and Baroda victims exceed all in justice.

FAREWELL DINNER TO THE OFFICERS OF THE 1ST ROYALS.—The officers of the Royal Artillery, at Kamptee, entertained the officers of the 1st Royals on the 31st ult. It is superfluous to add that the banquet was a most sumptuous one, every delicacy that the more fastidious epicure could wish for having been profusely provided. We understand that both the farewell entertainment and also the games owed much of their success to that popular and distinguished officer, Lieutenant Colonel Bond, commanding Royal Artillery.—Central India Times, Jan. 5.

A SOCIETY.—We have not as yet seen noticed a fact which is certainly deserving of some attention; and to which we should suppose the notice of Government has been directed, though we have not heard that such is the case. From the information which we have received it would appear that an affiliated "society" on an extensive scale has been formed, and is rapidly increasing in the Upper Provinces, the members being all natives, and the head quarters being, we believe, at or near Ferozepore. We do not believe that, as yet, this society has any political significance or avowed object—certainly none that is known beyond the circle of its members—and it is obviously not a religious brotherhood, with its admissions confined to any one sect or creed of the native community; being, on the contrary, in this respect more like our own institution, freemasonry, and freely admitting all religions and beliefs, Hindus, Mussulmans, Sikhs, &c., within its pale. Nor, it would appear, are we justified in calling this brotherhood a secret society, inasmuch as there does not appear to be much, if any, concealment as regards being admitted into, or belonging to it; but, like freemasonry, it has secret forms and ceremonies connected with inauguration, and its meetings are held with closed doors, and the exclusion of all strangers is carefully provided for. We need not at present give any further details as to this recently formed society, the objects and intention of which may possibly be peaceful and harmless enough; but we think it just as well to draw timely notice to its existence and its steady increase within our territories. The local paper from which we extract the above adds in a subsequent issue:—"We are now enabled, from careful enquiry, to give more correct and definite information than we could furnish the other day concerning the 'Secret Society' to whose existence in and near the Punjab we then drew attention. It appears, then, that this new brotherhood are called kotay or kireetee, the former word meaning, we believe, a repeater or mumbling of prayers; and the latter, a religious devotee. The origin of the society, which is now some four or five years old, is attributed to a carpenter who resided in the neighbourhood of Ludianah; but who, it would appear, came originally from Umrtsir. The sect are said to be deists; and, unlike our High Church party, do not recognise idols, pictures, or any objects of material worship. We were in error in saying, the other day, that the society is open to all the religions of Upper India; as Christians, Mahomedans, and Jews are not eligible for admission, which is confined to Sikhs and Hindus of the lowest castes for the most part; though some Khalsa Sikhs of family and position are amongst the members. From all that we can learn, the sect is founded on the creed and principles of the 'Gooroo-granth'; and the ceremony of admission is believed to consist in some oath of secrecy being administered, a drug or libation being also given, which is considered to seal the obligation. The members are also said to accept the condition of poverty as Fakirs, but we believe that this is not absolutely necessary to qualify for admission. It is further believed, as we stated the other day, that this sect has at present no political significance or importance; but the members state that they will declare themselves, and, as we understand, show their flag, nusheen, when they have 'a lakh of men.' The sect is now believed to number about a thousand or fifteen hundred members; but its adherents are fast increasing, especially in the Puttiala territory, where, and in the Punjab, its existence is well known, and watched with considerable interest, of which perhaps it is also deserving elsewhere."

THE A, B, AND C BATTERIES, 11TH BRIGADE ROYAL ARTILLERY, under the command of Major P. W. L'Estrange, has embarked for England on board the Malabar.

THE EDEN GARDENS CONTROVERSY.—One of the Calcutta papers publishes a parody upon "Paradise and the Peri"—"Paradise and the Peeler"—satirising Mr. Stuart Hogg's lamentably unsuccessful attempt to regulate admission to the Eden Gardens by tickets, which our correspondents have been complaining of. The production is occasionally coarse, but very amusing:—

"Poor race of men!" said the pitying Bobby,
Dearly ye pay for your new King Log,
Messrs. Wauchope and Schaleh had each their hobby,

But the trail of the Service is all over Hogg!"

The rhymster represents none as admitted but a Queen's officer of doubtful morals and a silly Haileybury civil servant, who unite in this chorus:—

"Farewell! ye snobs of earth, who ride
Upon the old Course after five,
Or creep along the river side
Through what you call your evening drive!
Farewell! ye poor plebeian swells
Who gather in crowds along the Strand.
Oh! what are the brightest joys you've known
Compared to ours when all alone
We roam through Eden's flowery land?
Joy, joy, for ever! our task is done!
We've got Hogg's pass, and Eden is won!"

The remonstrances of the public and the failure of the attempt have resulted in the opening of the Gardens as before. Mr. S. Hogg's excuse is that he wanted money for the Town band and to light the Gardens, but the public insist on believing that this is only half the truth.

VESSELS CHARTERED FOR TROOPS.—We learn that amongst other ships which have been taken up for the conveyance of troops, invalid, and time-expired men to England, the Durham, Malabar, Middlesex, and Winchester, are engaged. The Durham is expected to be ready to sail on Wednesday next. She has on board about 230 invalids and time-expired men, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel R. Patton, lately commanding the 107th Foot. During his absence on leave we hear the regiment will be commanded by Brevet-Lieutenant Colonel J. D. O. Baring. We notice the command of the 101st is also vacant, as Colonel Salusbury has proceeded on twenty months' leave to England. The Malabar will take home the A. B. and C. Batteries of the 10th Brigade Royal Artillery at an early date.—Indian Daily News and Bengal Hurkaru, Jan. 1.

RETIREMENT OF CAPTAIN E. TULLOCH.—We notice that Captain and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel E. Tulloch, of the 69th Regiment Native Infantry, has retired from the service, and Lieutenant E. A. Vine, of the general list, has been permitted to resign. Lieutenant-Colonel Tulloch's retirement promotes Lieutenant (Captain in the Staff Corps) A. H. Millett to his captaincy. Lieutenant Millett has been an unlucky man, as he entered the army in 1847. Lieutenant-Colonel Tulloch entered the service in 1837, and served during the Punjab Campaign of 1848, being present at Chillianwallah, the passage of the Chenab, and the battle of Goojerat.

COLLISION BETWEEN THE AUTHORITIES OF THE FRONTIER FIELD FORCE AND THE POLICE.—We hear from the Punjab that the authorities of the frontier field force have come into collision with the heads of the police. Not long ago there was a mysterious robbery at Government House, Lahore, and it appears that the police of Jhelum and Goojeranwallah took it into their heads to suspect a party of guides who were returning from escort duty to Murdan, and to place them under what we suppose we must call arrest. The matter has been referred to the Supreme Government for decision.

THE SIMLA BANK CORPORATION has declared an ad interim dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum for the year ending Dec. 31, 1866.

THE B-16 ROYAL ARTILLERY left Saugor, en route for Meerut, on the 7th January. This battery has been in Central India since 1859, and has suffered much from sickness. During the last two years it has lost twenty-four men, besides sending a great many to Europe. It marched from Saugor four officers and ninety-five non-commissioned officers and men. The battery will be at Lullupore about the 13th, and Jhansie about the 20th January.

PROJECTED RAILWAY THROUGH BURMAN.—Orders have reached the presidency from the Home Government to survey a line from Rangoon to the borders of China, with the view of ascertaining the best route for a railway. The survey party will enter Burman territory some time in March next.

EARNINGS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The return of traffic for the week ending 30th December, 1866, shows the coaching receipts to be £12,885. 13s. 8d., and the goods receipts £25,830. 17s. 2d.; total, £38,216. 10s. 10d., or per mile of railway open, £38. 16s. 10d.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS.—H.M.'s 29th foot from Hazareebaugh may be expected to arrive at Dum-Dum to relieve the 91st Highlanders about the 10th Jan., when the latter regiment will immediately march for Hazareebaugh.

THE 91ST HIGHLANDERS, under the command of Major Batiscombe, proceed to Hazareebaugh about the 15th January.

THE STEAM FERRY Howrah has been floated, —the attempts to float the Calcutta are progressing favourably.

THE 10TH BENGAL CAVALRY arrived at Saugor on the 2nd January, when the 4th Madras Cavalry marched for Secunderabad.

COLONEL DENISON'S APPOINTMENT to the Municipal Board still occupies public attention above all other questions of local interest. The excitement it has occasioned seems rather to be increasing than diminishing, and promises to culminate in a public meeting of the rate and tax payers of Madras to protest against the appointment. It has been publicly suggested that the Secretary of State should be memorialised on the subject. There can be no doubt, indeed, that in making this appointment Lord Napier has committed a mistake; he seems to have looked upon it as an ordinary piece of Government patronage, which he might dispose of at pleasure, and without considering the important interests it affected. Those members of the Municipal Board who receive remuneration are paid by the rate and tax payers, and not by Government; and under these circumstances it is felt that, whatever legal authority the Municipal Act has placed in the Governor's hands, he has no moral right to ignore the feelings of those who have to contribute the municipal funds. As at present constituted, the Municipal Board of Madras is an anomaly. The Government selects and appoints its different members, both paid and honorary, and controls all their proceedings, and yet calls this institution a "municipality." This interference on the part of Government may be necessary, at first, to the proper working of municipal institutions in the Mofussil, but it is generally felt to be unwarrantable, and altogether out of place in a large European and East Indian community such as we have in Madras. The discussion, it is hoped, will result in some alteration of the present system, and as Government contemplate reorganising the board, it will have an opportunity of modelling it in a shape more adapted to public requirements.—Madras Times.

DEATH OF DR. MASON.—Our obituary contains the name of Honorary Surgeon Samuel Mason, of the Subordinate Medical Service of this Presidency. He began his career in 1816, when a mere boy, and had seen an immense amount of service. He was in the very thick of the Mahratta campaign of 1817-19, and was present at the siege and reduction of Nowlghoond, Darwar, Singhur, Jeppoor, Vugeerghurah, Poovundur, Wassatah, Sholapoor, and Sasoor. He was with Sir Thomas Munro when that famous Madras Governor died of cholera at Putteecondah, in the ceded districts, in July 1827. He also served in the Coorg campaign of 1834. In consideration of his distinguished services the Court of Directors conferred the honorary rank of assistant surgeon upon him in 1858, and later he was advanced to the rank of honorary surgeon. At the time of his death Mr. Mason held the post of medical officer to the Lunatic Asylum.

MR. STUART, THE HEAD ASSISTANT TO THE COLLECTOR OF THE KISTNA DISTRICT, has reported to Government the circumstances connected with a "caste" riot at a place called Mustabad. It appears that a certain goldsmith of the "left-hand" caste was about to marry his son to the daughter of a person of the same caste, and that the bridegroom intended entering Mustabad with a procession and music. The leaders of the "right-hand" caste seem to have objected to this, and took such determined steps to interrupt the harmony of the wedding that a serious conflict between large numbers of both castes was the result. The small force of police on the spot was quite unequal to the occasion, and, though armed with loaded muskets, were attacked by the rioters with sticks, spears, swords, and clubs. In the scuffle one pariah man was shot dead, and many others were wounded, and the police were compelled to fly and seek shelter where they could. Darkness alone seems to have put a stop to what might have been in broad daylight a very disastrous disturbance. The officials were on the spot the following morning, and upwards of thirty of the ringleaders were at once arrested and put under trial; nine of them were sentenced to two years, and twenty-two to one year's rigorous imprisonment.

THE MADRAS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE recently called the attention of the Government to the serious delay and inconvenience that has occurred during the past year in the transmission of the mails between Madras and Bombay, and vice versa. On some occasions the mails were no less than six and even seven days en route, and in one instance the Madras mail was actually too late for the steamer leaving Bombay. The explanation of the Postmaster-general and the Government, which will be found in detail in another column, is considered far from satisfactory, and the fact remains that notwithstanding the facilities which the railway lines offer for more rapid communication between this city and Bombay, the time taken for the transmission of the mails is very little below, and sometimes actually exceeds, the period which was usual many years ago! The Chamber very properly remark that this should be a "humiliating reflection" to the Government; and the public are by no means so fully convinced as the Government seems to be that the delay complained of was due to such "exceptional circumstances" as might not with proper precaution have been foreseen and provided against.

THE RUMOURED ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.—The rumour that was set afloat by the Bombay Gazette respecting the Abyssinian expedition has caused considerable excitement in military circles, and some officers, we hear, have already been sending in their applications for service in case the expedition be decided upon. In Bangalore last week a report was current that the 16th Lancers had actually received an intimation either from Bombay or the Home Government to hold themselves in readiness, and it was said that the 1st Royals was the other European regiment that was selected. We have been unable to trace these rumours to any satisfactory foundation; indeed, our military authorities in Madras have received no intimation whatever concerning this much talked of Abyssinian expedition.

THE CIVIL BUDGET estimate of this presidency for the financial year 1867-8 has just been published by the Government. The estimated receipts are about £7,200,000, or to quote official figures, Rs. 7,19,92,800. This estimate is Rs. 18,91,900 over that for the last year, and an increase over the actual receipts of the year 1865-6 of Rs. 31,82,000. The estimated Civil disbursements for 1867-8 are about £2,740,000, or nearly thirteen and a-half lacs of rupees over the estimate for last year. The principal increase in the receipts occurs under the heads of Akbarry (excise), Land Revenue, and Salt. The above figures may be considered satisfactory, and should the anticipations of the Government be realised, it is evident that the famine which so seriously threatened this presidency a few months ago has not permanently affected the welfare of either the country or the people.

THE JUBBULPORE EXHIBITION.—Referring to this Exhibition, of which we gave some account in our last number, the Times of India says:—Those who are interested in the material progress of India will not have forgotten the Exhibition held at Nagpore in 1865, nor the fact that Mr. Temple, encouraged by the success of that undertaking, determined to hold a similar Exhibition at Jubbulpore in December, 1866. Zealous and enthusiastic himself, Mr. Temple has the faculty of inspiring his officers with like zeal and enthusiasm; so that no effort was spared to make the Exhibition of the northern districts of the Central Provinces as successful as was that of the southern. The articles were exhibited in the new buildings of the Jubbulpore jail—a central tower with radiating wings—which were fitted up and decorated for the occasion. The Exhibition consisted of agricultural stock and implements, machinery, manufactures, and the natural products of the Central Provinces. The greater distance and difficulty of access of Jubbulpore prevented Bombay from sending such an extensive collection of heavy articles, machinery, &c., as was sent to Nagpore; but not a few merchants and private individuals forwarded interesting and valuable assortments. Chevalier Thenon, the French Consul, exhibited a large collection of French fabrics, which had been sent direct from France for the occasion, and Messrs. W. and A. Graham sent specimens of the different kinds of British piece goods; and these would be of no ordinary interest and value to the weavers of Chandah and Nimar. The Messrs. Lepage, Nephew, and Co., Thomson and Co., Hamilton and Co., and Osler and Co., of Calcutta, exhibited large and varied assortments of machinery, cutlery, and hardware, some quantity of which found a ready sale. Though this Exhibition followed somewhat soon after that held at Nagpore, it cannot but be said to have been a great success, and to have quite equalled the expectations and wishes of the most sanguine of its promoters, though some objection is taken to the source whence a considerable portion of the funds for the work have been raised, namely, the octroi duties still maintained by Mr. Temple in the Central Provinces.

OOTACAMUND.—The rapid extension of the Government Chinchona Plantations on the Neilgherries suggested the idea of having on the spot an analyst of the alkaloids produced by the plant, and whether the suggestion proceeded from Mr. McIvor or some other person, it appears to have been at first contemplated to give the appointment to Dr. De Vry, a gentleman who had acquired considerable experience in Java both in the cultivation of the Chinchona and the analysis of its bark. Objections, however, seem to have been raised to Dr. De Vry on the ground of his being a foreigner, and it was thought best that an Englishman should be employed. In accordance with this national prejudice we now learn that Mr. John Broughton, reputed to be an analytical chemist of much ability, has been nominated Government Quinologist. Mr. Broughton was to have left England by the steamer of the 20th of November, and should be here soon, if he is not here already. But although Mr. Broughton's appointment is professedly that of analyst, it would seem that it is expected that he should take part in the cultivation of the chinchona also, for the Secretary of State tells the Madras Government, in his letter of the 17th of October last, that Mr. Broughton is "to investigate various questions connected with chinchona cultivation," and in the letter addressed by the same official to Mr. Broughton, dated September the 22nd, 1866, he is told that a part of his duties will be "to investigate the causes which regulate the yield of alkaloids from cultivated chinchona barks," and to discover "the conditions as regards elevation, climate, soil, and exposure, best calculated to produce the largest possible yield of alkaloids." By this remark we suppose it cannot be intended that Mr. Broughton should interfere with the duties of Mr. McIvor, whom the Secretary of State could not help alluding to as "the able and intelligent cultivator who now superintends the plantations." Mr. Broughton's salary we observe is to be ten thousand rupees a-year, or eight hundred and thirty odd rupees per mensem. The Government of Madras has decided that he shall live in Ootacamund, but "it will be necessary to furnish a room for a laboratory, with a smaller room opening into it and a supply of water."—Neilgherry Excelsior.

THE MINERAL TREASURES OF INDIA.—There are good grounds for believing in the existence of valuable mines of various kinds in the Central Provinces, but as yet no one possessed of the requisite capital, skill, and energy has been found willing to undertake the working of any of them. It is, therefore, gratifying to us to be able to announce that Mr. Berkely, Superintending Engineer, and Colonel Harry Rivers, Agent G. I. P. Railway Company, arrived here by special train on Wednesday, 2nd January, their special mission being to investigate the Nerbudda coal fields, whither they have proceeded.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS.—The Walmer Castle and the Lord Warden arrived at Madras within a day of each other. The former brought the detachments of five brigades of artillery, and the latter the reliefs of other regiments serving in this presidency.

or major. His actual position is improved; the army and the State both suffer.—Times of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FRACAS AT SURAT.—A correspondent of the Times of India says:—A late unpleasant occurrence at Surat, in which an officer of the 2nd Grenadiers was provoked into striking a young civilian, is in some respects suggestive. It apparently shows the danger of yielding to any bias which the prejudices of others may originate. Occasionally genuine talent does not command the respect it deserves, nor are claims on our approbation and esteem rated in their proper degree. In the absence of the explanations which have been given in this case, your correspondent may be permitted to observe that the aggressor was perhaps to a slight extent influenced by the force of example arising from the causes hinted at, and was not merely misled by his ignorance of the scale of army pay and allowances. The whole head and front of the offending is easily exhibited. A party of gentlemen were playing billiards, and the conversation happening to turn upon the matter-of-fact subject just alluded to, one of them informed the rest of the sum total of his monthly emoluments. The figure specified was correct, but decidedly low, and for the best of all reasons—the recipient of the small emoluments not being fortunate enough to hold a staff appointment. To substitute for the phrase actually employed an equivalent better suited to ears polite, the communication referred to was declared to be a sanguinary fabrication. To the deliverer of this sentiment it may probably have appeared incredible that a commissioned officer who must have entered upon the active duties of life about the time that he himself was playing in pinafors, should be drawing barely half the amount of his own salary—so just is the saying that truth is stranger than fiction! Irishmen are proverbially hot-tempered and impulsive, and, putting aside the question of nationality, if a man's thoughts have run riot upon the subject of scant pecuniary reward after years of hope and hard service, it is not to be expected that he can be in any very amiable mood, and that he will quietly brook a wanton and unjust attack on his veracity. Hinc illæ lachrymæ! Overlooking the bad taste and indelicacy of such fun, it is possible that the words which gave offence may have been expressed in jest, but this could little alter the result when the jest was not perceived or understood. The affair having been satisfactorily adjusted soon after, no purpose would be served by now drawing attention to it, if it were not for certain details on the subject first published by the Deccan Herald having already been reproduced by the Times of India. They give a somewhat incorrect version of what happened, in so far that the proceedings of the occasion are invested with a more bellicose character than they really possessed.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of the Bank of Bombay was held on January 15, for the purpose of confirming the resolutions passed at a previous meeting, to assimilate the nominal with the actual value of the shares, or, in other words, to reduce the par value of the shares 50 per cent. The directors read a report which, though extremely meagre, was sufficient to confirm the suspicion entertained by many, that the outstanding debts of the bank and the securities held by it are being realised, though very slowly indeed. Many of these securities consist of the estates of insolvents, which are being wound up under trustees, with whom the directors have no power to interfere. Whether the realisation of these estates and shares has turned out better or worse than was anticipated, the shareholders and the public have no means of knowing, as the directors declined to give any information to the general meeting regarding even the number of shares which they had been able to dispose of. This determined reticence on their part caused great dissatisfaction, which their renewed promise to realise securities as speedily as possible did little to allay, as it is believed by many that the spirit of speculation from which the bank has suffered so severely, is again likely to infect the councils of the directors. The proposal to reduce the nominal value of the shares—the formal business for which the meeting was convened—was unanimously carried, and notice was given of a motion to be brought forward at the next general meeting, calling for a complete return of all the securities held by the bank, of every description.

MEMORIAL TO SIR BARTLE FRERE.—In accordance with a requisition signed by the leading members of the European and native communities of Bombay, a public meeting has been called by the sheriff for February 11 to determine the form of public memorial of Sir Bartle Frere which it is proposed to subscribe for throughout the Presidency. It is generally understood that a statue, to take its place in the Town-hall beside those of Elphinstone and Malcolm, will be one form of the memorial; but regarding the personal and testimonial part of it, there seems yet to be considerable difference of opinion. A service of plate, bearing of course a suitable inscription, and to be preserved as an heirloom, has been spoken of by some; and others, who deprecate the mercantile spirit of the age, are more in favour of the endowment of schools in his honour. The University of Bombay, too, has determined to commemorate its sense of gratitude to Sir Bartle Frere for his constant solicitude in its behalf, by placing his Excellency's bust in the New University Hall, when built, and surmounting it with his coat of arms.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION.—A telegram having been received in Bombay by the official liquidators of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East, or rather the agents for the official liquidator in London, to the effect that the Court of Chancery positively refuses to allow the assets of the Bombay branch to remain in Bombay, an application has been made to the High Court here to have rescinded a previous order of the Court forbidding the transmission of those funds to England. This application was opposed on behalf of certain creditors in Bombay, on the ground that such transmission of the Bombay assets—some £400,000, would entail a heavy loss by exchange, and also unnecessary trouble upon the Bombay creditors. As, however, the head-office of the bank was in London, and consequently the order made by the High Court of Bombay for winding-up the branch here independently, was what the law describes as an "improvident" one, the Judge, Sir Joseph Arnould, did not feel justified in resisting the order of the Master of the Rolls, nor inclined to do so. So much of the previous order was therefore rescinded as prevented the transmission of the assets to England, and the money and securities will be sent home by the mail of the 14th instant. The carrying out of this present order will entail a total sacrifice of £20,000 upon the estate; and, as was remarked in Court, it seems scarcely likely that the Master of the Rolls would have insisted upon pursuing the course he has done, had it been clearly represented to him that the funds of the concern in Bombay would all be disbursed in satisfaction of the claims of creditors upon the spot. His determination may, however, as the judge remarked, have been formed from a feeling of the insecurity of any funds in a place of such bad commercial repute as Bombay.

H.M.'s 109TH REGIMENT.—Before the headquarters of the 109th Bombay Infantry left Aden for Bombay en route for Poona, Brig.-general Raines, commanding at Aden, issued the following brigade order:—"The Brig.-general cannot permit H.M.'s 109th Regiment to quit the command without placing on brigade record his sense of the high state of discipline, the exemplary conduct and soldier-like bearing which has characterised the corps during the two years it has been quartered at Aden. The regiment carries to its new station a prestige for industry, sobriety, and good conduct; and while the Brigadier-general extremely regrets the removal of the corps from his command, he feels glad for their sakes that they are going to so salubrious a station as Poona, and wishes them a happy and prosperous journey to Bombay."

COLONEL FORESTER, R.A.—We are glad to hear that H.M.'s Government, on the recommendation of the Government of India, has been pleased to confer a good service pension on Colonel H. Forster, commanding the royal artillery at Kirkee. This gallant officer is well deserving this distinction. He entered the service in 1827; served as adjutant, 3rd troop Horse Artillery, throughout the campaign with the army of the Indus in Afghanistan 1839; at the storm and capture of Ghuznee (medal) selected to accompany the cavalry force under Major Cureton, which took possession of Dost Mahomed's camp and all his guns, and then proceeded on to Cabool in advance of the army; commanded a detachment of horse artillery at the storm and capture of Khelat (mentioned in despatches), and commanded a field battery in the Bhawalpore field force under Lieutenant-general Sir C. Napier, G.C.B., in 1845-46.—Bombay Gazette.

THE DEBENTURE LOAN of £600,000 raised by the Government of India for public works in Bombay has proved a great success. The sum applied for was £884,450. Of this sum £229,800 was for one year, at the extreme rates of from 99 to 101; £323,500 for two years at from 98 to 101½; and £331,150 for three years at from 99½ to 102½. Of course the highest tenders were accepted; with this result, that the Bank of Bengal got £400,000, the Oriental Bank—for some of its constituents, we believe—£90,000, and the Chartered Mercantile Bank and others the remainder. The average rate of premium for the three issues was £101. 2s. 6d., so that Government has made a profit of £6,781, besides being encouraged, we trust, by its high credit and the stagnant state of the market, to raise a large irrigation loan.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION BETWEEN ENGLAND AND INDIA.—From a return just issued by the Indo-European Telegraph Department, we find the number of messages received from Great Britain during October last was 841, all via Turkey, the Russian route not having been employed at all during the month. The line occupied during the month ranged from 3 hours 54 minutes to 13 days 19 hours, the average being 5 days 22 hours—a higher average than any previous month during the year. The line occupied between Fao and Kurrachee ranged from 13 minutes to 4 hours 54 minutes, the average being 57 minutes.

CHINA & JAPAN.

In the China Mail of the 1st January we find the following :—

The irrepressible rebels (this time Mahomedans) are at work again in Kiangsi, and have captured four cities somewhere in that province. Some interesting cases have been heard in the Supreme and mixed courts at Shanghai. The subject of a lighthouse at the entrance of the Yangtze is still under discussion. At Foochow the dockyard scheme is progressing. Fires have occurred at some of the smaller ports and Hankow.

The Prussian corvette Vineta has arrived at Shanghai. She will speedily be reinforced by some smaller vessels and gunboats, it being the determination of the Prussian Government to assist the other naval Powers of Europe in putting down piracy in the China seas effectually.

On the 12th December the boats' crews of H.M.'s ship Salamis (Commander Suttie) and H.M.'s gunboat Janus (Lieutenant Commander Johnson), had a brush with pirates at a place named Tai Nia, on the west coast of the island of Tonqua. Acting on the information received from the Mandarin of Quang-Hai, Commander Suttie landed with the above force, numbering about 45 men and officers, for the purpose of reconnoitering this locality, which appears to consist of a large mangrove swamp, lying behind a barrier of sand, and skirted by high and thickly wooded hills. In one of the creeks by which this swamp is intersected were three junks and five snake boats, on approaching which the party was fired on, from several directions, whilst a straggling force of about 200 men (as nearly as could be ascertained) were seen to be making off towards the hill, carrying with them, as usual, all they could conveniently bundle together at a short notice; some, however, remained in the brushwood on the near hill-side, and continued a straggling fire with by no means a bad aim, one bullet (amongst other "close shaves") passing within a few inches of Commander Suttie's head. Of course these ruffians were speedily dislodged, and several of them shot, whilst scrambling up the hill. In the meantime, Lieutenant Johnson, with six men, pursued the main body of retreating pirates, and had arrived within 200 yards of them, when a party of about 40 made a stand in a small gap, where they planted a red and white flag, and commenced firing with a rapidity and precision which might have given us a sadder tale to tell, had not a bank been fortunately at hand, behind which Lieutenant Johnson halted his men, and having extended them in skirmishing order, kept up a steady fire in the gap, which in about ten minutes effectually dislodged the enemy. He then proceeded to take possession of the position vacated by the pirates, and, as they were mustering in force at the head of the valley, some 800 yards on, halted for reinforcements. These soon came up, but with orders to retire from Commander Suttie, who very sensibly deemed it inexpedient to follow far into an unknown country a force whose strength he had not been able to ascertain. The junks and snake boats were all effectually destroyed, and after having thus crippled the resources of the pirates, the boats returned to their ships, fortunately in that very desirable state on these occasions, without a man hurt. Tai Nia is likely yet to be the scene of further operations, as, out of the force—which is certainly not under the number we mention, and is comparatively well organised—not more than ten or twelve can be counted as killed and wounded in this affair.

In Japan matters seem more quiet than heretofore. The rice riots in Yedo have ceased, and grain is again falling to its nominal price. The Shiogoon's troops have been withdrawn from the Inland Sea, but Chosiu is still skirmishing with the Daimio of Kokura, who is endeavouring to turn his rival out of his newly-acquired territories. Chosiu, whose army is said to be in first-rate order, nevertheless holds his position successfully.

Para. 1.—By my despatch No. 159, dated Aug. 8 last, you were informed, para. 61, clause 5, that "all officers now in the several staff corps, and all who may join them under the terms of this despatch, will be entitled to the colonel's allowance after 12 years' service in the grade of substantive lieut. col., without reference to any fixed establishment of colonels with colonels' allowance," and further that "the brevet rank attained to under the regulations published in general order by your Government, No. 632, dated Aug. 4, 1864," would be "considered a substantive rank for this purpose, and allowed to count towards the above period."

2. I have now to inform your Excellency that it has been determined to extend the privilege expressed in the last part of the above clause to those officers joining the staff corps under the terms of that despatch who had attained to the rank of brevet lieut. colonel prior to Feb. 18, 1861, but who, had they not so done, would have been entitled by the terms of the G.O. above referred to (No. 632, 1864), to promotion to the rank of lieut. colonel from Feb. 18, 1861, from which date, therefore, they will reckon the 12 years qualifying for the colonel's allowance.

4. I take this opportunity also of informing your Excellency, with reference to the scale of pay laid down for staff corps officers in the Royal Warrant of Jan. 16, 1861, that H.M.'s Govt. have determined that an officer of the staff corps, attaining to the colonel's allowance before promotion to the rank of major general, will receive out of India the same aggregate amount of pay and allowance that is drawn by officers of infantry of the Indian army holding the rank of regimental colonel with the colonel's allowance.

The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to notify that officers of the class affected by the provisions of para. 2 of the above despatch will be allowed an extension of time within which to consider the question of joining the staff corps under the terms of Lord Cranborne's despatch, No. 159, of Aug. 8, 1866.

If in India, they will be required to submit their applications to the Adjutant Gen.'s office at their respective Presidencies by March 1, 1867, or if out of India, by June 1, 1867.

HOME.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 7.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

In answer to Mr. LESLIE,
 Lord CRANBORNE said a considerable decrease in the famine has been reported, and the distress now only exists in those districts where the inundations of last autumn destroyed the crops. Until the report of a commission appointed to investigate the subject has been received, it would not be just to the officers of Bengal to lay the partial information in the possession of the Government before the House.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

In answer to Mr. SMITH,
 Lord CRANBORNE said orders were issued by Lord De Grey for the preparation of the Indian finance accounts in conformity with the English accounts up to the 31st March; but it is found impossible to comply with those orders this year. In future the accounts are to be made up to that date.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 8.

THE LATE FAMINE IN BENGAL.—THE RYOTS.

Mr. KINNAIRD asked the Secretary of State for India if he had any objection to lay upon the table of the House a copy of the minutes of the chief commissioner of Oude and of the Governor-general, on the report of Mr. Davies, the financial commissioner, on the rights of the ryots, and of any orders passed by the Home Government of India on Sir John Lawrence's decision; also whether the Home Government, as stated in the Indian journals, had called for a report on the late famine in Bengal, and whether attention had been directed to the following points:—1. The extent of country affected, and the mortality caused. 2. The causes of the famine, and how far avoidable in future by works of irrigation. 3. The amount of warning of its approach, and how far the existing machinery of revenue administration is adapted to give the needed warning. 4. The measures of precaution adopted by the local Government of Bengal on receipt of such warning.

Lord CRANBORNE was understood, in answer to the first question, to say that he had not as yet received the papers in question, and to the second, that the Government had issued a commission of inquiry, and when its report had been received it would be laid on the table.

Mr. BRIGHT asked the names of the commissioners.

Lord CRANBORNE: The president was Judge Campbell (hear, hear)—and the other two were a member of the revenue administration and a colonel.

Mr. H. LEWIS asked the Secretary of State for India when the distribution of the Central India prize money (Lord Strathnairn's capture) would take place, and what was the reason of the delay in distributing the same.

Lord CRANBORNE: The protracted litigation has been the main cause of the delay. Emphatic orders had, however, been sent out to India to expedite the distribution, which he expected would take place very shortly.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 11.

MAILS TO THE EAST.

Mr. CRAWFORD asked the Secretary to the Treasury according to notice, if any steps have been taken towards carrying into effect the recommendations of the select committee of last session with reference to postal communication with the East.

Mr. WARD HUNT replied that on the 1st of this month formal notice was given to the Peninsular and Oriental Company to determine the contract for India and China. This will enable the Government to conclude a new contract for weekly mails to Bombay. With regard to Australia he deferred the answer till answers be received from the Colonies to communications addressed to them on the subject.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—FEB. 11.

(Before the LORDS JUSTICES.)

IN THE MATTER OF THE AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK.

This appeal raised a question of some commercial importance arising upon a claim by the official liquidator of the Asiatic Banking Corporation against the official liquidator of the Agra and Masterman's Bank, for a sum of £6,000. It appeared that a firm of Dickson, Tatham, and Co., who carried on business in Ceylon, where the Asiatic Bank had a branch, held an open letter of credit from the Agra Bank. In May, 1866, Dickson and Company sold bills which had been drawn up by them against the Agra Bank in London to the Asiatic Bank in London, leaving with them a copy of the open letter of credit, which was in the following terms:—

"TO MESSRS. DICKSON, TATHAM, AND CO.

"Gentlemen,—You are hereby authorised to draw upon this bank at six months' sight to the extent of £15,000 sterling, and such drafts I undertake duly to honour on presentation in order. This credit will remain in force for twelve months from this date, and parties negotiating instruments under it are requested to endorse particulars on the back hereof. The bills must specify that they are drawn under credit No. 394 of the 31st October, 1865.—I am, for the Agra and Masterman's Bank (Limited),

"M. BALFOUR, General Manager."

Upon the receipt of this letter the Asiatic Bank endorsed thereon the particulars of the bills. Shortly after this transaction the Agra Bank suspended payment, and on the bills being presented to the official liquidators they refused to accept them or allow the Asiatic Bank to rank as creditors in respect thereof.

The Vice-Chancellor held that a promise to accept an undrawn bill of exchange did not amount to an acceptance, and the claim must be refused.

The Asiatic Bank appealed.

Mr. Giffard, Mr. Kekewich, and Mr. Hannen appeared for the Asiatic Bank. Mr. Dickinson and Mr. Roxburgh appeared for the official liquidator of the Agra Bank.

Lord Justice Turner said that whatever might be the effect at law of the letter written by the bank, the case was plain in equity to compel the bank to accept and pay the bills drawn in pursuance of the letter.

Lord Justice Cairns said the letter was evidently written for the purpose of being shown to the persons who would negotiate bills drawn in favour of it, and it was a general invitation by the Agra Bank to all persons to whom it was shown to negotiate bills drawn upon its faith that they would be accepted by the bank. The claim of the Asiatic Bank must therefore be allowed. The costs of the liquidators of both banks, here and below, to be paid out of the estate of the Agra Bank.

MISCELLANEOUS.

STAR OF INDIA.—(INDIA-OFFICE, Feb. 8.)—

The Queen has been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint Colonel Henry Marion Durand, C.B., Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, Fifth Ordinary Member of the Council of the Viceroy and Governor-general of India, and William Muir, Esq., Bengal Civil Service, Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department, to be Knights Commanders of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

No WONDER!—The Army and Navy Gazette says:—An officer who served on the staff of Lord Clyde in India declares that "no fellow can understand" the Royal Warrants for the distribution of prize money. He says if he is obliged to calculate his share he would rather "resign the rupees."

DOCK ACCOMMODATION IN BOMBAY.—It is to be hoped that the Council of India have not been too late in providing dock accommodation for the new troopships at Bombay, as these vessels will have to be docked every four months. We understand that Lord Cranborne has, with the sanction of the Board of Admiralty, applied to Mr. William Scamp, C.E., Deputy Director-general of Works, for plans of such an iron floating dock as, in his opinion, will be best suitable for the locality. Mr. Scamp has had a lengthened experience in work of the description required, and it is fully expected that his lordship will not have appealed in vain to him. Captain Sherard Osborn, R.N., C.B., has been requested to put himself in communication with Mr. Scamp, so that the latter may have the advantage of the knowledge which the gallant officer has derived on the spot.—Army and Navy Gazette.

ARRIVAL OF THE HEAVY BOMBAY MAIL.—(SOUTHAMPTON, Feb. 11.)—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Nyanza, Captain Weeks, with the heavy portion of the above mail, arrived here to-day. She brings forty-eight passengers, specie value £45,240, and a general cargo. The Nyanza experienced, along the coast of Portugal and across the Bay, a heavy north-westerly swell, at times the ship pitching and rolling heavily. Up Channel southerly winds and fine weather.

THE PENSION FOR DISTINGUISHED OR MERITORIOUS SERVICES, vacant by the appointment of Major-general H. K. Bloomfield to the colonelcy of the 64th Regiment, will in all likelihood be given to Colonel William Hope, C.B., of the 71st, an officer of nearly thirty-two years' service, who served with his regiment in the Crimea and in India.

THE COLONELCY OF THE 17TH LANCERS, vacant by the death of Sir J. Maxwell Wallace, will be given to Major-general C. W. M. Balders, C.B., who has been forty-two years in the service, and commanded the 3rd Light Dragoons at the battles of Moodkee and Ferozshah, where he was wounded.

THE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—Yesterday (Monday) a numerously attended meeting was held at Great Marlow, Bucks, when the Rev. Robert Milman, D.D., the newly-appointed Bishop of Calcutta, was presented with a valuable testimonial, which had been subscribed for by all classes of the inhabitants.

THE SUEZ CANAL.—PARIS, Feb. 8.—The Etendard of this evening publishes a telegram from Alexandria, announcing that Lord Clarence Paget has visited the works of the Suez Canal, in company with M. de Lesseps, to whom he expressed his appreciation of the greatness and utility of the enterprise.

Quintessence of Jamaica Ginger and Camomile.

GINGER has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine, and, combined with camomile, it is the most efficient stomachic tonic known, for while the ginger relieves the stomach from distension and flatulency, arising from impaired digestion, the camomile strengthens the coats of the stomach, and by that means gives it a healthy and invigorating tone. So highly concentrated is this preparation, it is unimpaired by age or climate, and well adapted for exportation. In Gout, Spasms, Dysentery, Cholera, or those complaints incidental to tropical climates, it is invaluable, as in numerous cases a dose or two has checked and frequently cured most alarming attacks. No family should be without it. Sold in half-pints, quarter-pints, and one-eighth pints.

Agreeable Seidlitz Powder, in one bottle, protected by a case, with measure and spoon included. The advantage of this preparation is the perfect combination of the solid ingredients of the Seidlitz Spring in one compound powder.

It is very cooling and refreshing, well adapted for exportation, or travellers by land or sea.

Aromatic Tincture of Quinidine.—For the prevention of Fever, Intermittent or Remittent Ague, and other effects of Malaria.

No person exposed to the influence or predisposing cause of Fevers should be without it, for it taken in small doses daily the system will become so thoroughly impregnated with its principles as to be rendered proof against all attacks of Contagion or Malaria.—Sold in pints, half-pints, and quarter-pints.

The above articles prepared only by THOS. WILKINSON (late Wilkinson, Bridge, & Co.), 270, Regent-street London, W.

CHILDREN'S WORM TABLETS

(KEATING'S).—The recently-discovered unfailing remedy for worm disorders in children and adults has now been concentrated in the form of a purely Vegetable Sweetmeat. The Tablet is eagerly taken by children, and one to three given twice or thrice a-week, will effect a safe and certain cure. Prepared and sold in Tins, 1s. 1d. and 2s. 9d. each, by THOMAS KEATING, Chemist, &c., 79, St. Paul's Churchyard, London, E.C., and Retail by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in the World.

Observe the words “KEATING'S WORM TABLETS” are engraven on the Government Stamp of each Tin, without which none are genuine.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—TRYING TIMES.

—The wet, windy, or cold weather of the present season tests the strength of the human constitution. Holloway's Pills so completely purify the blood, so effectually perfect digestion, and so naturally regulate both secretions and excretions, that occasional doses can always be taken with the most decided advantage when unseemly from atmospheric influences threaten the health. Disorders of the body mainly arise from impurities introduced from without; expel them by this potent purifier, and disease will rarely follow—a proposition abundantly clear to the commonest capacity. It must be borne in mind that the certainty and energy of action of these Pills are much increased by attention to diet and other rules explained in the “directions.”

A Entirely new description of ARTIFICIAL

TEETH, without springs or wires, lighter, more durable and economical than any yet introduced. Tender and decayed Teeth stopped with anodyne cement, which becomes instantly hard as enamel, and restores Teeth to use even though nearly broken to the gum. Supplied only by Mr. ALFRED JONES, Surgeon-Dentist to their late R.H. the Princess Augusta, the Duchess of Gloucester, &c., 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square. At home from Eleven till Five. Mr. Alfred Jones has no connection with any person assuming his name.

Earl Russell sent to the College of Physicians a communication received by him from Manila (where Cholera had been raging fearfully), to the effect, that, of all remedies tried, Chlorodyne was the most effective.—See Brit. Med. J., Dec. 31, 1864.

CHLORODYNE (TOWLE'S).

IMPORTANT TO SHIPPERS AND EMIGRANTS.

Mr. TOWLE.—Sir,—Having recently arrived from Bombay, and during our stay there myself and crew being violently attacked with dysentery, no general in India, Captain Clements, of the ship Marselles, lying near us, seeing the condition we were in, kindly sent a bottle of your Chlorodyne, from which myself and crew found immediate relief; and during the voyage home proved a most effective and valuable medicine. Having been instrumental in saving my own life and that of others, we feel it a duty and pleasure to send this statement of facts, to make what use of you think proper, believing that no vessel ought to leave port without a good supply in her medicine chest.

(Signed) GEORGE ALLEN, Chief Officer.
J. C. CONGDON, Master.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS.

Perfect and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.

THIS POWDER is quite harmless to animal life, but is unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect.

Being the Original Importer of this now invaluable article which has found so great a sale that it has tempted others to vend a so-called article, the public are therefore cautioned to observe that the packets of the genuine Powder bear the autograph of THOMAS KEATING.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with the sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshuhur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojrat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review, May 15.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman, March 17.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner, September 15.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

The Bombay mail brings us our usual files of papers, from Calcutta to the 19th, Madras to the 23rd, and Bombay to the 28th of January.

There was but little news in Calcutta. Some anticipations of Mr. Massey's budget were attracting a little attention. The Friend of India thinks that there will be no income-tax this year, the new impost being of a purely license character.

The Governor-general in Council, under Act of Parliament, had notified in the Gazette the various districts of India which will be under the jurisdiction of the various High Courts, as regards the trial of European British subjects. Jurisdiction is to be exercised by the High Court at Fort William in the Chutteesgurrh Division of the Central Provinces and the Upper Godavery district; by the High Court at Madras in Coorg; by the High Court at Bombay in the Nagpore and Nerbudda Division of the Central Provinces; and by the High Court of the North-Western Provinces in Oudh and the Jubbulpore Division of the Central Provinces. Similarly the various native States are placed under the Courts which are nearest them or in railway communication with them. This will prevent such mistakes as that which lately led to the double trial of a Coorg planter, first in Madras and then in Calcutta.

Another important notification, of which we give the particulars elsewhere, is to the general effect that with a view to extend to the holders in India of Government promissory notes the advantages enjoyed in London of having their property registered in the form of a book debt, on and after 1st of February, 1867, it will be optional on the part of the holders of Government promissory notes of the various loans to register them at the Bank of Bengal in book debt account and receive stock certificates.

The failure of Colonel Phayre to obtain a treaty with the King of Burmah is confirmed. The colonel having respectfully but firmly declined to retain his position, is to be relieved at Rangoon by Colonel Fytche.

The late fatal steam ferry accident at Calcutta has resulted in the conviction of the captain of the steamer for manslaughter, and he has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

Major Walton, the military storekeeper, had accepted the command of the Calcutta Volunteers. Captain Fenwick, as major, is second in command.

The Commander-in-Chief and the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal were both in the North-West Provinces.

The Duc d'Alençon and Baron de Bache, Secretary to his Royal Highness, had left Calcutta for the North-West, Punjab, and Bombay.

Colonel Strachey, R.E., who recently returned to India to report on the various irrigation works in progress, is to receive a new appointment, to be styled the Inspector-general of Irrigation Works.

Deputy Inspectors-general of Hospitals, John Wilkie, M.D., and Alfred H. Cheek have been permitted to retire from the service on pensions of £800 and £615 per annum respectively.

Miss Carpenter, since leaving Calcutta, has visited Madras, where she was presented with an address by the leading members of the native community. She was expected to leave Bombay for England by the overland mail of the 29th of March.

Colonel Denison had written to the Madras papers a vigorous vindication of his claims to the position occupied by the late Colonel Temple, his appointment to which is causing so much local irritation.

From Bombay we learn that Sir Bartle Frere was expected to leave the Presidency on the 19th of February, a few days after the arrival of his successor. Contrary to custom, it is said that Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald will not enter upon his duties until Sir Bartle's departure. The public meeting to consider the subject of a testimonial had been convened for February 11. The farewell banquet of the Byculla Club had been fixed for the 14th of February.

A proposal for a wet dock, forty-six acres in extent, in Bombay, had been submitted to Government by Mr. Russe Aitken, executive engineer to the municipality.

The Bombay races are to commence on the 5th February.

Major-general Harry Rivers has been elected commandant of the Bombay Volunteers, and Lieut. Walter Philip Walsh, late of H.M.'s 32nd Regiment, adjutant.

The Pioneer contains some news from Central India, stating that the Russians are pushing their advantage against the Emir of Bokhara with great vigour. Defeated in three battles, with an army nearly annihilated and a people dispirited and cowed by the persistence and good fortune of the enemy, the King has abandoned the open field and shut himself up in Samarcand. Here he has gathered round him the remaining strength of his people, consisting of an army of 10,000 men, whose fanaticism has been sorely tried by adversity, and here he awaits the last onset of the Russians. It is said that he is anxious for peace, and that he would come to terms with his enemy, were it not that he is buoyed up with the hope of receiving a favourable reply to his application for assistance to the Viceroy and the Ruler of Jummo. The reply sent to the King of Khokan, however, will probably dispel any hopes he may have formed of seeing an Anglo-Indian force marching to his assistance, or an Anglo-Indian envoy negotiating the retreat of the troops of the Czar under the threat of immediate war.

The Cabul correspondent of the Delhi Gazette adds:—"When the King of Bokhara was encamped at Koorpee an emissary arrived from the Russians, and having paid his respects to the Ameer addressed him thus:—"I am desired by my master, the General commanding at Chuzzukh, to inform your Highness that the Russians have no intention to interfere with the Bokharian territory provided your Highness will allow them to have some troops cantoned in Bokhara, and will allow them to proceed unmolested through your territories in order to take possession of Bulk, after which they will make your Highness independent ruler of Bokhara." The King promised to give a decided answer in ten days." In another letter the same writer describes an interview between the vakeel of the Ameer of Cabul and the Russian Ambassador at Bokhara. The interview seems to have been satisfactory on both sides. The Delhi Gazette says:—"It is curious to note the change that has come over the spirit of the times. Thirty years ago what consternation would have been excited throughout India and in England, too, by the revelation of an interview—an actual interview—between the representative of the Ameer of Cabul and the Ambassador of Russia at Bokhara! We coolly and calmly now-a-days look at the reality the shadow of which thirty years ago threw us into a political fever, and involved us in an expensive, useless, and unjust war."

Dr. Stovell, Principal Inspector-general, Medical Department, retires from the service on a pension of £900 a-year.

The public health of Bombay is said to be good.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta and China mail, which may be expected in London on the 2nd of March.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, February 20, 1867.

NATIVE FEMALE EDUCATION.

WHEN the natives of India do begin to reform they certainly set to work in earnest. The majority are still immovable, as they always were; but whatever the question in hand we never fail to find, of late years, that a considerable section of the community takes a strong part on the side of advancement. This, indeed, is sometimes carried to an embarrassing extent, as the reformers are apt to go farther than it is convenient to follow them, while, at the same time, it is not desirable that authority should actually discourage their aspirations. As regards the re-marriage of Hindoo widows, and some other changes affecting the religious or social observances of the people, there is reason to fear that the collective wisdom of the Government gave too much regard to the enlightenment of the few, and too little to the prejudices of the many. To this want of caution we have since learned to trace one of the causes of the revolt of 1857. The mistake will not be repeated, at least while the present policy prevails. There has lately been a movement against polygamy in Bengal, where an advanced guard of educated natives have actually petitioned the Government to put down the institution by force of law. But the Government, as Lord Palmerston said about Parliamentary Reform, are not such geese as to do anything of the kind. The moral and social good produced by the measure would be somewhat marred were one of its first effects a general rebellion. Even more recently strong representations have been made to authority with regard to the "ghat murders" on the banks of the Hooghly; and a large number of natives have urged active interference. Nobody doubts that the evil is one which calls loudly for redress; but the Government have not ventured to undertake the task, and considering the dangers involved, we are afraid they are not to be blamed for letting ill alone.

The above remarks are suggested by the latest phase of the development which is being undergone by the more intelligent classes of the natives. We refer to the movement in favour of Native Female Education. This is safe ground for the Government, or at any rate one on which they have an intelligible policy. The spread of knowledge was one of the combining causes of the mistrust which led to the mutinies. But it was the "little learning" which was the "dangerous thing." Eventually education must be the main source of our strength, unless indeed the native aversion to us be found so irradicable as to necessitate a permanent policy of bayonets. But in any case the instruction of the people is incumbent upon a civilised Government, and if we are not prepared to carry it out at any hazard we have no right to rule India. It is to the ministrations of Miss Carpenter that the present movement is owing. Everywhere this enthusiastic lady is attracting sympathy and support. And not only do her own compatriots crowd to her call and respond to her invocations, but the native community have fairly caught the infection, and nothing can now be more familiar than the idea of native ladies not only learning to read and write, but acquiring languages and sciences, and adorning society with no lower themes for conversation than "Shakespeare, Taste, and the Musical Glasses."

Considering the progress already made in Native Female Education, as far as children are concerned, wherever it has been tried, and the especial success which it has obtained in the North-west Provinces and the Punjab, the popularity of the new movement might, perhaps, have been expected. But in Madras, where the subject is just now being most actively discussed, several practical difficulties are suggested as likely to prove a serious impediment to progress. These principally resolve themselves into the questions—What is to be taught? and, Who is to teach it? As a specimen of one side of the argument as to the first question we may quote the following, which is from a very well written letter in the Madras Times, the author of which is a native. "There is not the slightest doubt," he says, "that the more intelligent members of the Hindu community are eagerly anxious to have their females educated in one or other of the vernacular languages, or rather in their mother-tongue, in the language of their household. There is as little doubt that every right-minded man will laugh at the idea of having his daughter educated in the English language, and ridicule will be justified by the utter impracticability of making a foreign tongue like the English, the medium of communicating knowledge to the females of this country. It cannot be too strongly urged that the vernaculars are the only media through which substantive information and mental enlightenment can be communicated to Hindu females, and the idle dream of seeing our females learnedly talk a foreign language may be resigned to the fervid imagination of a few enthusiasts who will soon open their eyes to the strange delusions they are labouring under, when the matter comes to be put into practice. Does it not seem strange that when the difficulties in our way already are gigantic, persons should thoughtlessly fall into errors that will aggravate the existing evils a thousand-fold." "Even granting," he adds further on, "that the dream of utterly eradicating the native languages and introducing the English in their stead can be realised, this happy realisation of the ardent wishes of some of the friends of Hindu female education cannot be expected for many centuries to come, and it must also be remembered that the Government cannot take a measure which is not at once feasible and popular, and that their measure is always designed for the benefit of the many, and not to suit the wants and tastes of a small section of the community."

The Athenæum and Daily News, discussing the same question, says:—"Neither man nor woman can learn, without much inquiry and much thought, what kind of education it is expedient that a young Hindoo woman should have. With regard to males the case is quite different. By educating them, or as it is more grandiloquently expressed, by opening up to them the mines of Western literature and science, we do not reverse their positions in a household. We may lead them to think, indeed, that their wives and daughters are capable of being made more companionable, and more capable of training up a family, but we do not thereby remove them from the headship of their own families. If, on the other hand, we educate women on the Western model, we make them dissatisfied with their lot in life, indisposed to be the companions of men in their own stations in life, while at the same time they cannot obtain admittance into a higher rank; thus causing them to lead unhappy isolated lives, or, what is more likely, a life the pleasures of which are always dubious and liable to be terminated at any moment." And in confirmation of his opinion he points to cases in the Madras Presidency in which the philanthropic labours of educated ladies have led to what are, according to Western ideas, the most pernicious results. Thus one young woman who could read, write, cipher, knit, crochet, and cook, drowned herself sooner than marry the man who, according to the usages of the country, had been fixed upon for her husband!

Farther on the same writer touches upon the question of teachers in this fashion:—

"The native community, or the more intelligent of them, are anxious to have their homes improved by a diffusion of useful knowledge among their families, but we feel certain that the preliminary steps they are taking to advance female education are in the wrong direction in two instances. In the first place, we do not think that it is desirable to have at the head of a native school a European lady. If by education the natives of this country understand "Europeanising," then let all teachers in native girls' schools be Europeans; but if by education is meant the fitting those educated for their particular stations in life, then we maintain that the girls' schools should be wholly under native management. It is objected that there are as yet no native ladies to take charge of such a school, and that there are reasons why males should not be employed in it. We have been favoured with some of the reasons, and we think them most ridiculous. To meet the most dreaded consequences of male teachers, a few old women might be employed to put down the first symptoms of billing and cooing that were observed between the scholar and teacher. It seems to us that whatever may in Hindoo eyes be the disadvantage of letting girls be taught by men, it is utterly insignificant compared with the fundamental blunder of having Hindoo girls taught entirely under the superintendence of an English lady. No English lady, unless she has lived long in the country and associated with the natives, can be at all aware of the real requirements of Hindoo females. The great object, as we believe, to be aimed at in bringing up a young woman is to prepare her for discharging the duties of a wife and mother."

We must confess that, apart from the question as to the vernacular, which we have no doubt would be the best medium, we should have fancied an English lady better qualified to teach the duties of a wife and mother than a native man, between whom and his pupil Abelard and Heloise relations seem to be so probable as to suggest the establishment of a precautionary duenna, to prevent billing and cooing between them! And with regard to what is to be taught, the writer admits that in England some of the strictures upon persons in comparatively humble life teaching "accomplishments," such as the pianoforte, drawing, &c., to their daughters, are somewhat too severe, for the reason that anything which gives a woman an additional power of pleasing a husband and friends and amusing children, is worth possessing, and although other qualifications may be more essential, they are not such as can be picked up at school. We are quite of the same opinion. There used to be a caricature very popular in the London shopwindows some years ago, representing a mother saying to her daughter, "Juliana, my love, leave off playing that pianner, and give the mangle a turn." The idea of Juliana dividing herself between the two instruments seemed ludicrously incongruous to an unreflecting public. But why? It must surely be a great relief from turning a mangle—being able to play upon the piano when the work is done. It is possible that Juliana's accomplishment may give her "ideas above her station," but that is because it elevates her beyond her less fortunate friends—not because there is anything incompatible between music and mangling. Were the art as well as the taste more generally diffused, there would be nothing more absurd in Juliana recreating herself after her mangling with an air upon the piano, than in an Italian peasant girl disporting herself with a guitar after a day's labour in treading down the grapes.

The wealthy baboos of Bengal, as well as the less opulent, but still substantial, citizens of Madras, have petitioned Government for Normal Schools for Hindoo women, to be presided over by English ladies. The arrangement really seems the best that could be, at any rate until competent native teachers of the same sex can be trained. With regard to the question of "accomplishments," nothing more seems to be needed than having regard to the principle of teaching them, where desired, as additions to, and not as substitutes for, the domestic education which is undoubtedly the first requirement.

BRIDGING THE HOOGLHY, AND THE LATE ACCIDENT ON THAT RIVER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In the letter, dated 8th January, 1867, of the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, which appeared in the issue of that paper of the 8th instant, there is, apropos of the dreadful accident which happened on New Year's-day on the Hooghly, to a party of pleasure on board a railway steamer returning from the Botanical Gardens, the following remark:—"When will the shareholders of the East India Railway be prevailed on, in their own interests as well as those of the public, to complete their magnificent line by running it into Calcutta over a Hooghly bridge? It had been finished at the other end by the opening of the Jumna-bridge into the Delhi terminus on New Year's-day."

In a previous part of the same letter it was stated that "the East India Railway steamer, returning from a fancy fair at the Botanical Gardens with more than its proper complement of 600 passengers, ran upon one of the wrecks made by the cyclone and began to sink."

In your issue of the 7th February you state that the steamer ran upon the wreck of the tug-steamer Satellite, "which was not properly blown up by Lieut. Wallace after the cyclone," and the Bombay Gazette, from which you quote, remarks that this accident remains as "a remarkable tribute to the foresight and prudence of an Indian Government that an old sunken hulk has been allowed to block up the river in the very line of traffic for upwards of a couple of years."

Now, it may fairly be remarked on the above as follows:—

1st. That the Botanical Gardens, whence the pleasure party was returning, are at least six miles below Calcutta or Howrah.

2nd. That the party was evidently one whose chief anticipated pleasure was the trip down the river; and that to them a bridge over the Thames would have been about as useful, in case of an accident, as one that could be constructed by the railway company over the Hooghly.

3rd. That the accident arose not from the want of a bridge, as asserted by the Times' correspondent, nor from want of prudence on the part of the Government, as asserted by the Bombay Gazette, but simply, apparently, from the intoxication of the person who had charge of the steamer, who went "far out of the channel" and inside a "very prominent buoy," marking the wreck. Of course, the Government had to blow up a great many wrecks after the cyclone of October, 1864, and, doubtless, this one, possibly an iron vessel, being far out of the channel, had been left to the last. We may safely assume that no prudence on the part of the Government could provide against accidents to a steamer in charge of a drunken captain, and the remarks of the Times' correspondent would have been more apropos if they had suggested to the East India Railway shareholders the desirableness of appointing sober commanders to their ferry steamers, instead of bringing forward a particular case as a reason for building a bridge, in which such a bridge could not possibly have been of any use.

However, the question of a bridge across the Hooghly is a very important one, and I purpose, with your permission, to hinge a few remarks in your columns on the Times' correspondent's recommendation, however mal apropos it may have been.

You are aware that the great cyclone of the 5th October, 1864, considerably disturbed the easy-going satisfaction of the Government, and the sullen content of the Calcutta public with the arrangements which had misled up to that date in the port of Calcutta. On that day the whole of the fleet of magnificent ships on the Hooghly were driven from their moorings, many high up the river, some on to the strand on the Calcutta side, others on to the mud banks on the Howrah side. Many were total wrecks, many severely damaged, most more or less so.

I should also state that in the whole Calcutta River there is only one place (at the P. and O. Company's wharf) where either passengers or goods can be got into a sea-going vessel from the bank except by means of miserable crank boats, manned by miserably unhandy crews, in a miserably dangerous tideway.

The terrible disaster in October, 1864, caused the Calcutta public to awake, and to become alive to the obvious objection there was to having the ships, which caused the prosperity of Calcutta, destroyed at one fell blow, and consequently many plans have been suggested for the safer berthing of the shipping, and the greater convenience and safety of the inhabitants, whether pursuing their avocations of business or pleasure on the river.

One division of holders of opinions on this subject advocate wet docks as absolutely necessary for this purpose; and another division represent that the river itself is a sufficiently good wet dock if proper moorings and means of getting to or from the ships be provided.

The first set, however, are staggered by the improbability of any proper system of wet docks being possible except at a most enormous cost. The second set are subdivided—one sub-division want a proper system of floating stages, another would prefer standing jetties, and a third want a wharf-wall along the whole bank on the Calcutta side of the river. But all these sub-divisions are agreed as to the necessity of proper moorings.

It is not my intention to trouble you with a description of the several projects which have been proposed to carry out these several objects, but I may say that nothing has, as yet, been done, though much discussion has taken place. My own opinion is that, in the face of the cost of wet docks—which, after all, may or may not answer, owing to the peculiar nature of the soil and the heavy silt-heaving properties of the Hooghly, and which certainly will not do away with the necessity of proper means being provided of embarking and disembarking from steamers or ships lying in the river—a compromise between the sub-divisions of the second set of opinion-holders will occur, as the existing miserable state of accommodation for the trade in Calcutta will assuredly not be allowed to continue. But this statement of the case, in regard to these projects, is necessary for an understanding of what follows in regard to the proposed bridge.

Now, I may perhaps be allowed to compare the Mersey between Liverpool and Birkenhead with the Hooghly between Calcutta and Howrah. Liverpool is much larger and inestimably richer than Calcutta; Birkenhead is similarly larger and richer than Howrah. The Mersey would probably be much more easily bridged, at all events it could be done at much less cost, than the Hooghly at Calcutta, and yet there is no bridge over the Mersey between Liverpool and Birkenhead.

Howrah became a place of some slight importance in the first instance from the fact of its having been justly found a convenient place for the dry docks for the repair of ships, but it has been raised into a place of much greater importance from the fact of the East India Railway terminus and workshops having been (as regards the former) most inconveniently, as it seems to me, placed there. As regards itself and its trade, Howrah is a place of no importance at all.

Now, suppose we admit that wet docks may be made on the Calcutta side of the Hooghly, as they have been established at Liverpool, on the Liverpool side of the Mersey, will it justify a bridge across the Hooghly between Calcutta and Howrah, a place of no importance, when it has not been found necessary (though I believe there was a project, which came to nothing, of bridging or tunnelling the Mersey) between Liverpool and Birkenhead, a place of very great importance, under much more advantageous circumstances generally? Will not good steam ferries, which have been found to answer hitherto between the latter places, also meet the wants of the former for at least the next century?

If, however, the second set of opinions which I have noticed above in regard to retaining the Hooghly basin itself as a wet dock hold good, the objections to a bridge over the Hooghly at or near Calcutta increase in gravity. It is true that (taking another parallel) there is a splendid bridge by Stephenson between Newcastle and Gateshead over the Tyne, but this bridge will permit vessels to pass under it, and is a bridge chiefly useful to the railway traffic. A high-level bridge in such a place could not be put over the Hooghly. The Tyne being to some extent itself the wet dock of the port, it is now found necessary to remove the old low-level bridge between Newcastle and Gateshead, and to build a new one with drawbridges, to admit vessels higher up the river, and thus to expand the water space. But the Tyne is a small river, with no fear of cyclones or "bores," and Gateshead and Newcastle are each in themselves places of important trades requiring intimate intercommunication, which can be obtained at small cost. Such is not the case in regard to Howrah and its communication with Calcutta. In fact, I believe nine-tenths of the inhabitants of each place would prefer a steam-ferry with proper floating stages to the bridge between Calcutta and Howrah, irrespective of the railway traffic.

The cost of a bridge or tunnel between Calcutta and Howrah would be enormous, and such a bridge would be liable to all the dangers of ships, &c., driving against it, &c., and to the probability of its interfering with the expansion upwards of the port, and it would not, in my opinion, be the most convenient place for the railway. The parallel I have noticed of Liverpool and Birkenhead shows that it cannot be necessary as regards the places (Calcutta and Howrah) themselves, even if wet docks be established irrespective of the river as they have been at Liverpool. While the parallel of Newcastle and Gateshead, though on a small scale as regards the river, shows the inconvenience of blocking up the expansive power of a river, in case it is even partly retained as the wet dock.

But, still, there can be no doubt the East India Railway should run its line into a Calcutta terminus without the break of the river. You are aware, Sir, perhaps, that sixteen miles above Calcutta there is the station of Barrackpore on the left bank of the river (or Calcutta side), through which from Calcutta the Eastern Bengal Company run their line of railway, and that on the right bank of the river, some fourteen miles above Howrah, there is the station of Serampore (just opposite Barrackpore), through which from Howrah the East India Company runs their line of railway, and they run nearly parallel to each other for some distance north beyond these stations on opposite sides of the river. It is impossible to conceive in these days why Howrah was ever fixed on as a terminus for the chief railway of the country, and why the railway did not follow the old line of traffic with the north-west from Calcutta, via Phulthah Ghat and Burdwan direct to Benares (and which line was clearly pointed out by the old Grand-trunk-road), instead of taking the circuitous route from Howrah all along the banks of the Ganges, taking all tributaries to the Ganges from the south at their widest points. The shorter line beyond Burdwan in continuation from Raneegunge via Shergotty will have yet to be undertaken, though it may not be called for immediately; but a bridge over the Hooghly at or above Phultah Ghat, and a junction by its means between the Eastern Bengal Railway at or about Barrackpore with the Eastern India Railway somewhere between Serampore and Chinsurah, with a common grand terminus, not only for these two railways, but for all future railways, at Sealdah, in Calcutta, is a necessity which might with great advantage, as it seems to me, be met at once. At Phultah Ghat there is, I understand, good foundation and less width of river to span, and a bridge there would in no way interfere with the arrangements of the port of Calcutta. It is quite inconceivable in the present day how a statesman like Lord Dalhousie could have been so overruled as to allow the chief railway line in the country to be brought down to, or rather to start from Howrah, except it was to avoid altogether the cost of a bridge. But, after all, I do not know that it makes much matter, for if a bridge must be built, of the necessity of which I have no doubt, I think I have given good reasons, both as regards cost and convenience, for its being far above Calcutta. The terminus at Howrah, and the line thence to the junction with the main (as, in my humble opinion, it should be) line above the bridge at or near Phultah Ghat, will be always useful as a depot for import or export of European goods, and plant and stock for this great railway and its extensions or branches, and sufficiently accommodate the small number of passengers between Howrah and the junction, while it will relieve the main line of much of the block which would arise if everything in the shape of goods, &c., had to be sent from the Calcutta terminus. It is possible, therefore, that we may thank Lord Dalhousie for the mistake, provided the mistake be soon rectified.

It is true, perhaps, that we may look for an extension of railways to the south-west from Calcutta; but this could be easily arranged for by having the junction of any such railways with the East India Railway at Burdwan or Chinsurah, or anywhere above the bridge; and, with this view, the bridge should be at once made wide enough to meet all events.

I believe this plan of having the railway bridge above Barrackpore had the sanction, as regards opinion, of at least one chief engineer of the East India Railway Company; and, as I have said, I don't know what, beyond political (if any) objections, could have been urged against carrying it out. I presume they must have been strong, though not patent to me. At all events there are reasons for carrying out this plan fitter for the consideration of this great railway company than those suggested by the Times' correspondent. Whatever is done it is to be hoped that a comprehensive plan will be adopted which will give a grand central terminus at Calcutta (forming the centre or rather starting point of any system of metropolitan railways which may be devised), with lines running into it from all quarters without a break, but which shall not, at the same time, clash with the other public interests involved. It is possible, too, that the Howrah terminus may come to be useful as a grand central goods (European) terminus and depot for all plant and stock for the railways in Bengal south of the Ganges, and west of the Hooghly.

London, with all its magnificent individual works, is in inextricable confusion as regards all general arrangements of convenience and economy, and it behoves Calcutta to look upon London, in regard to general plan, as an example of what is to be avoided rather than of what is to be followed.

This letter has extended to a greater length than was intended, but the subject seems to be of the highest importance, and I therefore trust you will excuse it, and permit me to remain your most obedient servant,

A. F.

COLONEL BARROW has been appointed to officiate as Judicial Commissioner of Oudh. The colonel has now passed through nearly every appointment in this province, and it was gravely suggested to us by a very steady son of the Church that, as there appears to be a great difficulty in filling the Metropolitan See, he should, after the return of Sir George Couper, be translated to the diocese of Calcutta. We cordially support this suggestion. —Oudh Gazette, Jan. 16.

AN OFFICIAL PICTURE OF THE FAMINE.

After the meagre and tardy reports of the local officials, and the still continued silence and concealment of information like Mr. Ravenshaw's by the Bengal Government, it is some slight satisfaction to see the diary of Mr. Herschel, magistrate of Midnapore, when all is over. His narrative reads like the description of a visit to the field of battle just when the dead have been buried out of sight. Our first feeling is one of surprise that the magistrate of the district should not have long before visited the villages which he describes, and that all should seem to be so new to one who was responsible for the well-being of the people. Midnapore, which lies next to Orissa, is of the size of Yorkshire, without the East Riding, and has, or had, upwards of half a million of people. It suffered far more from famine than Ganjam, but far less than Cuttack, Balasore, or Pooree, because it is not so isolated from more favoured districts, its people could emigrate to the capital and elsewhere more easily, and it is not exposed to the devastations of storm, waves, and river inundations.

Mr. Herschel begins with Narainghur, where the palanquin bearers had suffered very much and the labourers were too proud to do the work of coolies. On the way to Raneesurie, the next village, he was told by the owners of several caravans of new rice—peasants who were selling it to pay their rent—that the deaths at their place, Dantoon, had been "very numerous." A little further on there was being burned the corpse of man who had died from phula, a disease caused by gorging with new rice. The police-inspector of Naraingunge reported 2,000 deaths as the lowest number in his jurisdiction. A visitor who had just returned from Balasore represented that place as "depopulated, made a clean sweep of, compared to Dantoon," and Dantoon is the spot where the deaths were "very numerous." In two villages sixty out of a population of 125 had died; "one house of twelve had lost six." In Dantoon the survivors, examined apart from each other, described the deaths as from one-eighth to one-fourth of the population. In Gugnesur, near a relief station, one-fifth had died. In Sunknarain there are twenty-one houses, of which six are empty now; in another, twenty houses with fifteen people dead. In Kessearree, being a relief centre, only four per cent. died—"the old and weak died in great numbers." "I have seen very few grey heads except on fat shoulders," says Mr. Herschel. The relief committee thought that in the surrounding country from an eighth to a fourth of the whole population had perished. "Small-pox, cholera, and fever had raged very severely."

So much for death in a mildly afflicted district. The people were very grateful for help—"If it had not been for the reliefs, Sir, we should have all died," said the people of three villages. Mr. Herschel's diary shows that in exact proportion to the distance from relief was the mortality. Again he is emphatic as to the absence of stores of grain when the famine appeared—"They tell me here that the mahajuns really had exhausted their stores, that, after the present harvest, there will scarcely be a grain of last year's crop even in the granaries. I discovered, what I had scarcely supposed before, that mahajuns used to keep rice as much as 30 years in their hamars. The speaker said he had eaten rice 50 years old, and that he was still using his own rice, which was nearly 30 years old. I got some of it from him as a sample." These two facts of the good done by relief and the absence of stores are a black commentary on the ignorance and unbelief of the Bengal Government up to the middle of May. They prove that if the local officials had possessed the most ordinary knowledge of their districts and their superiors had shown the slightest foresight, the famine in Midnapore and Orissa might have been reduced to small proportions by a liberal expenditure. The village mahajuns seem to have behaved better than the zemindars. The Moonsiff of Dantoon complained bitterly that the native officials were the only active relief agents. One Juggobundoo made it a matter of dispute that he was blamed, for had he not attended one meeting of the committee? The three wealthiest zemindars within twenty miles subscribed barely Rs. 50, and excused themselves on the ground that they had no stores of their own. One man fed five hundred morning and evening till cholera broke out in his house, and then he ceased his benevolence. This entry occurs in the diary at Raneesurie:—"No competition among zemindars for ryots here. Rents have not run any risk of being lowered. I cannot find here that any one has made any donation to the famine fund. The zemindar's servants admit that none of their masters have done so, and none of the villagers have either." The mahajuns are well spoken of by the zemindars. They have raised their ordinary rates of interest from fifty to a hundred per cent., payable when the new crop is cut, "but this is moderate compared to prices; reduced to cash it is a dead loss." As to the future—"I hear on all sides that the country has been fully cultivated, and that the crop, which certainly does seem a very fine one, is God's gift for two years."

In reading this diary one fact is painfully evident. It refers only to the agricultural class. No reference is made to the aboriginal tribes of the jungly hills towards Chota Nagpore, nor to the purely labouring class, who seem to have died out. Mr. Herschel is by no means clear on this point, but this speaks volumes:—"The people have no fears for the future, at least not for the agriculturists. For the working classes they can only say that they are always miserable." The conclusion to which we must come from the mild experience of Midnapore is that at least a fifth of its population have died, and of 110,000 victims more than a half would have been saved by earlier relief, had the responsible officials possessed the slightest knowledge of the state of the district or shown the most ordinary foresight.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. MASSEY'S BUDGET.—There will probably be no Income-tax in any form this year. That is so valuable an impost in a time of difficulty that Mr. Massey, we believe, is anxious to keep it in reserve. The new tax is likely to be of a purely licence character, and to be laid on the Local Governments rateably, to the extent of from at least half to three-fourths of a million, in the manner we lately described. The half million likely to accrue from increasing the stamp duties on civil suits for large amounts renders it certain that the sum to be raised by new taxation will not exceed a million sterling. The taxing Act will be passed by the Governor-general's Council, but levied by the Local Administrations in their own way. At first sight we regret a decision which seems to postpone the time when our system of taxation will be adjusted so as to fall fairly on all classes. We doubt also if a licence tax, in any form other than one on professions, can be raised without affecting the poor. This tax, moreover, has already been surrendered to a large extent by the Supreme Government to Municipalities. But we await Mr. Massey's financial exposition, which is sure to be at once elaborate and cautious.—Friend of India.

RAILWAY PROSPECTS.—The railway from Ghazeeabad to Seharunpore, the station for Roorkee and Mussourie, is not after all to be open till April, 1868, the smaller section to Mozuffnuggur being ready in January, 1868. This unexpected slowness is due to the want of fuel for brick-burning in the Doab. But almost simultaneously the line will be completed to Umballa, or by 1st May, 1868. Government has accordingly warned the directors in time that their supply of 22 locomotives will fall far short of the immediate requirements of the line as far as Umballa, 147 miles in length. Years must pass before the existing lines are supplied with the 418 engines ordered a twelve-month ago, for all the Continental as well as English workshops are deluged with orders. Those who seek the Doon and Mussourie may thus be able to use the railway as far as Saharunpore at the beginning of the hot season after next. If Simla still continues to be the asylum of the Government of India, its residents will not have the advantage of the railway to Umballa till their return in 1868. What progress has the Maharajah of Putialla's scheme for a line from Umballa to Kalka made?

FINANCIAL.—The Gazette notifies the arrangements under which holders of Government promissory notes may register them in the Bank of Bengal in the form of a book debt and receive stock certificates as at home. Stock so registered may, on the application of the proprietor, be sold or transferred in whole or in part, or be re-converted into the ordinary promissory notes in sums of Rs. 500 and upwards in even hundreds of rupees. Holders of notes of the various 4 per cent. loans, who may be desirous of registering them, will receive in exchange for the consolidated amount a stock certificate, not transferable by endorsement, of the 4 per cent. loan of 1st May, 1865. On notes of the Sica loans, fractional parts under one hundred rupees will, as at present, be either paid in cash by the bank or be made up to even hundreds on payment of the difference by the holders. Notes of the various Four per Cent. Loans may also be consolidated at the option of the holders into notes of a corresponding amount in the Four per Cent. Transfer Loan of 1st May, 1865. Holders of registered stock who may be desirous of transferring the whole or any portion of the amount to England with a view to sale, payment of interest there, or of being held continuously as an investment, will obtain from the bank a non-transferable certificate in duplicate, on production of which at the Bank of England the amount will be registered in the name of the payee, and a certificate issued. The advantages of this change, initiated by the Bank of Bengal, to holders of notes who use them for temporary purposes, we pointed out several months ago.

LUCKNOW, Jan. 16.—Several very important but temporary changes were made in the higher posts of the Oudh Commission at the end of last week. It was the intention of Mr. St. George Tucker, Judicial Commissioner, to go home on sick leave at the end of next month, but owing to an accident Mr. Tucker has been compelled to give up the reins of his office sooner than was expected. On descending from his coach box at the entrance to the Chutter Munzil on the occasion of the late theatrical performance, the Judicial Commissioner missed his footing and fell on his head upon the stone pavement. Though insensible for nearly an hour, next morning he was said to be himself again. Unhappily, however, a few days showed that his nervous system had been a good deal shaken by the fall, and the heavy work on hand prevented his recovery. Preparatory leave was consequently obtained, and Colonel Barrow entered upon the duties of the Judicial Commissionership, which he will probably continue to perform until the return of Sir George Couper from England. Mr. H. S. Reid, Commissioner of Fyzabad, was brought in to act as Financial Commissioner, his locum tenens being Mr. Carnegie. While rejoicing that no serious injury resulted from Mr. Tucker's unfortunate fall, it is to be regretted that that amiable and affable gentleman was unable to finish his work before going on leave.

I am sorry to record that a similar accident a few days ago befell Colonel Vesey, of Her Majesty's 46th Regiment. It is said that his horse was frightened by an elephant, which, contrary to custom and order, was being ridden down the mall at driving time. The gallant colonel was a long time insensible, and for some days continued in a precarious state. Were more vigilance shown by the police in carrying out the municipal and cantonment regulations, such accidents would not occur. It was only last Sunday evening, when numerous carriages were being driven about Wingfield Park that a long string of camels might be seen wending its way through groves and along roads never intended to be desecrated by camels' feet. Such things should not be.—Delhi Gazette.

SCENES IN BURMAH.—This may be taken as a mild specimen of one of the many scenes of cruelty which occurred during the Burmese rebellion. The Rangoon Times is our authority. Marcar Abraham, an Armenian trader, for visiting the son of the murdered heir apparent, was taken by the King's chamberlain, Peter Camaratta, a co-religionist, from the Residency, where he considered himself secure under the British flag, and was so cruelly beaten with iron hammers to force him to say what was required to convict him of treason, that the poor old man vomited blood in large quantities. When the victim had stated all he was asked he was cast into prison with seven irons on his legs. Not long after he was strangled to death with a rope round his neck, and his body rolled in a mat was thrown into the river. Since Col. Phayre left Mandalay the King has been more reckless than ever. He seems to have surrounded himself with advisers of a disreputable character. A correspondent of the Rangoon Times mentions a report as current at the capital that one of the exiled Princes in Rangoon had become King of Pegu, that all the Kalas' throats are cut, and that a great famine in Bengal had reduced that province to a desert. A large number of Burmese families have been stopped at Minla, on their way down to our frontier. Immigration to our territories would be very large if there was no check. All confidence is lost in the King's rule, and notwithstanding that there is at present quietness no security is felt, and everybody appears to apprehend that some great calamity is not far distant. The work of Government has ceased, and trade is non-existent; the only sign of life being an order for a gunboat given to an English firm by the King. His Majesty shows no inclination to pay his debts to the merchants, and British subjects and Europeans are treated much worse now than they were before. In fact the King is reckless.

AN EYRE DEFENCE COMMITTEE has been formed at Lahore, and it seems to include almost all the officials in the Punjab capital. Major Hutchinson, the Inspector-General of Police, seconded by Mr. C. U. Aitchison, the Deputy Commissioner, proposed the following resolution at a public meeting:—"That the speedy termination of the formidable insurrection in Jamaica is chiefly attributable to the skill and energy displayed by Governor Eyre, whereby the lives of thousands of her Majesty's subjects were saved and the island of Jamaica was preserved to the British Crown. That the denunciation of Mr. Eyre by a narrow section of the English press does not represent the deliberate voice of the English people; and that this meeting heartily sympathise with Mr. Eyre and his family in their unmerited misfortune." They were followed by Dr. Dallas and Mr. Fitzpatrick, C.S., with the resolution—"That to bring Mr. Eyre to trial on a charge of murder would be a perversion of the course of public justice; and the attempt to do so would, if successful, tend seriously to impair the vigour and efficiency of the Governments of the colonies and dependencies of Great Britain." A committee was appointed to collect subscriptions, and the officials of the principal stations of the Punjab have been invited to co-operate. This movement is largely sympathised with in India, not that Anglo-Indians entirely justify Mr. Eyre, but if he is to be prosecuted on a charge of murder, the lives and government of Englishmen among semi-barbarous races will be in jeopardy.

THE TARIFF.—The last Gazette publishes a resolution in which the Governor-General in Council thanks and dissolves the Tariff Committee. Nothing can be known of the extent to which Government will adopt their recommendation till the Budget appears a month or six weeks hence. We see from the Madras Times that some part of the committee's report has got abroad, especially the recommendation of a reduction of the duty on light wines. To this we may add that it is proposed to reduce the duty on cotton twist and yarn, a step which will please Manchester while encouraging native manufactures. The revision and new classification of articles recommended is very thorough and in the direction of Mr. Gladstone's reforms. But the reduction of duties will depend entirely on the state of the balance-sheet, which even Government can hardly guess at, as the local budgets have only now been sent in. The suggestion as to reducing the wine duties is the most doubtful of those made by the committee. Any remission of duty would simply, we fear, be forestalled by the foreign grower or importer without benefiting the Indian consumer. The experiment, however, ought to be tried for a year, as the result, if it be obtained, will be worth the sacrifice.—Friend of India.

THE SOANE CANALS.—The East India Irrigation Company has agreed to undertake the restricted Soane canals project as planned originally by Colonel Dickens. It may, however, be unable to raise the necessary funds. In that case the Government of India will this year undertake the scheme as the first of the proposed remunerative irrigation works, and will require to raise rather a large sum in the Indian market. Should the company, however, be able to find the necessary funds in England, it is not probable, we understand, that Mr. Massey will ask for more than a million sterling as a floating or debenture loan, and not till next year, the intervening time being spent in organising a department and making other preparations.—Friend of India.

THE ACCIDENT ON THE HOOGLEY.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette says:—"Captain Taylor has been released on bail, two securities in 1,500 each and himself in 2,500. They say he is one of those men who by some peculiarity of manner give the idea to a stranger who does not know them intimately, of being intoxicated, when they are in reality quite sober. Many of the railway officials are prepared, I understand, to give him a character for sobriety extending over an intimacy of many years. I was wrong in saying in my letter the other day that the Calcutta was licensed to carry 300 and took on board 600. She is licensed to carry 600 and took on board 800 or 900. Had the accident occurred in deep water nearly 400 souls would have perished."

A CIVIL SERVICE SCANDAL.—Rumour states that the Commissioner of the Burdwan Division and the Inspector-general of Police have visited Bancoorah and made very secret inquiries into a most mysterious case in which two gentlemen of the Civil Service and two men of the less favoured class are implicated. The case is a heavy one, and it is expected will end seriously for either the informer or the accused, as the Government cannot permit the matter to be hushed up.—Englishman, Jan. 17.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—Return of traffic for week ending 6th January, 1867:—Miles open, 1,131; coaching receipts, £12,023-16-10; goods receipts, £26,416-0-3; total, £38,439-17-1; per mile of railway, £33-19-11.

RUMOURED DEPARTURE OF MR. JUSTICE CAMPBELL ON LEAVE.—We understand that on the termination of his labours on the Famine Commission Mr. Justice Campbell goes home for a year on leave. It is said that Mr. Pigoun, of Hooghly, will officiate for him. Mr. Justice Trevor is also expected to retire in March or April, in which case Mr. Glover, who has been Officiating Judge for some time, will probably receive the permanent appointment.—Englishman, Jan. 18.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. TINLING.—A large number of Calcutta folk met at the house of Mr. Scott Moncrieff a short time since to listen to an address by Mr. Tinling on the new year. To an intense reality of feeling and belief Mr. Tinling adds a power of illustration at once homely, original, and beautiful. So much truth, sweeping down the conventionalities and barriers by which the spiritual life of "good society" is built up and deadened, was seldom crowded into so small a space. There will be another meeting on the 11th inst., at half-past eight p.m., in the house of Mr. C. S. Hogg.

ACCIDENT TO GENERAL RAINIER.—We regret exceedingly to learn that General Rainier, C.B., commanding the Lahore division, has met with rather a severe accident. It appears that when returning home last Wednesday morning his horse suddenly reared and threw his rider; the general sustained a severe concussion, and dislocated his shoulder. We are happy to announce that he is doing famously.—Lahore Chronicle, Jan. 12.

THE AFFAIRS OF THE EX-KING OF OUDE.—Wearied out with the state of affairs at Garden Reach, the Supreme Government has at length made a representation to the Secretary of State on the extravagance of the ex-King of Oude, and pointed out that his incumbrances are of such a character as to call for the interference of the Viceroy, a measure to which the sanction of Lord Cranborne has accordingly been requested.—Englishman, Jan. 19.

LATEST SENSATION INTELLIGENCE FROM THE PUNJAB.—The latest sensation intelligence from the Punjab relates to the vagaries of an astrologer named Krishna, who ventured to predict that within a short time the neighbourhood of Umritsur would be the scene of a sanguinary conflict with the English. As if to make the matter more than usually ridiculous, the astrologer embodied his prediction in an urzee to Sir Donald McLeod.—Lahore Chronicle.

THE HIGH COURT BENCH, N.W.P.—The Hon. Messrs. Ross and Edwards, Judges of the High Court, who have just returned from Europe, took their seats on the bench on the 17th. The return of these officers removes Messrs. Spankie and Turner, the former of whom has gone to Futtelghur as judge. There is a report that three judges of the N.W.P. have been removed, or are to be removed from their offices on the recommendation of the High Court on account of incompetency.—Delhi Gazette.

MELANCHOLY.—The number of students who have passed the First Arts Examination of the Calcutta University, or Little-go, is very small, being out of 426 only 131, or not a third, and of these only fourteen are in the first division, while forty-four are in the second, and seventy-three in the third. This does not say much for the thorough character of collegiate education throughout Northern India.

THE CHARGE AGAINST MR. HUMPHREY.—Some of the native papers have raised an outcry against Mr. Humphrey, officiating magistrate and collector of Furreedpore, for cruelty. The case has engaged the attention of the Lieutenant-Governor, and we now hear that the Viceroy has called upon the local authorities to submit to the Indian Government all the papers bearing on the case which may be in their possession.

COLONEL FYTCHE has been appointed Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, and will shortly proceed to relieve Colonel Phayre. This is, on the whole, the best appointment that could have been made in very difficult circumstances. As a measure of retaliation, we are glad to learn the Government of India has determined to re-impose the export duties on certain articles which cross the Burmese frontier.—Friend of India.

CALCUTTA WATER SUPPLY SCHEME.—It has been decided by Government that the sum required, fifty-two lakhs, to carry out the water supply scheme shall be raised by four annual loans of thirteen lakhs each.

MISCELLANEOUS.

VISIT OF THE GOVERNOR OF PONDICHERY.—The past week has been characterised by a flying visit from H.E. Monsieur Bontemps, the Governor of Pondicherry, who reached Madras early on the morning of the 16th January, by the Messageries steamer Erymanthe. His Excellency, though a very early visitor, was received with all due honour. There was a salute of 17 guns, and in addition to the band and one company of H.M.'s 60th Rifles, there were two members of Council, Lord Napier's aide-de-camp and Mr. Lecot, the Vice-Consul for France at this port, on the pier to receive him. On landing, M. Bontemps went first to the residence of the Vice-Consul, where he breakfasted, and then proceeded to Guindy to pay Lord Napier a visit. The visit was necessarily a brief one, as the Governor of Pondicherry had to be back to the Erymanthe by noon, to proceed on the voyage to Calcutta. Lord Napier received M. Bontemps with great cordiality, and requested him to prolong his visit on returning to Madras. M. Bontemps has made this visit to Calcutta, we believe, with a view to make arrangements for completing the railway to Conjeeveram, so as to connect Pondicherry with the main lines throughout India. In a commercial point of view Pondicherry is rising in importance every day, and improved means of communication with the interior will doubtless be of great benefit to the French settlement. So desirable is the railway considered that it is not at all improbable that after his interview with the Governor-General M. Bontemps will proceed at once to France to make arrangements with the Imperial Government for the immediate execution of the project. M. Bontemps is expected to arrive from Calcutta by the steamer due on the 5th proximo.—Madras Times, Jan. 23.

MISS CARPENTER has returned to Madras and is actively engaged in her good work. Some of the most influential Hindus in Madras have presented an address to her, thanking her warmly for all that she has done in the cause of female education. At a meeting in the Evangelistic-hall the other evening Miss Carpenter explained at considerable length her scheme of female education. The first want, she said, was teachers, and to supply this she proposed the establishment of a normal school, at which Hindu females could be trained as teachers. The school would be under the superintendence of a good English mistress, and there would be no interference with the religion of the students. Both in Calcutta and Bombay the Government has been petitioned to establish such a school; those interested in the cause of native female education in this Presidency, are also petitioning Government to the same end. If the natives, however, are really in earnest in this movement, they should require no assistance whatever from Government. They are quite rich enough to start and support such an institution themselves, and it would be infinitely more to their credit to do so. We cannot help thinking that the interference of Government would be calculated to impede rather than promote the object in view. Miss Carpenter has done exceedingly good service in drawing attention to the neglected condition of Hindu females, and we do not doubt that her visit to India will ere long show beneficial results.—Ibid.

COLONEL DENISON, the new President of the Municipal Commission, seems to have been roused to extraordinary activity by the unfavourable criticism of the Press on his appointment. The Colonel has in fact thrown down the gauntlet, and invited criticism. He has addressed a letter to the local papers, which may be said to embody the policy he intends to carry out at the Municipal Board. One of his first acts has been a decidedly popular one. The proceedings of the Board will no longer be conducted with closed doors, and henceforth the representatives of the press will be permitted to record Municipal sayings and doings for the benefit of the public. This after all is but conceding to the tax-payers what they are justly entitled to, and the singular thing is that they should have been indifferent to their rights and privileges so long. The habit of looking to Government for everything, which is so characteristic of the Indian public, has probably induced this feeling of apathy, which would certainly not be found in any other British community out of India. Colonel Denison has also made public a scheme for replanting the roadways and avenues of Madras, which are falling into sad decay through a long course of neglect. To plant 227 miles of road, comprised in an area of 27 square miles, requires more funds than are at the disposal of the Municipal Commissioners, and so the Colonel has suggested the levying of a "friendly" tax amongst those who take an interest in this work, and has invited the assistance of all householders in rearing and looking after young plants. Colonel Denison's scheme has not been received unfavourably, and so far as the latter part of his suggestion is concerned, he will receive willing assistance from the wealthier inhabitants of Madras. If people will only give him the help he asks for, the Colonel promises that "in the course of a few years Madras shall present a very different appearance to what it does now."—Ibid.

MR. PELLY, the senior member of the Board of Revenue, having completed his term of service, has retired. Mr. Brett now becomes the senior member, and Mr. Clarke the second member, and the vacancy created by Mr. Pelly's retirement has been filled by Mr. J. D. Sim, who was formerly Secretary to Government in the Financial Department. Mr. Sim's post has been taken by Mr. Hudleston, the Secretary to the Revenue Board; Mr. Dalyell has been promoted from Sub-Secretary to Secretary, and Mr. Cockerell takes Mr. Dalyell's place as Sub-Secretary.—Ibid.

THE MADRAS RACES will commence on Thursday the 31st inst. and extend over the ensuing week. The programme is an unusually attractive one, and will comprise among other races one for the "Star of India Plate," of the value of Rs. 1,500, given by H.H. the Maharajah of Travancore, who will probably be in Madras at the time of the race, his Highness being about to come down to receive installation to the order of the Star of India.—Ibid.

THE JUBBULPORE EXHIBITION.—A letter in the Bombay Gazette says:—"Since I wrote the Exhibition has been closed, Mr. Temple delivered on the closing day a long speech noticing all the main points of the show. The medals intended for presentation to successful exhibitors were not ready, so Mr. Temple had to content himself with a brief mention of the best things in each department." After noticing several respects in which he considered the Exhibition superior to that of Nagpore, Mr. Temple said:—"Again, the erection of special structures for the purpose of the Exhibition and the laying out of the ground has been on a finer scale at Jubbulpore than at Nagpore, and the horticultural display has been much finer at Jubbulpore. Lastly, the number of visitors, upwards of fifteen thousand at Jubbulpore, bears a good proportion to Nagpore, especially when it is remembered that Nagpore is very much the larger place of the two. The number of season tickets taken by the upper class of natives from all parts of these provinces has been proportionally great in Jubbulpore. The amount realised by the sale of tickets, upwards of Rs. 12,000, has been considerable, and quite equal to our expectations. And the amount of articles sold, especially of machinery, has been actually greater at Jubbulpore than at Nagpore, the aggregate value of sales, so far as can be made out as yet, being something short of a lakh of rupees. Thus, though opinions may vary as to the relative merits of the two shows, and though the Nagpore Exhibition is not easy to be surpassed in these provinces at least, still the items of superiority in favour of Jubbulpore are considerable, and the Jubbulpore committee may pride themselves on the place they won for themselves side by side with their comrades at Nagpore." The correspondent adds, "I do not think I can add much to the resumé of the best things in the Exhibition. The beauty and the excellence of the stone carving, the brass work, and the gold and silver work from some comparatively unknown districts would really astonish you. The tastefulness and beauty of the grounds and of the exterior of the Exhibition were really remarkable. But there are one or two criticisms which Mr. Temple refrained to make, mainly, perhaps, out of unwillingness to disparage the work of a committee which had done so well. It seemed to me, and, indeed, to most other people too, that the internal decorations were nothing like in keeping with the external."

THE STATE OF THE ROADS IN AND ABOUT BANGALORE is a cause for more than usual grumbling. That many of them are undeniably in a wretched condition is palpable; but while blaming no one in particular, we most decidedly think that the fault lies in the system. The fact is that no less than three different parties are responsible for our roads—to wit, the civil engineer, the military engineer, and the Municipal Board. When one road costs Rs. 300 a mile for being repaired, whilst another, and perhaps a more important one, is repaired at the rate of Rs. 80 a mile, how is it possible to prevent grumbling? We think it will be willingly conceded that as the roads are all public so they should be equally well cared for. Why, then, such an immense difference in the cost of their repair? Of course the military, civil, and municipal authorities just do what they like with their own, but at the same time the public ought not to suffer. The best remedy for the present state of things would, we think, be to place all the roads in Bangalore under one responsible head, each and all to be repaired and kept in order at one uniform rate. While we have military roads, and civil roads, and municipal roads, there will always be complaints. We commend the subject to the notice of the proper authorities.

WRECK OF THE "MONITOR."—Since we last made mention of the wreck of the barque Monitor, we have learnt further particulars which we shall lay before the public. The vessel, which is commanded by Captain Robb, was totally lost on Tangacherry or Quiton reef. She was bound from Singapore to Bombay with a cargo consisting of railway sleepers, rice, sago, dammer, &c.; and only a small portion of the cargo is saved. The chief officer and crew arrived here a day or two ago, and Captain Castor, our Master Attendant, has been telegraphed for to survey the ship before she is abandoned. The circumstance has been reported to Madras, and it is not known as yet whether the investigation into the loss of this vessel on a well known reef and coast will take place here or at Bombay. We hear that so totally has the vessel been broken up that little or nothing of the hull remains to be saved. Our Master Attendant and Lloyd's agent start for the scene of disaster this evening.—Western Star, Jan. 5.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—The Hon. C. Pelly, first member of the Revenue Board, retires from the service on the 15th January. Messrs. H. A. Brett and T. Clarke, second and third members of the Board, will consequently be promoted to the first and second memberships respectively; and we understand that Mr. J. D. Sim will be appointed to the third member.

GENERAL POST-OFFICE.—We are informed that the Director-general of Post-offices in India has sanctioned the proposed scale of the Postmaster-general, Madras, increasing the salaries of the subordinates of his department, as also the entertainment of a few more clerks in the Mofussil Post-offices.

EMBARKATION OF TROOPS.—The right wing 33rd Regiment Native Infantry which arrived by rail from Bangalore, embarked with their families by the steamers Clara and Prince Arthur, en route to Vizianagrum, via Bimlipatam.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

"PUNCH" IN INDIA is still severe on Bombay commercial morality:—

When a Bombay wallah stoops to folly,
And finds too late that shares betray,
What charm can cause him to feel jolly,
What art can wipe his debts away?

The only art his loss to cover,
To hide himself from every eye,
Is to impersonate another,
And by the "P. and O." to fly.

"If an action were brought against the clock for 'striking the hour,' would it be a good defence in law (in Bombay) to say it was only a time bargain?" The January number is rather local in its topics. Sir Cecil Beadon, as "Ye Knight of Orissa," has a horrible dream, in which he sees Famine, who addresses him—

"You allowed me to revel in desert and plain,
To torture the bodies, to finish the pain
Of thousands of beings with souls and with lives
The support and the solace of children and wives.
I came with the wind, I depart with a breath—
Attend! I am Famine, the angel of death."

MAZAGON LAND AND RECLAMATION COMPANY.—At an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders in this company it was proposed that the appointment of Messrs. Forbes and Co., who had been for some time filling the office of secretaries and treasurers of the company, subject to confirmation, should be ratified; and as an amendment it was proposed that Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart and Co. should be appointed to the office. On a ballot, Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart, and Co. were elected. Mr. Forbes resigned his seat at the board, and Mr. Tapidass Vurjdass was elected to the vacancy thus caused. Messrs. M. H. Scott and W. R. Cassels were added to the direction.

THE DISTRESS recently existing in Dharwar, in the Bombay presidency, has entirely disappeared. Government has conveyed its thanks to the gentlemen who came forward with pecuniary assistance to relieve the poor of the district.

THE CAREER OF A GANG OF SWINDLERS, who have carried on a most gigantic system of swindling in Bombay for months past, defying all the efforts of the police to detect them, was at last brought to an ignominious close on Tuesday night Jan. 22nd by the ingenious and energetic measures adopted by Major Henderson, the acting Commissioner of Police. Most of our Bombay readers will doubtless remember reading some months since certain local paragraphs which appeared, detailing the doings of some young profligate Rajah desperately addicted to gaming, but who, by some means, always contrived to completely cheat the dupes that entered the arena of the gaming table with him. The pretended Raja is a young man of about twenty-one years of age, named Morar Premjee, a carpenter by trade, and when apprehended was attired with some pretence of royal gorgeousness, although of the shabby-genteel description. The accomplices of this pseudo-Rajah were represented as his retinue, pandering to their profligate master's vice in order to enrich themselves, as well as outsiders who would join them in the game of spoliation. The duped ones were, of course, only those addicted to gambling, and as a Rajah was the antagonist the dupes were generally of the wealthy class of natives, and thousands and tens of thousands were lost. The palatial house in which Morar Premjee resided with liveried menials, his stud and handsome equipages, all tended to draw the unwary victims into the net spread for them by his accomplices; and so dexterously and warily was the game carried on that the police, although aware of the fact, were brought to bay for some time. Success and impunity emboldened them, and the swindlers became less cautious. About ten days since one of the accomplices, Oomersee Premjee, entered into a communication with a wealthy Parsee, Mr. Heerjeebhoy Hormusjee, with regard to the sale of his bungalow, and after some further meetings, apparently in reference to the same subject, Oomersee at last proposed to Mr. Heerjeebhoy to have a meeting with his master, the Rajah, and try his luck with him at a game of cards. This proposal, it seems, awakened the suspicions of Heerjeebhoy, and he communicated them to the police. Here was the opportunity which was long waited for, and Major Henderson so adroitly concerted his measures that he successfully captured the Rajah and three of his accomplices, Meghjee Damodhur, Oomersee Premjee, and Maljee Heersee, hot-handed in their guilt. The prisoners have been taken before Mr. Showell, the magistrate, and remanded.

THE BRIGADE COMMANDS AT NUSSEERABAD AND NEEMUCH are now vacant, the former by the promotion of Brigadier Pelly to the rank of major-general, and the latter by the death of Brigadier Christie. It is probable that Colonel Hough, who commanded the 2nd Belooches in Persia and China, will be nominated to Nusseerabad, and Colonel Sealy, of the 18th Brigade Royal Artillery, to Neemuch. Colonel Forster, of the Royal Horse Artillery, is senior to both these officers, but we understand he prefers waiting for the inspectorship of artillery in this Presidency, which will be vacant in a few months.—Times of India.

BOMBAY HARBOUR LIGHTS.—The following changes will take place in the lights at the entrance to Bombay harbour on and after the 1st day of June, 1867:—(1st.) A fixed white light will be exhibited on Kennery or Khundari island, in lat. 18°42' N., long. 72°48' east of Greenwich. (2nd.) The Outer Floating Light vessel will exhibit a fixed red light instead of a fixed white light.—Bombay Gazette.

OUTBREAK OF SMALL-POX IN THE 14TH N.I.—We regret to learn that the 14th N.I., which is on its march to Mehidpore, has been compelled to halt at Munmar, small-pox having broken out among the men.—Times of India.

THE KATTIWAR TRADING COMPANY is to be wound up under the supervision of the Court.

THE LAYING OF THE CHIEF CORNER-STONE OF THE LIGHTHOUSE now being erected on the Island of Kennery, at the entrance of Bombay Harbour, is an event upon which not only Bombay but all India, and every one connected with her commerce, may heartily congratulate themselves. The work of erection has been progressing quietly, yet steadily, for some time, and is already in an advanced state; but the public ceremony, which was observed with all due form on the 19th January, must be regarded as the first public declaration that this important undertaking had at length fairly escaped the trammels of Calcutta obstructiveness, that the stage of despatches, references, and red-tape was past, that the work had actually been begun, and that by the 1st of May next a first-class light on Kennery would be un fait accompli. The corner-stone was laid by his Excellency Sir Bartle Frere in presence of the Harbour and Pilotage Board, and numerous representatives of the mercantile and shipping interests of Bombay, the army and navy, &c. In the address presented by the Harbour and Pilotage Board to his Excellency reference is made to all the schemes for the improvement of the port which the board has now, or has had, in consideration, since its formation in 1863, consequent on the report of a committee appointed to report upon its requirements as to lighting, pilotage, &c. As regards the former of these matters, it was understood that in addition to the lighthouse now being erected on Kennery, another on the "Prongs" had been definitely sanctioned. Such, however, appears not to be the case, as the latter project has again been referred to "authorities" for mature consideration and discussion. Whether this will involve a delay of twelve months or as many years it is of course impossible to say. It has also been determined to remodel the pilotage service, and a scheme for this purpose has been experimentally sanctioned by the Government. At present the pilots are salaried servants; and with a view ultimately to introduce a free service, the pilots are to be provided with schooners, and the earnings of each vessel divided among the crew, less a slight reduction to reimburse the board for the expense of constructing and equipping them. The improvement of pier accommodation and buoying of the harbour, to which the attention of the board has been directed, are of the very greatest importance, especially the former, now that the greater part of the mail and passenger traffic of all India will come and go by Bombay.

AFFGHANISTAN.—The Delhi Gazette publishes Cabul letters to the 9th January. A Russian official was at Bokhara, endeavouring to negotiate with the King for the peaceful advance of the Russians towards Bulk. Afzul Khan's vakeel, Mirza Ahmed Khan, was also at Bokhara, and, it was reported, had proposed some terms of treaty with the Russians on the part of his master. Meer Uttaleek Beg, the Koondez Chief, was collecting troops with the intention of attacking Fyz Mohamed, the present ruler of Turkistan.

"GENERAL DUTY" OFFICERS.—The number of officers of the Bombay army now on "general duty" is very large, and it is thought that some special measures are required to obviate the inconvenience and useless expense consequent on this anomalous state of things.

A THOUSAND BALES OF COTTON DESTROYED BY FIRE.—A recent letter from Sholapoor says, "There has been a fire in the town here a few days ago, by which 1,000 bales of cotton have been consumed."

AN OFFICIAL REPORT concerning European vagrancy in Bombay has been published by Government, and a committee has been appointed to draft a Bill embodying its suggestions.

THE INDIAN BRANCHES OF THE AGRA BANK are expected to open simultaneously on the 1st March.

DEATH OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL CHRISTIE.—We regret to announce the death of Brigadier-General T. Tolfrey Christie, commanding the Neemuch station, at the age of 58. Brigadier Christie served in Scinde from 1842 to 1846, and was on the staff of the Persian Expeditionary Force in 1857, for which he obtained a medal and a clasp. He was present during the operations in Okamundel and the siege of Dwarka in 1859, and commanded a field detachment which engaged the Wagheers at the Gopee Tallow on the 3rd November, 1859. He was appointed to the command at Neemuch on the 4th of April, 1866.—Times of India.

FIELD HAMMOCK FOR SOLDIERS.—The field hammock for the use of soldiers in camp, invented by Captain M'Gwire, of the Royal Regiment, has been inspected by the Governor and the Commander-in-Chief of Bombay, who have both expressed their high approbation of the new system, which will economise at once the lives of the men and the cost of transport, and Sir Bartle Frere has determined to recommend the immediate adoption of the hammock for the army in India.—Bombay Gazette.

SHOOTING AT A RAILWAY TRAIN.—A through train from Bombay to Ahmedabad was fired at near the Unclesur station by a couple of natives. The ball passed through a first-class carriage, and nearly grazed the head of Colonel Cahusac, who was a passenger in the train.

THE BOMBAY BENCH OF JUSTICES has petitioned the Secretary of State for India praying that the contribution of the Municipality towards constructing three overbridges on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in the native town of Bombay may be defrayed by Government.

THE BOMBAY GENERAL CREDIT AND FINANCIAL CORPORATION, started in 1865, is to be wound up in accordance with a resolution of the shareholders. The paid-up capital will be returned in full, and probably a bonus of 20 per cent.

A PROSPECTUS has been issued for the construction of a telegraph line through the native State of Kattyawar. It will be about 442 miles long, and the estimated cost is £45,000.

A SHOCKING CASE OF SUICIDE by a respectable Parsee youth has taken place in Bombay, caused, it is said, by an aversion to a marriage which had been arranged on his behalf by his parents.

A FRUIT, FLOWER, AND VEGETABLE SHOW has just been held in Bombay under the auspices of the Municipal authorities. It was the first of its kind in the city, and proved a great success.

India-office, London, Nov. 16, 1866.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

Sir,—Your financial despatch (No. 184), dated Aug. 18 last, respecting the pension to be assigned to the Recorder of Rangoon and Moulmein, has been considered by me in council.

2. The resolution of your Government, under date July 31 last (No. 3,238), contains two propositions: first, that after a period of service of 12 years, a pension of £750 per annum shall be assigned to the Recorder of Rangoon and Moulmein; and, secondly, that should the same officer be compelled to retire on medical certificate, he shall, after a period of service of 9 years and 5 years, receive respectively a pension of £500 and £300 per annum.

3. I think that the minimum period of service required as qualification for pension should not be less than 7 years, but with this exception, having regard to the duties discharged by the Recorder of Rangoon and Moulmein, I agree with your Excellency that the pensions proposed by you will fairly meet the requirements of the case, and I hereby sanction the same.—I have, &c.,

Court Martial.

CAPT. W. E. R. ROBERTS, OF THE LATE 54TH REGT. N.I.

Head Qrs., Camp Gourree, Dec. 31.—At a general court martial, assembled at Agra on the 19th day of December, 1866, Lieut. and brevet capt. W. E. R. Roberts, of the late 54th regt. of N.I., and doing duty with the 41st regt. N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—With conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Agra, between the hours of one and two in the morning of the 22nd November, 1866, at an entertainment given by his Highness the Maharajah of Jeypore, G.C.S.I., been drunk in the supper tent, and when in that state in having caused such a disturbance that it became necessary to remove him from the tent.

Finding.—The court find, that the prisoner, Lieut. and brevet capt. W. E. R. Roberts, on the cadre of the late 54th regt. of N.I., and capt. in the Bengal staff corps, doing duty with the 41st Bengal N.I., is guilty of the charge preferred against him.

Sentence.—The court sentence the prisoner, Lieut. and brevet capt. W. E. R. Roberts, of the late 54th regt. of N.I., now a capt. in the Bengal Staff corps, and doing duty with the 41st regt. N.I., to be severely reprimanded in such a manner as H.E. the C. in C. may deem fit.

(Signed) C. PATTENSON, Colonel,
Dec. 19, 1866. President.

APPROVED AND CONFIRMED.

The prisoner is hereby severely reprimanded, according to the sentence of the court.

In this case the prisoner appealed for a court martial.

This very unwise proceeding on his part, seeing that according to his own plea of "guilty" the prisoner was aware that the case was clear against him, has led to a court martial for an offence which, under all the other circumstances, would probably have been disposed of by order in a manner similar to that adopted by the court.

The C. in C. trusts that the warning Capt. Roberts has now received will not be lost on him with reference to his future career.

Commander-in-Chief in India.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Tilhur, Dec. 28, 1866.

Capt. Roberts is released from arrest and will return to his duty.

No. 46.—The C. in C. is pleased to announce that the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition of 1867 will take place at Poona in Sept.

2. H.E. has had the honour to forward, for submission to H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, the report of the recent exhibition.

3. Copies of this report will be placed in the reading-room of regiments and batteries, and the C. in C. trusts that many men may be induced to employ their leisure hours, when out-door recreation is not possible, in preparing for the exhibition of 1867.

4. Soldiers are reminded that the recent Exhibition was not confined to articles manufactured in workshops, but that all industrial works of soldiers, of their wives, and of regimental schools, were exhibited.

5. Commanding officers are requested to be good enough to promote, when possible, the private enterprise of those under their command who desire to occupy themselves, but to whom the regimental workshops can give no employment, and the Commander-in-Chief trusts that when climate and circumstances admit, soldiers may be encouraged to undertake out-door works.

6. Sir Robert Napier learned with great satisfaction that the well-built barracks at Asseerghur were chiefly the work of the soldiers of the detachments of the 33rd and 72nd regiments, quartered for the time in that fort. At Mount Abou, also, during His Excellency's visit, he saw that the men of the 49th regiment were largely employed under the engineer officer, with considerable pecuniary benefit to themselves, and with advantage to the State.

7. The Govt. has been good enough to direct that every facility is to be offered to men desirous of working at the arsenals or other Govt. workshops.

8. Material will be supplied by the arsenal authorities, on payment indents, to the regtl. workshops in cases of emergency, also to the working men at the arsenals.

9. The C. in C. hopes that officers in charge of arsenals and other Govt. workshops will encourage the soldiers in their employ to contribute to the Exhibition, vide para. 6, page 7 of the report.

10. Regtl. committees for the Exhibition are to be at once formed in every corps, and the names of the officers composing them to be forwarded to the secy., Lieut. col. Cameron, 4th king's own royal regt., Poona; it will be the duty of the officers composing these committees to assist and encourage their men, and to report, through commanding officers, any difficulties, to the secy.: also to furnish that officer with lists of proposed contributions, and to send in monthly progress reports.

11. The central and working committees will be formed as at last exhibition, and the General orders in connection therewith, which are entered in the report, are to be considered applicable to the Exhibition of 1867.

12. Communications with regard to the employment of manufacturers, alluded to in para. 3, page 9 of the report, are requested from commanding officers.

13. For the purpose of bringing under the personal notice of H.E. the C. in C. the state of the industrial schools, it is directed that the best specimens of work by each child capable of working be sent for inspection, and that the contributions be accompanied by a nominal roll of the children contributing, with their respective ages, and the time they have attended the school.

Commanding officers are requested to be careful that no contributions shall be sent to the exhibition which are not bona fide the work of their regts.

COURT OF PROBATE AND DIVORCE.—FEB. 15.

LANGHAM V. LANGHAM.

This was the husband's petition for a dissolution of his marriage on the ground of his wife's adultery with some person unknown. Dr. Spinks, Q.C., and Mr. Forde were for the petitioner. There was no appearance for the respondent. The parties were married on the 15th of May, 1860, the petitioner being at the time steward on board a river steamer. Some time before his marriage he got an appointment as steward on board one of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamers, to go out to India. Having been keeping company with the respondent some considerable time previously, he decided on marrying her before he left, in order that she might have his half-pay when he was away. He accordingly married her, as stated, on the 15th of May, 1860, and left for India on the 20th of that month, having previously procured a residence for his wife in Woolwich. He was absent until July, 1864, and on his return found that his wife had been delivered of a child on the 22nd of October, 1861, of which the petitioner could not possibly have been the father. The respondent would give no information as to who the father of the child was, and the present suit was in consequence instituted.

These facts having been proved, the jury gave a verdict for the petitioner, and the Court pronounced a decree nisi.

BANKRUPTCY COURT, FEB. 15.

(Before Mr. Commissioner GOULBURN.)

IN RE JAMES SCOTT COLLINS.

The bankrupt was described as a merchant, formerly of Calcutta, and since of Southampton, out of business. His accounts show debts of £5,010, the sum of £3,210 being due to unsecured creditors. The assets are very considerable, a dividend of no less than 17s. 6d. in the pound having already been paid to the creditors who have proved.

This was a sitting for examination and discharge.

Mr. Bagley, on behalf of the assignee, who was the bankrupt's brother, said that the case was a somewhat singular one. The adjudication took place in May, 1865, but at the sitting for examination held in the following July the bankrupt failed to appear, and an adjournment sine die was ordered, protection being disallowed. The bankrupt, it appeared, had gone to Calcutta, and, having succeeded in realising his estate he paid 17s. 6d. in the pound to his creditors, and in December, 1866, he petitioned the Court for leave to surrender, which he was allowed to do. Notwithstanding the assets were so large, the assignee felt it was his duty to require the bankrupt to furnish further accounts, as from his knowledge of the bankrupt's affairs he was satisfied that a proper disclosure had not been made. There was also strong reason for believing that there were other creditors whose names did not appear in the accounts, and the claim of the assignee, whose transactions with the bankrupt had been both numerous and complicated, was not yet adjusted.

Mr. Sargood (specially retained) supported the bankrupt, and contended that this was an attempt on the part of the assignee to make use of the bankruptcy laws for private purposes, which had no reference to the interests of the creditors generally. Not only had the creditors received 17s. 6d. in the pound, but there was sufficient in hand to pay the remaining 2s. 6d.

Mr. Bagley proposed to examine the bankrupt, in order to show that his accounts were incorrect, and that further time was necessary for inquiry.

His Honour held, however, that having regard to the favourable circumstances under which the bankrupt came before the Court, it would be unjust to subject him to any delay, and he therefore granted an immediate order of discharge.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW LINE OF TELEGRAPH TO CHINA.—A new weekly line of telegraph and couriers to China has been arranged, which conveys messages every Tuesday from London to Tientsin, the seaport of Peking, whence they are sent to any of the other ports. The time occupied in transmission is twelve days, and the charge for twenty words by this route is £4. 7s. 6d. The London agency is at the office of the London and China Telegraph. If this line can be efficiently worked it will be a boon to the commercial public, who have long suffered from the irregularity attending the route via Galle, which is often blocked up with messages, thus involving frequent delays and non-delivery.

The waters of the Mediterranean reached on that day as far as Serapeum. DANGEROUS SPORTING.—We are informed that during the Christmas holiday five European mechanics, in the employ of Government and the Madras Railway Company, were concerned in the drowning of a native at a village not far from Madras. It would appear that they went out on a shooting excursion, when one of them shot a snipe which fell into a weedy tank close by, and finding that there was no way by which the bird could be taken out, they asked one of the villagers to get it, promising him payment for it. Rather than lose his life amongst the weeds, he refused the offer, when they forcibly pushed the unfortunate fellow into the tank, when he was drowned. The body was afterwards taken out by some of the villagers, and the names of the Europeans have been taken down by the police authorities of the place.—Madras Times, Jan. 5.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT IN ARTIFICIAL TEETH, AND GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.

MR. EPHRAIM MOSELY, SURGEON DENTIST,

9, GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE, Sole Inventor and exclusive Patentee of Artificial Teeth on a soft, elastic, chemically-prepared india-rubber gum. No wires or unsightly fastenings are required; they are more natural, durable, and comfortable than any yet introduced, and are about the specific gravity of cork, thus combining lightness and durability beyond any yet introduced. They are self-adhesive, render support to the adjoining teeth, are fitted on a perfectly painless principle, and supplied at charges within the reach of all.

Consultations free.

. Observe. No connection with any one of the same name.

EPHRAIM MOSELY on the TEETH fully explains his system and exclusive patent. Free on application.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

"To none is the public more indebted than to Mr. Day."—Illustrated News, page 826, June 9.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

"Mineralised India-Rubber.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection very improbable, and is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender and great absorption has taken place, this system must prove invaluable."—Globe, May 21, 1866.

"A vast amount of ingenuity has been displayed, not only in the formation of the artificial teeth themselves, but in the method or manner of fixing them."—Morning Advertiser, May 26, 1866.

"Mr. Day has not only succeeded in adding important items to the science of dentistry, but has reduced the operation of painless 'anesthetic' to a matter of form."—Sunday Times, May 27, 1866.

These and every description of Teeth, combining the latest inventions and improvements in dental mechanism, may be procured from Mr. DAY, Dentist (late Principal Assistant to Mr. ESKEL, of 8, Grosvenor-street, W.), 291, Regent-street (three doors from the Polytechnic).

OBJECT AND PLAN.

I. The Eastbourne College will be opened in August, 1867.

It will be similar in its main features to those already flourishing at Cheltenham, Clifton, Malvern, and other places. The remarkable healthiness of Eastbourne (as shown by the reports of the Registrar-general), its bracing air, its position on the South Coast, and the immediate proximity of the South Downs, unite to render it singularly adapted for an Educational Establishment.

II. The College will be divided into two departments, so as to meet the requirements both of Pupils intended for the Universities, and also of those preparing for the various Competitive Examinations, Civil and Military.

III. The College enclosure contains twelve acres of ground. The buildings will be carried on as speedily as possible, and until they are ready for occupation, the business of the College will be conducted in commodious houses, which have been secured and fitted expressly for the purpose.

The Plan embraces Boarding-houses, with partitioned Dormitories, and all modern improvements, a Chapel, Gymnasium, Five Courts, and every appliance for Cricket and other School Sports.

EXHIBITIONS AND SCHOLARSHIPS.

One Exhibition and two Scholarships will be open for Competition to Pupils entering the College in August next (1867).

SHARES AND NOMINATIONS.

I. There are 250 Shares of £40 each, distinguished as Class A, and 100 Shares of £20 each, distinguished as Class B, and the Company have power to issue additional Shares in both Classes.

II. Shares in Class A give to Members holding them the perpetual right of nominating one Pupil to the College in respect of each such Share, and such Shares are transferable.

III. Shares in Class B give to Members holding them the right of nominating one Pupil from time to time during the owner's life only, and are not transferable.

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES and COSTUMES of the PEOPLE of INDIA

BY J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial 4to, morocco back, cloth, with numerous Coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author, Dr. J. Forbes Watson, is conclusive evidence of his being the right man in the right place. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce. We ought to state that the Secretary of State for India not only deserves the highest praise for having had this work prepared and distributed, but likewise for having allowed a publisher to use the type and photographic plates so as to be able to produce a certain number of copies for sale. In no other way could copies of this unique and costly volume have been offered to the public at a reasonable price."—Morning Post, Jan. 3, 1867.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

POLITICAL EXTINCTION OF THE EAST INDIA COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1866.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1866, and closes with his lordship's death in 1869. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with the sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unincumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Ferozeshahur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review, May 15.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman, March 17.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. . . . We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history. The several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner, September 15.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail, via Bombay, brings us our usual files of papers from Calcutta to the 24th, Madras to the 28th, and Bombay to the 31st of January. The arrival is unusually late, owing to bad weather.

From Calcutta we learn that Sir Cecil Beadon has sent home the defence of his conduct in reply to Lord Cranborne's despatch, by the present mail. His friends, it seems, "pronounce it able and eloquent." It is well, perhaps, for Sir Cecil that Lord Cranborne will not have to deal with it.

The Currency Commission's Blue-book has made its appearance in two ponderous volumes. It is a very elaborate performance, which, it seems, must be read to be appreciated—but this is the difficulty.

The sentence upon Captain Taylor, for the loss of the Calcutta and the lives of so many of his passengers, has caused much dissatisfaction on account of its leniency. There seems to be no reason why he should not have received the full penalty, which would have been six months' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 1,000. As it is he escapes with three months' rigorous imprisonment, and keeps the money in his pocket.

The Foundling Asylum of Calcutta, originated by the famine, is now fairly in operation. It is suggested that it should be made the nucleus of a reformatory.

After four years' discussion, remarks the Friend of India, the foundations of the Imperial Museum and the Calcutta University have been laid. As they are under the Public Works Department of Bengal, the next generation of Anglo-Indians will probably be the first to enjoy what promise to be very fine buildings. The University will make College-square worthy of its name, and be an ornament to the northern or native section of Calcutta. The Museum will worthily occupy the finest site in Chowringhee, in front of the Small Cause Court. It is estimated to cost £80,000. It will be as large as the Natural History Department of the British Museum. With an imposing frontage of an Italian style, the building will stretch back in long galleries around a quadrangle which may afterwards be covered in and form a room as fine as the reading-room of the British Museum. The rooms will be unusually lofty, for the accommodation of the requisite galleries. One side will be devoted to the Geological Survey and Museum, and the other to the collections of the Bengal Asiatic Society, which form the nucleus of the new Museum. We trust the proposed muniment room has not been left out. Dr. Oldham is a sufficient guarantee for the scientific adaptations of the building. Mr. Granville and the builders must not throw away this opportunity for giving the finest site in Calcutta an appropriate public building.

We hear very little in these days about Bhootan. The latest news from that barbarous region is said to be satisfactory. The Deb Rajah having apparently regained the peaceful exercise of his authority, undisturbed by rival chiefs, and being on his best behaviour toward the British Government, in the hope, it is presumed, of obtaining from them a larger annual subsidy than is granted to him now. Of Toungsoo Penlow we hear nothing. Dewangiri had been abandoned by the small force left in it, after the destruction of the defences and everything else that could be burnt or cast down. The Bhootan Government has made over all the captive Bengalis within its jurisdiction to the British authorities, with the exception of about 200 only, who, having contracted alliances with Bhoota families, have no desire to return to the plains.

The Viceroy, like Lord Elgin, has attended a ball given in his honour by Prince Gholam Mahomed. Sir Cecil Beadon and some four hundred English guests were present.

The Bokhara Ambassador is still in Calcutta. The letters which he has brought for the Queen and for the Viceroy, we are told by the Friend of India, make specific requests for assistance against Russia. To the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab he represented the desire of his master for a commercial mission. In journeying down, however, from the Punjab the Elchee met the Kokand envoy returning to his own country from a fruitless mission of the same kind undertaken to Constantinople. This envoy, who was present at Sir John Lawrence's Lahore Durbar in 1864, explained to him that the hope of getting help from British India was altogether vain; and acting on this hint, the Bokhariot, who apparently is vested with sufficient discretionary power to diverge from his master's written programme, now declares that whatever may be said in the letters he brings, his real requests do not extend beyond the establishment of general amity and goodwill between the two States.

It is announced that the Hon. Ashley Eden, P. T. Ralli, Esq., Consul for the King of Italy, Henry Berners, Esq., Attorney at Law, R. J. Jenkins, Esq., c.s., Peter Anderson, Esq., and Captain Jehenne, of the French Imperial navy, have been appointed—what do our readers think?—nothing less than “members of the Indian Committee of Paris to assist Mr. Dowleams in the selection of return presents.” They will proceed to Paris in the course of the present month. If the object be to give these gentlemen a pleasant trip to see the Exhibition, we have not a word to say against the arrangement, except that other persons have perhaps equal claims to the indulgence. Most certainly Mr. Dowleams does not want them, that gentleman being fully competent to choose the return presents himself, as we presume he did at the Exhibition of 1862. Dr. Forbes Watson, moreover, may be considered to have some claims to competency for such a work. Has India no Bernal Osborne to make enquiry as to the cost of this sub-committee?

The Madras papers furnish some more or less interesting items of news, which will be found elsewhere.

Alluding to the rumour that the Supreme Government have after all determined on carrying out the project of surveying the country between Rangoon and the Western frontier of China, through which the proposed line of railway would run, and that Major Oliphant, the officiating chief engineer, has been chosen to conduct the operations,—the Athenæum says: This news is so much opposed to previous statements concerning the same matter that we place no reliance on the story.

It is satisfactory to learn that an English officer is to be stationed at Leh, the chief town of Ladakh, to protect the interests of subjects of the British Government against the exactions of the Maharajah of Cashmere and his agents.

Monetary prospects were more cheerful in all three presidencies.

The next arrival from India will be the Bombay mail, which is due in London on the 8th inst.

RESIGNATION OF LORD CRANBORNE.

It was announced this morning that the Secretary of State for India had seceded from the Ministry, with two of his colleagues—the Earl of Carnarvon and General Peel. The Reform difficulty, which is the occasion of the present crisis, is peculiarly unfortunate for India. As the Standard says:—“Lord Cranborne had established a great reputation as a debater before he was called upon to take office. Already, while still a private member, he was one of the first men in the House; and since he was raised at a single step to high Cabinet office, and the charge of one of the greatest departments of the State, he has convinced all who are concerned in public affairs that his capacity as an administrator is fully equal to his powers as an orator, and that he is not only one of the brightest ornaments of the House of Commons, but one of the very ablest practical statesmen of the day. His administration of the India-office has been unsurpassed for judgment, energy, and business capacity; and, whoever may succeed him, his loss will be felt in that department more severely than any change that has taken place therein for the last twenty years.” As far as special experience is concerned, the excellent permanent administration of the department can supply most requirements; but it is not every day that we can find a statesman capable of making the same use as Lord Cranborne of the assistance at his disposal. It is generally understood that the new Secretary for India will be Sir Stafford Northcote. The Observer mentions a more than improbable report that Sir Stafford is to proceed to India to succeed Sir John Lawrence.

It appears, with regard to the exchange upon India, that the rates for Bank bills have been very firm through the week, and some considerable transactions have taken place. Council bills, it is stated, have been in request and have been freely dealt in at 1s. 11½d., but the market is not now well supplied, and there will be very few available until after the next allotment, on the 6th inst., when 30 lacs of rupees are to be tendered for. Rupee paper has been again in request, and transactions have been completed at an advance.

“Eastbourne College”—of which we publish a prospectus elsewhere—is an institution which can scarcely fail to obtain, as it certainly appears to deserve, support. The noblemen and gentlemen associated with the management place upon it the stamp of high character, and the plan is satisfactory in every way, while the name of the Head Master is a guarantee for the executive being in good hands. It is in reference, however, to the opportunity which the College will afford to parents sending their children home from India that we desire especially to commend it. It need scarcely be remarked that in the absence of their natural protectors children run risks of many kinds in ordinary private schools, and of establishments where they can be placed with a certainty of being well cared for and adequately trained there is still a great want. In addition to these advantages we see that at Eastbourne College especial attention will be given to those preparing to pass competitive examinations, both civil and military, a process which undergone alone is apt to be of a costly character. Altogether the plan appears to be an excellent one, and the place selected could scarcely be better as regards health.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, March 4, 1867.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

FOUR Indian debates in the course of eight days! Who says that India is neglected in Parliament? Most of the subjects discussed, moreover, excited considerable interest, and were exceptions to the rule which associates empty benches with the affairs of our Empire in the East.

The case of the Mysore reversion, which came first, was the most difficult and delicate of the three. The claim has hung like a cloud over the Government for some years past, and threatened at any time to burst into a storm. Thanks to the statesmanlike manner in which the question has been met by Lord Cranborne, the political sky is once more clear—for we take it that the most factious of the Rajah's friends cannot refuse to accept the present settlement in good part. The Indian Secretary, indeed, has so simplified the question at issue that the most awkward ground of contention is removed. The main subject of agitation of late has been the refusal to recognise the adopted son of the Maharajah, intended to be his heir. In this refusal the Government were quite justified, for the adoption despatch of Lord Canning expressly limited its application to existing rulers, and in order that there should be no mistake, gave a list of those included in that category, in which list the name of the Maharajah of Mysore did not appear. But the cry raised was, of course, that the Government were breaking faith; they had agreed to recognise adoption—they refused to fulfil their pledge in the present case. The charge was repeated everywhere; the explanation was ignored; and the suspicion was aroused that the days of Dalhousie were coming again. Lord Cranborne has for the first time placed the question in its proper light. The Government do not wish to deny the adopted son's position as his father's representative. They prefer to consider him as the lineal representative. What they deny is the Maharajah's right to the territory which he claims to transmit.

Lord Cranborne considers the question

upon legal and political grounds. As regards the first he considers that the Maharajah has no case at all. He was no party to the partition treaty. His name is not even mentioned in the preamble. And the subsidiary treaty contains no mention of the sovereignty, or the transmission of the territory to his heirs, whereas in the partition treaty there is distinct provision that its maintenance shall be binding upon the successors of the contracting parties. Even in the additional articles, for modifying and defining one of the articles in the subsidiary treaty, there is no mention of heirs, which is the more remarkable as the latter contains the somewhat inconsistent provision that the settlement "shall be binding on the contracting parties so long as the sun and moon shall endure." The omission of "heirs and successors" after "contracting parties" is certainly a flaw, and has the appearance of being designed. It is to be regretted that Lord Cranborne did not touch upon this point, which is the only one open to any kind of question.

The legal decision, however, is the less important from the fact that it will not necessarily be carried into effect. The Government, said the Indian Secretary, has no desire to annex the country upon the death of the present Maharajah, who after twenty years of misgovernment forfeited the position to which he had been raised by the British power. But at the same time they are not disposed to hand over the country unreservedly to native rule. Lord Cranborne, therefore, leaves the case thus. Without making any distinct pledge, he suggests the strong probability that the administration will be entrusted to the adopted son in the event of his character and capacity justifying the bestowal. In the meantime, pending his majority, he is to have every advantage that education can afford.

The employment of the Native Indian Army for colonial service, which was urged upon the Government by Major Anson, is a policy that, within certain limits, we have always considered feasible and likely to prove of beneficial effect. The course recommends itself upon several grounds. It would relieve India from a part of the present Native Army, which is once more in excess, and enable us, in some slight degree at any rate, to diminish the European force in that country. It would provide a substitute for a part of the force in the colonies, and save the drain upon home caused by keeping men at stations unfitted, upon sanitary grounds, for European troops. It would render the service popular by reducing the present proportion of foreign to home service from two-thirds to one-half. It would place a permanent force at our disposal which would make us independent in case of an European war. It would cause a considerable saving in expenditure. It is justified as a policy by precedents both in ancient and modern times.

But the plan is not without objections, and these were duly urged by Government, which did not, however, oppose the motion for a select committee on the subject. There are very few of our colonies where the climate is adapted to Indian troops, even if the colonists, which in many cases contribute to the cost of the garrisons, would consent to the substitution. It is unfortunate, too, that the most docile of the Indian people would be the least useful for the purpose, while the classes whom we should select for their effectiveness would be the most hard of any to manage. These, and some other difficulties, are not without importance; but the principle we are sure is sound, and the question only one of extent; so the committee will doubtless do good.

The question of allowing the counsel of the Indian Secretary to sit in the House of Commons is a very delicate one, which we are glad to see has not been decided in a hurry. It will be tried in Committee upon the Bill.

Coolie emigration is not a lively subject, and so the House seemed to think. But it must be said for such hon. members as remained to hear him that they listened to all Mr. Baillie Cochran had to say against the practice with marked attention, and that the Government took some pains to point out to him where he was wrong. The system is good for the coolie, Mr. Adderley maintained, and for the coolie's employer, and—except by blundering philanthropists—is objected to only by the local Government of India, which wants to keep the labourers at home to occupy the market upon twopence-a-day, instead of seeing them go to places where they can make a shilling, save money, and come home well-to-do men when they choose to come home at all. As for the accidents which have taken place of late years in transhipment, they must be dealt with like casualties which occur at sea; but in any case the want of better management and possibly better ships is no argument for abolishing a system which tends so greatly to the advantage of capital and labour. Such were Mr. Adderley's opinions, and Mr. Cardwell agreed with him. Both right hon. gentlemen are probably right in principle. What is wanted are regulations of some kind which will prevent the recurrence of disasters such as overtook the ill-fated Eagle Speed.

MR. ANDREW AND INDIAN RAILWAYS.

THE Hon. Mr. Ellis, senior member of the Bombay Council, while on his visit to Lahore the other day, was presented with an address at the Lawrence-hall from the Native Sirdars and gentry of the locality, expressing their gratitude to the Bombay Government for the support which it has given to the projected railway between Mooltan and Kotree, by which Mr. Andrew designs to complete the communication between Delhi and Kurrachee, and add another to the long list of benefits which he has bestowed upon the people of India by his active interest in the promotion of railway enterprise.

After remarking upon the facility of communication between Calcutta and Delhi, which occupies only two days, Mr. Aratoon, who was the mouthpiece of the deputation, went on to say that there "appears no doubt that the extension of rail from Delhi to Lahore will be the work of say about three years more, which may answer nearly all the purposes of travellers and troops; but for commercial purposes, as far as the Punjab is concerned, it is out of the question in a financial point of view, inasmuch as Calcutta is some 1,400 miles, the cost of transit from this to it will be about Rs. 7 per maund for cotton and other produce; whereas the cost of the same from Mirzapore, Allahabad, Cawnpore, &c., will, at the most, amount only to Rs. 4 per maund, and, therefore, the Punjab merchants will have to pay an extra of Rs. 3 per maund, and, as buyers will run to the cheapest market, our staples will remain unsold, while those of Bengal and the North-Western Provinces take precedence; naturally the Punjab will have to add the extra coal, and, therefore, our staple will, in a measure, be locked up. The Kurrachee port being only about 800 miles, is one-third the distance less than that to Calcutta; it will never cost us for the transit more than Rs. 4 per maund, a saving of Rs. 3 per maund, and say, on 4 lacs of maunds of cotton per annum, the difference of saving in this item alone will be 12 lacs of rupees, equal to £120,000 of English money; this is only for one item. Sugar, hemp, flax, saltpetre, grain, and oil-seeds of different kinds, for which our province is highly notable, are separate items of staples."

It is true, as the speaker, of course, admitted, that there are steamers plying between Mooltan and Kotree; "but the wide difference is, that whereas there will be a direct railway from Lahore to Calcutta when the line now going on is completed, still it generally takes thirty days to complete the transit from Lahore to Kurrachee, under the present arrangement; not to say of the delay often at the Mooltan terminus and wharf where our goods lie sometimes for a fortnight or so, before steamers come up from Kotree; besides the circumstances that steamers with valuable cargoes get aground on sand banks, and often stick fast for a month or so, by which our goods are damaged or the steamer entirely wrecked—these, therefore, very plainly show that unless we have a direct railway communication with Kurrachee uninterrupted, the produce of our provinces will be shut up and rot, which cannot by any means be the intention of the Supreme Government." It may not be out of place here to notice that Mr. Andrew has been assisting the cause of Indian railways in this country by defending the guarantee system from some aspersions cast upon it in the City article of the Times. "I have been," he says—

"A party to no less than four contracts with the Secretary of State for India in Council conferring the advantages of the guarantee of the Government of India on the several undertakings with which I am connected, and in no instance has there been for a moment the slightest cavil as to the amount of interest due from Government, or a day's delay in the payment of the amount. Even during the height of the mutiny, the good faith and punctuality for which the Government of India has ever been distinguished were as manifest as in ordinary times. There is no similarity whatever between the Indian railway guarantees and the guarantees by foreign and colonial Governments, except that all of them have one character in common, namely, that they are in the nature of assistance or contribution by the State to private enterprise. In all essential particulars these guarantees are dissimilar. The guarantee of the East India Government is not on any particular sum, but on any sum which the railway may cost; nor is there any condition attached limiting the time for the completion of the line. The case is the very reverse with all foreign and colonial guarantees, in which a limit to the cost is placed, and a limit to the period of completion. These are very important points of difference. Foreign and colonial Governments exercise only a very general control over the construction of the railway, and take no responsibility in the expenditure or in the execution of the engineering works; so that disputes often arise after a long period upon points affecting very seriously the interests of the company. But the control which the East India Government exercises in these matters is very stringent, and not a step can be taken or a shilling expended without their special sanction. . . . The companies cannot borrow on mortgage, but the debentures of the railways have these words on the face of each bond:—'Payment of principal and interest is guaranteed by the Secretary of State for India in Council,' and this is authenticated by the signature of the Under-Secretary of State. The guarantee of the Indian Government is only second to that of the Imperial Government. Its security rests on the revenues of India, but to preserve them the whole force of the empire would be used. When we lose India it will be high time for the English fundholder to put his house in order."

BENGAL.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FAMINE IN BENGAL.—Sir Cecil Beadon has sent in an elaborate defence of his conduct to the Government of India in reply to the despatch from Lord Cranborne, and yesterday's mail took it to England. His friends pronounce it able and eloquent, but alas! for the willingness to use such ability in saving the half million who died before May, alas! for the eloquence which prevailed to hold back those who would have saved many of them. His Honour replies, we are informed, to the statements of this and the Calcutta journals, and throws the small amount of culpability which he is willing to acknowledge on the local officials. Until both Lord Cranborne's despatch and Sir Cecil Beadon's reply are published here it is useless to comment on the proceedings of the Bengal Council on Saturday, or to expect that the Indian public will liberally respond to the appeal for further assistance. Meanwhile a mail has been lost. Such is the misery still existing in Orissa, over an area of 3,700 square miles, that one-half of the population of 850,000 have still to be cared for by public charity at a cost of half a million sterling. No less than 45,000 tons of rice are to be imported before the end of February and 22,500 tons in March, while Government must be prepared to supply as much again before the next monsoon in June, lest it should be wanted. All the £62,500 of the fund, all the £60,000 raised by the Indian public in the last half year, has been spent, and there are half a million of people to be fed for nine months, and two thousand orphans to be cared for during the next ten or fifteen years. The Indian public will doubtless continue its assistance, but it must first be treated by the Indian Government with frank confidence.—Friend of India.

THE CURRENCY COMMISSION'S BLUE-BOOK has appeared at last, in two somewhat ponderous folios. The motto of the volumes might well be Disraeli's saying, that the currency is like love, it makes a man mad. The most valuable part of the volumes consists of the statistics of bullion and currency in the appendix, and the evidence of practical men like Mr. W. Anderson, of the Oriental Bank. There seems to have been a conflict between the president, Sir W. Mansfield, and Mr. Hugh Sandeman, which must have been amusing. Such figures as these tell powerfully in favour of a gold currency. While the value of the production of silver all over the world has varied annually from £14,449,351 in 1849 to £18,448,354 in 1863, that of gold has been from £21,255,406 to £32,717,379 in the same years, rising so high as £39,248,077 in 1852. From 1663 to 1809 the total coinage of England was £66,278,193, of which only £63,419 was silver. The relative proportion of gold to silver for the 25 years ending 1843 is 1 to 15-604. The extreme fluctuation in the price of gold from 1820 to 1843 was 4½d. in the ounce, or 9s. 7½d. in one hundred pounds, and the extreme variation in the price of silver during that period was 1½ in the ounce, or Rs. 2-14-10 per cent. The relative proportion of gold to silver for the subsequent twenty-two years is 1 to 15-358; and the extreme fluctuation in the price of silver is 2 13-16ths in the ounce, or Rs. 4-6-3 per cent. Looking at India alone, the excess of the imports of gold and silver over the exports from 1801 to 1864 (inclusive) was £256,013,788, and the coinage was £224,510,966, of which £10,327,932 was gold and £6,640,166 mixed. Of the whole sum Bengal coined £134,442,417, Bombay £64,931,306, and Madras £25,137,242. There is much wheat in this Blue-book, but considerably more chaff, and some time and patience are required for the sifting which it was the duty of the Commission to have done.

A BRITISH COMMISSIONER AT LADAKH.—An English officer, not a mere native subordinate, is to be stationed at Leh, the chief town of Ladakh, to protect the interests of our Lahoul and other traders against the exactions of the Maharajah of Cashmere and his agents. One of the ablest Assistant-Commissioners in the Punjab will be selected for this important duty. We are delighted that the Government of India has taken this important step towards opening up our commercial relations with Central Asia. Our agent should be instructed to hold communication with the Khan of Khoten and even the ruler of Yarkund. This is a first step, and we trust it will not be the only one, in a new commercial policy. What of the fairs which years ago Sir Robert Montgomery promised to establish at Peshawur and Mooltan? Why should not our agent open a fair at Leh? It is our own town, or at least is in her Majesty's territories, and might form a centre for the trade of Eastern Turkistan and Thibet, as Peshawur would do for the Western countries of Central Asia. We publish another translation of a recent article from the semi-official Golos of St. Petersburg. It is of a somewhat insidious character, hinting, under the cover of the Prince of Wales's visit to St. Petersburg and of a proposal that England and Russia should divide Asia by treaty, that our power in India is very weak, far weaker than that of Russia in Turkistan. The noteworthy part of the article, however, is the reference to the "sick man" of Turkey, on whose existence hinges all the policy of Russia alike in East and West.—Friend of India.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Delhi Gazette says:—If the telegram speaks the truth Sir W. Mansfield has for a second time been endeavouring to escape the consequences of his actions by laying the blame on his subordinates. We say for the second time. Our readers will ask what then is the first. The first instance is in the case of Captain Harward, in which his Excellency lays the blame on his subordinates and has recorded officially that Captain Harward not being released from military arrest was owing to disregard by the military authorities at Agra of their instructions. If we know anything about military organisation we are pretty sure that no divisional or brigade authorities would act in such a matter without being careful to see that they acted in accordance with orders. However, they may fight that battle out between themselves. We merely allude to it as showing Sir W. Mansfield's tendency to lay the blame, when there is any blame to lay, on his subordinates. As regards Captain Harward's case the instructions from the head of the army must have been sent in writing, and therefore there will be no difficulty in clearing up the point when it comes before the Horse Guards, as it will in due course. In Jervis's case the Judge Advocate is the scapegoat. If, as another officer of that department once plaintively remarked in the High Court at Calcutta, he lives on the breath of the Commander-in-Chief, no doubt he will willingly stoop to receive the burden that is thus to be put on his back.

MAJOR-GENERAL LAWRENCE.—We notice the retirement from the service of Major-General Sir George St. Patrick Lawrence, C.B., and K.C.S.I. Major-General Lawrence belonged to the Staff Corps, and the late 2nd European Bengal Cavalry. He entered the army in 1821, and served with the army of the Indus during the years 1839 and 1841, being present at the capture of Ghuzni, the pursuit of Dost Mahomed Khan, and the forcing of the Khoord Cabul pass by the force under Sir Robert Sale. On the 23rd of December, 1841, he was taken prisoner, and was released six days afterwards. During the retreat from Cabul he surrendered as hostage to Akhbar Khan, being released on the 21st September, 1842. After the night attack made by the Sikh army on the Peshawur agency in October, 1848, he fell into the hands of Sirdar Chuttur Sing, and retreated to Kohat, when he was again made prisoner by Sirdar Sultan Mahomed Khan, not being liberated till the 7th of March, 1849, when the Sirdar submitted to the force under Major-General Smyth. At a subsequent period of his career he was appointed Governor-General's agent for the States of Rajpootana, which very important post he held during the eventful period of 1857-58. When the mutiny broke out at Nusseerabad Colonel Lawrence was at Abcoo, and he was much blamed in military circles for not being earlier on the spot. It would appear that he placed too much confidence in Brigadier Macan, then commanding the Nusseerabad field force, an officer who did not inspire any confidence in those who were serving under him.—Delhi Gazette.

THE IGNORANCE OF COLLECTORS AND DISTRICT OFFICERS OF THE STATE OF THEIR DISTRICTS.—One of the great evils of this country appears to be the vast extent of territory placed under the management of a single officer. There is no doubt the present jurisdiction of collector-magistrates are far too extensive. Whenever a crisis occurs the evil of these large jurisdictions is at once felt; it is then discovered that Government officers are utterly ignorant of the districts over which they have been placed. They are blamed, but too often unjustly, for the vastness of the jurisdiction puts it out of the power of any man to acquaint himself with its actual wants and present condition. This truth has been forcibly illustrated in the crisis of the famine. Collectors and magistrates are found to be utterly ignorant of the state of their districts. In some instances this ignorance has led to fatal results, when officers have been duped by interested "muhajuns," who have deceived the authorities for their own benefit at the cost of thousand of lives. A great cause of this evil is, that most arbitrary and unsatisfactory separation of the country into divisions which are designated districts; they are of all sizes, and seldom have the excuse of geographical boundaries. It is high time that districts should be subdivided into smaller jurisdictions, to render it possible for Government officers to acquaint themselves thoroughly with the people placed in their charge. It is the duty of the Viceroy to turn his attention to remedy this great radical defect in our present administration of the country.—Englishman.

THE TRIAL OF CAPTAIN TAYLOR, commander of the ill-fated ship Calcutta, which was wrecked in the Hooghly on New Year's day, has been brought to a close. The jury found the prisoner guilty on the third count, of endangering human life by the rash and negligent management of his vessel, with a strong recommendation to mercy. The Judge sentenced him to three months' rigorous imprisonment. The Friend of India remarks: The full penalty would have been six months' rigorous imprisonment, with a fine of Rs. 1,000. Why it was not exacted we fail to see. The only evidence directly contrary to that for the prosecution was Mr. Gower's, and he is a railway official and the immediate superior of the prisoner. The jury seem to have been forced into the verdict and recommendation only by the fear of losing their dinner. But we find it more difficult to account for the very favourable charge of Mr. Justice Phear.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF CIVIL LAW IN BENGAL.—There is no doubt that it is a wise rule which has been laid down by the Chief Justice in the High Court that a barrister and civilian judge shall sit together to hear appeals in criminal cases. This is necessary, because barrister judges are not expected to be good judges of the evidence generally laid before them in criminal cases, being ignorant of the habits of the people. The experience the public has had in several cases which have been recently decided by the High Court, in which there has been a failure of justice, renders it necessary that this salutary rule should be still further extended. We mean that civilian judges who have had their experience limited in Bengal, and especially in Lower Bengal, should never be permitted to hear appeals from cases which have occurred in Behar, without the help of a judge who has acquired his judicial experience either in the north-west, or in districts to the north of the Sonthal Pergunnahs, which may be regarded as the boundary between Bengal and Behar. We beg to bring this subject to the notice of the Government, and especially of the Chief Justice, being assured that it is a subject that has attracted much notice, and a matter which may be easily arranged, and which will ensure greater confidence in the administration of justice.—Englishman.

WANT OF RAIN IN THE PUNJAB.—We regret very much to hear that in proportion to the beauty of the weather, and the delightful temperature it induces, so is the increasing prospect of a very severe dearth, if not famine, in the Punjab. Every fourth or fifth day gatherings of clouds induce a hope that the long drought will at last close (and a few showers do fall 'at far distant points'), but nothing approaching the usual cold weather rain has fallen, and great is the consternation of all classes at the prospect before them. The Goordaspore and Umritsur districts alone are said to be safe, owing to the irrigation operations of the Baree Doab Canal; but where no wells exist, where, as in the case of gram and other grains, cultivation depends on rain, the prospects of the agriculturist are most disheartening. For once red-tape has not triumphed, and the canal that was to have been closed for repairs on the 1st of January has been kept open. Had such not been the case even Goordaspore and Umritsur must have suffered materially, and the out-turn in those districts have been materially affected. It is to be hoped that rain may fall soon, as, if not, the sugar-planting of the unirrigated districts (now an increasing staple) will also be thrown back.—Delhi Gazette.

THE FOUNDLING ASYLUM OF CALCUTTA, originated by the famine, has now been placed on a satisfactory footing. The committee, representing Protestants, Roman Catholics, and Hindoos, has placed its management under Miss A. P. Neale, as superintendent, on a salary of Rs. 200 a month. The establishment, including a matron and conveyance hire for the nuns, has hitherto been Rs. 339-8 a month. Mr. N. A. Chick is honorary secretary. There are 206 foundlings, of whom 131 are girls, and 30 are boys under twelve, besides eight infants. The remaining 50 adults will gradually be sent to their homes. This asylum should be made permanent as the nucleus of a reformatory.

THE DUC D'ALENGON.—The Calcutta papers copy a silly paragraph from an up-country journal complaining of "shameful treatment towards Duc d'Alençon" because his Royal Highness has not received more attention from the local authorities. The truth is the Duke arrived in Calcutta when the Viceroy was at Barrackpore and preferred the independence of residing at a hotel. The moment the Viceroy knew of his arrival he was invited to remove to Government House. Any seeming want of parade in his journey up-country is due entirely to the Duke's own wish.

THE BHOOTAN GOVERNMENT has made over all the captive Bengalis within its jurisdiction to the British authorities, with the exception of about 200 only, who, having contracted alliances with Bhoota families, have no desire to return to the plains.—Englishman.

THE 13TH N.I. will march from Peshawur en route for Jullundur on the 16th Feb., and will be at the undermentioned stations on the dates specified:—Rawul Pindee Feb. 24 Jhelum 3rd March, Lahore 13th, Jullundur 24th.

A HILL SCANDAL.—We have received from Rawul Pindee an account of a defamation case which has created immense excitement in the little Pedlington of Pindee society. The case is entitled Masters v. Brodhurst and Bailey, 20th Hussars. The particulars, however, are totally unfit for publication. Military officers were the assessors; and the case resulted in a verdict for defendants.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LORD AND LADY NAPIER are about to pay a short visit to the Governor-general at Calcutta. It is expected they will leave Madras about the 15th Feb. in H.M.'s Feroze which will be sent down from Calcutta to fetch them. His lordship's visit has not, we believe, any political significance, but is made with the object of facilitating the despatch of public business between the supreme and local Governments. A personal acquaintance between the heads of the Government is calculated to effect this purpose.—Madras Times.

COLONEL DENISON continues to show great activity in his new office. Besides paying frequent visits to the scenes of his labours, the Colonel has recorded, in the shape of minutes which are placed at the disposal of the press, what he has seen and what he thinks should be done for the amelioration of the dirty city under his charge. The great difficulty that he encounters everywhere is want of funds. The municipal work in Madras is so enormous that the funds at the disposal of the board (about £40,000 per annum) are totally inadequate to accomplish it. The Colonel has suggested the raising of a loan in order that the more pressing works may be at once taken in hand. It seems doubtful, however, whether the credit of the municipality stands sufficiently high to effect a loan without a guarantee from Government. One of the first necessities of Madras is some system of drainage. Captain Tulloch, of the Royal Engineers, has submitted to Government an elaborate scheme for draining the sewage of the city into the sea. The great objection to the scheme, however, is that it is so expensive that there is no chance of raising the necessary money from the rate and tax payers. Colonel Denison, moreover, is entirely opposed to the idea of letting the sewage run waste into the sea; he would prefer storing it and casting it over the arid plains, and we quite agree with him in this opinion. The Colonel has revived the tramway question, and thinks a line from Madras to the Mount would not only be a great convenience to both the Government and the public, but that it would save the Municipal funds from a large portion of the burden which keeping the Mount Road in repair now entails. We may go further than the Colonel, and express an opinion that, with the large traffic over this road and the facilities that exist for laying the rails, a tramway should with proper management prove a good investment for capital. It appears that Messrs. Noble and Co. are about to give the tramways another trial in London, and Colonel Denison proposes that if these gentlemen succeed in the great metropolis they should be invited to see what they can do for Madras. But whether successful or not in London, there is not the slightest reason why tramways should not be tried in Madras. There are many drawbacks to their success in London which do not exist in Madras—the chief being the narrowness of the streets and the number of vehicles traversing them, two circumstances that a tramway would be comparatively free from in Madras. —Madras Times.

MISS CARPENTER has been the chief lion of the week. During her second short stay here she has had particular attention paid to her by the head of the Government, and has held more than one conference at Government-house with the leading authorities, principal educational officers, and native reformers on her favourite subject. She has been also trying to impress on her native friends, but very unsuccessfully it is believed, the necessity of forming a Social Science Association. Believing that she was not quite understood in all quarters, she has given a second public exposition of her views to a large number of native gentlemen in Patcheappah's Hall, explaining that she was aware that much had been done in this country for female education, and that she did not come to lay down schemes of her own on the subject, but to help on the work. The general belief, including that of many of the reformers themselves, is that little or nothing will come of Miss Carpenter's agitation after all. Being a strong-minded lady, she carries everything before her in her conferences, but the moment her "enlightened native friends" are left to themselves to act, doubts oppress them, difficulties crop up in crowds, disputes arise, and the ladies, when the matter is referred to them for their opinion, grow uncommonly rebellious, and will have no innovation, considering that if such as are talked of be made, the end of the world will come sooner even than Dr. Cumming has predicted, or at any rate that there must be an end to all domestic comfort. The missionaries, also, that is those who have done and are still doing most for the education of Hindu females, do not look upon Miss Carpenter's scheme with any great favour. It is felt to be a pity that efforts so unintermitted and disinterestedly made, should not be attended with a more satisfactory result. A beginning has, however, been made; a few of the leading natives are about to petition Government to establish a Normal school for the training of Hindu female teachers. It will, if established, be of a much more humble character than that sketched out by Miss Carpenter, its whole expenditure probably being much under Rs. 200 per annum. The philanthropic lady has just left this for Bombay. —Ibid.

RITUALISM IN MADRAS.—While there is so much noise about ritualism in England, it will hardly be a matter of wonder that there should be some talk about it here. It is of course but a very little wave compared to the greater agitation going on in Britain. Some of the congregation of our cathedral recently presented the trustees with a pair of silver candlesticks, to be placed as ornaments on the communion table. Others of the congregation object to the candlesticks being used, and to their great dissatisfaction see them lighted at night. Attention has thus been directed to the Christmas decorations that have been left standing, and to certain acts of the choir. In these matters some see nothing but ritualism. Angry letters are appearing in the papers, and since grievances grow the greater the more they are cherished, it is not unlikely we may have something more by-and-bye to record on the subject. —Ibid.

THE MAHARAJAH OF TRAVANCORE is expected to arrive at Madras, and extensive arrangements have been made to receive him. Lord Napier is to meet him at the railway station, and on the arrival of the train a salute of nineteen guns will be fired. BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A MEETING OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL of Bombay was held on Jan. 22nd, under the presidency of H.E. Sir Bartle Frere, K.C.B., K.S.I. The assent of the Viceroy to several legislative measures was read, and a Bill to amend the Bombay Municipal Act of 1865 passed the first reading. This Bill proposes the recovery of rates and taxes in advance instead of in arrear, removes some slight difficulties to the working of the Act, and makes a few additional provisions the necessity of which had become apparent. The consideration of a Bill for the alteration of the capital of the Bank of Bombay was postponed, as it is found that the alterations required to be made in the Act are not merely formal, as it was supposed they would be. Extension of time was granted for presenting the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for the performance of quarantine in the harbour of Bombay, and also for report of the committee on the proposed Bill for the levy of town duties in Bombay. —Times of India.

SALAR JUNG, THE MINISTER OF THE NIKAM, has been for some time past actively engaged in raising an Arab force from the Ishmaelite subjects of his royal master in the Hydrabad territory for the purpose of aiding him in resisting the encroachments of a Bedouin chief on his (Salar Jung's) patrimonial estate in Arabia. Negotiations were opened a few weeks ago in Bombay for the purpose of purchasing the steamer John Bright, but in consequence of some of her papers being at Calcutta the purchase was not effected. Since then means were taken to charter or purchase some other steamer for the purpose, which has resulted in the B.C.R.S.N. Co. disposing of their steamer Karanjah. Accordingly, all things being prepared, the expedition left Bombay for Makullah with 300 armed Arabs on board, besides specie to the amount of Rs. 2,36,000, and, likewise, it may be reasonably assumed, with all the necessary munitions of war.

CHINA & JAPAN.

The China Overland Mail of Jan. 15 contains the following intelligence:—

"The winter in the north has been unusually mild hitherto.

"Political advices from Hankow have been of a disturbed nature. Shortly after the departure of last mail intelligence was received that the rebels were within sixteen miles of the city on the 26th ultimo., and that the country people were flocking in and taking up their abode on Craven Island. The rebels appeared to be in considerable force.

"Letters from Nankin state that the Viceroy is about to take the field against the Honan Nienfei. Colonel Doyle will hold the disciplined troops and artillery in readiness to aid Li, if necessary.

"A great fire had broken out at Foochow, and consumed 700 houses.

"An extensive robbery of opium had taken place at Ningpo. Great excitement had been caused at Foochow on account of a graduate having been publicly flogged by order of a military mandarin.

"The Chinese ministers have given warning against libels in the Anglo-Chinese press on native officials.

"From Japan we learn that an insolent attempt was made to intimidate Sir Harry Parkes on Dec. 31. The Japan Herald gives the following account:—

"This morning, as her Britannic Majesty's minister was riding through Sinagawa he was confronted by a Yaconin, who, planting himself in the middle of the road, stood in a threatening attitude with his sword partially drawn. The Yaconins who composed the minister's escort, being called on to arrest the man, looked every other way, and allowed him to walk off. Sir Harry Parkes, determined not to let the fellow escape, rode after him, followed by the troop-sergeant major. The man, finding he was closely pursued, took to his heels, but was soon brought to bay, pale as death. At the order of the minister the man was then seized by the Yaconins and disarmed, the two swords, after some show of reluctance on the part of the Yaconins, being handed over to the minister. The disarmed Yaconin was then led a prisoner to the British Legation, where he was soon given over to the custody of a Japanese official who had been sent for to receive him."

"The civil war is now officially announced to be over, Chosiu being allowed to retain possession of his conquests on the other side of the Straits."

CEYLON.

DEATH OF MR. JUSTICE THOMSON.—The body of Mr. Henry Byerly Thomson was found on Saturday evening on the beach opposite the residence of Sir E. S. Creasy, at Wellevatte, where the deceased had been residing in the absence of the Chief Justice and his family. The verdict of the coroner's jury was "found drowned," as there was no evidence to show how deceased got into the water. The probability, however, seems to be that, having deposited his hat and umbrella on the beach, and stooping to bathe his face with the sea water, he fell forward, and from the state of his health was unable to recover himself, and so was drowned. For some time before his death he had suffered from fever and sleeplessness, to relieve which he imprudently resorted to opiates. The evidence before the inquest tended to disprove special excitement either from stimulants or opium on Saturday, and any idea of suicide seems out of the question. The deceased judge was interred in the new cemetery last evening, minute-guns corresponding to the salute to which he was entitled in life being fired from the ramparts as the procession moved to the burial place. So has passed away a man originally of fine parts—of considerable learning, and fair ability as a writer. He was the author of several works, prominent amongst which was a clever book "On the Choice of a Profession." Of his work on the laws of Ceylon we are not aware that any copies had reached the island previously to his melancholy death. Mr. Thomson was just preparing to take the Southern circuit, and we suppose no time will be lost in appointing a judge in his place. The choice will, doubtless, lie between Mr. Charles Stewart, who has only just descended from the bench, and Mr. Lawson, who once acted as Supreme Court Judge, and who is de facto district judge of Colombo.—Colombo Observer, Jan. 7.

DUTIES OF QUARTERMASTERS.

Jan. 29.—No. 63.—The following remarks by Govt., on a case of long continued neglect by a quartermaster to verify his store returns, are published for general guidance:—

"Judged by this report, the system does not make responsibility to be felt or understood; and for the particular adjustment of these past accounts no choice appears but to write off the deficiency.

"There are certain points of system good for all such accounts. Pre-eminently all fictions should be excluded. If an officer has, by any means, got rid of a thing, he should not state it to be in his stores. He can be debited with the value till he be properly discharged of it, or he can show it in some separate and fit category, but he should not be allowed, still less should he be compelled, as seems to be the case, to show it in his return of things in his stores.

"There should be some assurance of occasional counting or equivalent review of stock. This should always be done on transfer of charge.

"Were it thoroughly understood that returns of stock are intended to be true statements, and certificates to be the result of personal inquiry as to the facts certified, such cases of cumulated and long undiscovered error would not be likely to occur.

The proceedings to be sent to the adjt. gen. in order to due notice of Lieut. ———'s neglect."

THE SCINDE, PUNJAB, AND DELHI BANK CORPORATION (LIMITED).—The following communication has been addressed to the shareholders in this bank.—“80, King William-street, London, Feb. 23, 1867. As liquidators of the above company, we have now to inform you that we have received the necessary powers from Calcutta authorising the cancellation of the contemplated arrangement with the National Bank of India (Limited). We have also to inform you that, in accordance with the decision given yesterday by the Court of Chancery, the holders of the first and second issues of shares, whereon the sum of £10 per share has been paid, are entitled to have returned to them the sum of £5 per share, in order to place them on an equality with the holders of shares of the third issue, whereon the sum of £5 per share has been paid. Although it is possible that an appeal may be made against this decision, we have determined to return immediately to the shareholders of the first and second issues the sum of £6 per share, and to the shareholders of the third issue who have paid up their calls in full the sum of £1 per share. We enclose herewith instructions for your guidance.—We are, your obedient servants, A. YOUNG, A. F. HEWETT, and J. H. NORMAN, Liquidators.”

HOME.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 22.

THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSORE.

Sir H. RAWLINSON asked the Secretary of State for India if the Government had come to any decision on the recent appeal of the Maharajah of Mysore with regard to the succession of his adopted son, and if so whether he was prepared to lay on the table of the House any correspondence that had passed on the subject. He reminded the noble lord (Lord Cranborne) that a most numerously signed petition had been presented to that House in favour of the Rajah's claim to adoption, and that a deputation waited on him last year to advocate the same course, and therefore they might consider that the whole question had been reopened and reconsidered.

Sir E. COLEBROOKE felt that the position in which we stood was one surrounded by anxiety and danger, and that if the decision of the late Government were carried out it would carry great apprehension into many of the native States of India. With regard to this Mysore State, Lord Canning laid down a simple but broad principle, that the assurance as to the right of succession should be given to every chief who governed his own territory as a sovereign prince, and it was alleged that the Rajah of Mysore was not included within that condition.

LORD CRANBORNE: The first question upon which I want to touch, although it does not concern my main argument, is one raised by the hon. baronet (Sir E. Colebrooke), I mean the question of the adoption of the despatch of Lord Canning. The simple facts are these:—Lord Canning carefully excluded all those who were not in the Government of their own territories, and afterwards, by way of an illustration of what he meant, he sent a special warrant to every individual chief, upon whom he conferred the right of succession, and from that list the Rajah of Mysore was excluded. I think the adoption question does not arise on the present occasion. I should prefer in the few arguments I shall have to lay before the House to set that question altogether aside, and to treat the young man as the lineal son of the Maharajah, and to inquire into the rights which he may possess in that character. I hope by doing that to establish in the mind of the hon. baronet opposite, and it may be in the minds of every one of the native princes of India who share the fears which he attributed to them, the conviction that no thought ever entered into the mind of her Majesty's Government—and I am convinced that no thought will ever enter into the mind of any English statesman—of disturbing those solemn grants that Lord Canning made to them—(hear, hear). The hon. baronet very truly said that the whole of the Maharajah's title depended on the partition treaty of Mysore; it lies in the four corners of that treaty; and what we have to inquire is did the Maharajah receive a full right of sovereignty with succession, and, in fact, a fee simple of his territory, or did he receive only a life grant? Remember that this is not the case of an ancient sovereign whom we found in that country, and with whom we entered into a treaty. This is the case of a man whom we took, not strictly from a dungeon, but from a house in which he was confined when a child, was dying from ill-usage, and whom we rescued and placed on the throne. It is to the treaty, therefore, alone that we must look to see whether the Maharajah has any right to hand down to his lineal son the territory that was then granted to him. Now, I confess, that when I came carefully to examine this question, I was in no way prejudiced in favour of the views of my predecessor, but I was quite surprised at the interpretation of the treaty which several of those who argued the case for the Maharajah had adopted. The partition treaty of Mysore was a treaty in which the Maharajah himself had no share; it was a treaty between the Nizam and the English Government, and the object of it, as its name implies, was to divide that territory which jointly they had conquered from Tipoo. The name even of the Maharajah is not mentioned in the preamble. In each of the first three articles the greatest care is taken to say that the grant is one for ever first to England and then to the Nizam. Then comes the fourth article, which declares that a separate Government shall be established in Mysore, and for that purpose it is stipulated that the Maharajah of Mysore, a descendant of the ancient rajahs, was to possess the territory to be afterwards described. There is not a word in that article about sovereignty or perpetuity of any kind. As far, therefore, as the construction of treaties can guide us, it seems to me clear that the son of the Maharajah has no right to succeed to the sovereignty of Mysore. So much for the legal question. Now for the political one, and there I think the case assumes a different aspect. The hon. gentleman is quite right in saying—although I do not think the feeling is quite logical—he is quite right in saying that there exists a feeling among many distinguished princes in India with regard to the policy of her Majesty's Government in this case. I am sorry that the hon. gentleman introduced the question of fear into the argument which he presented to the House. I not only disclaim being actuated by that motive, but I must state, in the most distinct manner, that there does not seem to me to be the slightest occasion for any appeal to our fears in this instance—(hear.) But it would be much to be deplored if the result of our dominion was that the natives of India who are capable of government were absolutely and hopelessly excluded from such a career—(hear.) I believe the existence of a well-governed native State is not only a real benefit to the stability of our rule, but that more than anything else it raises the self-respect of the natives, and forms the ideal to which the popular feeling aspires. It is not, therefore, the intention of her Majesty's Government, whenever the Maharajah dies, that the State of Mysore should be annexed—(cheers). But then, if not annexed, what is to be done with it? Well, I must say that I am not inclined either to the opposite alternative. I do not think that it would be consistent with our duty to hand it over to a native Government unchecked and uncontrolled. The question really amounts to this—how far will you go in giving to this young man a share in the government of the territory which his father now possesses? No person can tell what will be the character of one who is yet a child. When this youth shall have advanced in years—when he shall have reached some 20 years of age—it may be possible for those charged with the responsibility of governing India to decide whether he is likely to imitate the bright example set in the neighbouring State of Travancore, or whether there is good reason to fear that he will yield to that prodigality and favouritism which are the hereditary sins of the native Courts. We shall leave the decision of that point to those on whom the responsibility will properly devolve. It is not the wish of her Majesty's Government in any way to fetter the discretion, or to bind the judgment of those who will hereafter have before them the facts with which we are now unacquainted, and who will, therefore, be better qualified to adopt the conclusions to which they may legitimately lead. I wish to repeat that I am uttering no pledge. We leave the decision of the case to those on whom the responsibility of that decision must rest. When the present Maharajah dies no change will be made in the form in which the government of Mysore will be conducted. We shall of course be glad to give the young Maharajah all the advantages of a European education—(hear, hear) and so to prepare him to the best of our ability for the responsibility which we hope it will one day be possible to confer upon him—(hear, hear). I need hardly add, that of course proper arrangements will be made for maintaining him in a condition suited to his rank; but I think I shall best do my duty by pledging the British Government no further. With regard to the last portion of the question of the hon. gentleman, I can only say that the despatch in answer to the application of the Maharajah of Mysore will be laid upon the table; and it will then be competent to him if he does not approve of the view of her Majesty's Government to take the decision of the House upon the subject—(loud cheers).

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 26.

THE BRITISH ARMY IN INDIA AND THE COLONIES.

Major ANSON, in rising to move for a select committee to inquire into the duties performed by the British army in India and the colonies, and also to inquire how far it might be desirable to employ certain portions of her Majesty's native Indian army in our colonial and military dependencies, said that no apology was required for bringing forward a question of such importance. The duties performed by our army in India rendered it different to any other army in the world, making it more expensive and less fit for the purposes of war than it ought to be. In the case of a European war our colonies must mainly depend on the naval defences, and the nature of the troops employed would be a matter of very little importance. The change proposed would tend to the removal of a source of great anxiety in India, would give us a greater control over our Indian army, and make it look sharper after its discipline, and give us greater power in case of any disaffection manifesting itself in the native army. He believed that no efficient system could be carried out in time of war unless it was organised in time of peace.

Mr. O'REILLY said he had an amendment to propose which would not clash with the proposition of the hon. and gallant gentleman, but rather enlarge the scope of the inquiry. He proposed to add to the motion the following words, "or to organise a force of Asiatic troops for general service in suitable climates." The hon. and gallant gentleman pointed out several strong arguments in favour of his amendment. We might economise our European troops to the greatest possible extent by rendering their service less distant and less onerous, which could be easily accomplished by the utilisation of our modern systems of telegraphy and improved steam transport for the conveyance of troops. His Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief was favourable to the employment of Asiatic troops in our colonies, provided they had a backbone of European troops to strengthen them, and the only question was where should that backbone be placed? It should evidently be placed in the most healthy and the most central point possible, and it would be found that Singapore possessed those conditions. It was a central point for the districts he had mentioned, and it was a particularly healthy place for Europeans, and he believed the wisest thing we could do would be by making use of such a point, to reserve our household troops at such a place, supplementing them by a large and adequate force of Asiatic troops in our various colonies, and then to give thorough efficiency to the system he suggested by the use of the telegraph and of our steam transports.

Major DICKSON took a general view of the military condition of our colonies and foreign possessions, and advocated the large employment of Sikhs.

Sir H. RAWLINSON did not think that the Indian soldiers were so hardy as represented, and he was against any great increase of the Sikh army. The agglomeration of members of the same race in an Eastern army was apt to engender among them a feeling of independence and insubordination, and it thus became to the ruling power an inevitable element of danger. It should also be borne in mind that if the native regiments were removed from India for the purpose of garrisoning our colonial stations their places would have to be supplied by other troops. The hon. and gallant gentleman who introduced the motion seemed to think that the European soldiers in India were required as a counterpoise to the native army, but it must be observed that that army was no larger than the necessities of the case rendered necessary, for otherwise the government would only have to adopt the simple plan of disbanding some 50,000 or 100,000 men.

General PEEL said he did not rise for the purpose of opposing the appointment of the committee moved for by his hon. and gallant friend, but he wished to make a few remarks upon the matter. Everybody must be perfectly aware that no report of a committee of the House of Commons could relieve either the Governor General or the Government of India from the responsibility of calling upon the House to supply the number of European troops which they thought necessary for the safety of India. He thought the best security was that they would not call for more than they considered necessary in the great drain which the employment of these troops already caused to their finances. The right hon. and gallant gentleman noticed other phases of the question, and went on to say that he should disagree with any proposition to substitute such a force for British regiments in healthy colonies, and should strongly object to seeing Indian soldiers doing duty at Gibraltar, Malta or New Zealand. There were 42 regiments of British troops in the colonies, and only nine places where native troops could be substituted for them, and this would have very little effect in reducing the requirements on the British army generally. Another objection was the difficulty of supplying to native troops a sufficient number of officers who would be acquainted with their customs and language. Moreover, there was great advantage of having British troops in the colonies, for the colonists reposed greater confidence in them, and in some instances maintained them at their own cost. He hoped the committee, if appointed, would inquire into particular and definite objects; for if they wandered over military questions he could not see that any good result would follow.

Captain VIVIAN congratulated the hon. and gallant gentleman who had brought forward the motion on the success he had met with. He referred to several of the points raised in the course of the discussion, and said that his hon. and gallant friend had, in introducing the subject, so completely exhausted it, that he would not trouble the House with any further remarks.

Mr. LAING believed that the native interests of India required the presence of a European force there. From that basis the hon. gentleman considered the proposal of the hon. and gallant gentleman, and gave it as his opinion that the measure taken some years ago to break up the staff of the Indian army was a mistake, and if it were to be done over again there would be few found to agree to it. The forces might have been so united as to be under one commander-in-chief, and both might have been held to be under one commander-in-chief, but a separate force of 30,000 or 40,000 men, with their officers, might have been kept for the separate service of India. He invited the attention of the noble lord the Secretary for India to this question, which, he believed, was the master difficulty, and which, if it could be settled, all the minor difficulties would settle themselves.

Lord CRANBORNE trusted that the hon. member who had brought forward this question, to which the Government had no objection, would exercise such a restraint upon his inquiry as would prevent him from running into a multiplicity of subjects, in which the whole value of the investigation would be lost. He hoped, for instance, that he would not be induced by his hon. friend opposite to go into the question of the amalgamation of the Indian with the English army. He concurred with his hon. friend in saying that in consequence of this amalgamation a great difficulty had arisen of late years. He would not say that that amalgamation had been a mistake; it was perhaps impossible to be avoided. He concurred with his hon. friend in thinking that it was the duty of every English minister to watch anxiously the progress of that measure, and to see whether a remedy might be provided for the evils it occasioned; but he would be sorry if the value of the present investigation were to be lost by being mixed up with that large question. The noble lord, in the course of his further remarks, suggested that the committee should not content themselves with an oral investigation only, but should also address their inquiries to the highest authorities in India. By that means they might collect very valuable information, and possibly be the means of introducing a useful reform in our military system.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON said, as the committee had been agreed to by the right hon. gentleman opposite, he should not object to it. He agreed with every word of the speech of that right hon. gentleman, which might well have been made if he had been refusing the appointment of a committee. Even if it were thought desirable to appoint a committee there should, he thought, have been some limit to this, which must now be a vague and useless inquiry.

Major PARKER said that touching this question of amalgamation he felt it was due to the Indian service to remind the House that it was not only in the recent services in China that these armies were usefully employed, but under Abercrombie in Egypt, and in their services in Java they distinguished themselves to the great satisfaction of those in authority. Although it was very questionable how far native troops under present circumstances could be employed out of Asia, he thought to employ those troops who had mutinied in upholding the British flag in other parts would be most injurious to the discipline of the troops in India, and to the honour and welfare of this country.

Major ANSON briefly replied, observing that the objections to the motion had showed how useful the inquiry would be.

The motion, with the amendment of Mr. O'Reilly, was carried.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FEB. 28.

THE CONTRACT LAW FOR INDIA.

Mr. KINNAIRD asked the Secretary of State for India what was the present state of the question about a contract law for India, whether any legal opinion in England had been taken as to the principle of enforcing indigo and other agricultural contracts by penal enactments; and, if so, whether he had any objection to lay that opinion upon the table of the house.

Lord CRANBORNE: A Bill has been sent home from Calcutta, making a renewed attempt to settle this difficult question. It was submitted to the Indian Law Commissioners, and I am sorry to say they reported that in their opinion the principle it represented was not a sound one, and that it was not advisable it should be adopted. If the hon. gentleman will move for the papers no objection will be made to the motion. No despatch has yet been sent to the Government of India on the subject, because we have not yet surrendered all hope that we shall be enabled to discover some means of giving to the planters the redress which they undoubtedly require, keeping also in view a due regard to the protection of the ryots.

COUNSEL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA BILL.

Mr. SELWYN, in moving the second reading of this Bill, said the exclusion of the standing counsel to the Secretary of State for India from a seat in that House was quite an anomaly, and was never intended by the framers of the Act of 1858, for at that time, and for some time subsequently, the office was held by Mr. Wigram, who had a seat in that House. He thought he was entitled to say that this accidental exclusion ought to be remedied.

Mr. Serjeant GASELEE objected to the Bill on principle, and moved that it be read a second time that day six months.

After a discussion,

Mr. WHITE moved the adjournment of the debate.

The House divided, when the motion for adjournment was rejected by fifty-eight to thirty-four.

On the original question being put,

Mr. GLADSTONE suggested that if his hon. and learned friend thought it desirable to raise the question with a view to further discussion, which seemed to be somewhat desirable, he would be at liberty to do so on going into committee.

The Bill was then read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MARCH 1.

EXPORTATION OF COOLIES.

Mr. B. COCHRANE called attention to the exportation of coolies from the East Indies to the West Indies and the Mauritius. He gave several instances of great mortality on board several ships, ranging as high as 28 per cent., and he contended that the system was but slavery under another name.

Mr. ADDERLEY said no class of men were so carefully and elaborately protected as these coolies, both in the passage over, on their arrival in the country where they are taken, and to secure their proper treatment and their return to their own country. The great mortality the hon. member referred to was owing to typhus fever having broken out on those ships, and the average mortality was not 5 per cent. Most of the coolies saved money, and took it back with them to their own country.

Mr. CARDWELL believed the system was beneficial both to the coolies and the planters of the West Indies and the Mauritius. Every possible precaution was taken to prevent abuse, and he did not think that because in one or two instances there had been abuse the system should be abolished.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—FEB. 28.

FORD V. EWART AND OTHERS.

The plaintiff in this case was trustee under an assignment for the creditors of Messrs. Hungate and Cussens, brokers and merchants, and the defendants carried on business in London, Liverpool, and Bombay. On the 18th of April, 1866, the defendants' Bombay house received of Messrs. Nicoll and Co. £524. 4s. 1d. on account of the freight of the ship Countess of Yarborough, and the present action was to recover that amount from them.

The plaintiff's case was that the sum had been received on account of Messrs. Hungate and Cussens, and was available for their creditors; whilst the defendants contended that there had been an assignment to them of the freight of the Countess of Yarborough by Messrs. Hungate and Cussens on account of a debt due from the latter firm.

A good deal of correspondence was read, and some oral evidence was given, and in the end the jury found for the plaintiff for £524. 4s. 1d.

The trial of this cause ended the sittings, but a very heavy list of causes in arrears stands over.

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES and COSTUMES of the PEOPLE of INDIA

BY J. FORBES WATSON, M.A., M.D., F.R.A.S.,

Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial 4to, morocco back, cloth, with numerous Coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

This work—by affording a Key to the Fashions of the People, and to the Cotton, Silk, and Wool Textiles in actual use in India—is of special interest to Manufacturers, Merchants, and Agents; as also to the student and lover of ornamental art.

"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author, Dr. J. Forbes Watson, is conclusive evidence of his being the right man in the right place. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the drawings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art, luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce. We ought to state that the Secretary of State for India not only deserves the highest praise for having had this work prepared and distributed, but likewise for having allowed a publisher to use the type and photographic plates so as to be able to produce a certain number of copies for sale. In no other way could copies of this unique and costly volume have been offered to the public at a reasonable price."—Morning Post, Jan. 3, 1867.

THE HISTORY

OF THE

BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA.

FROM THE

APPOINTMENT OF LORD HARDINGE

TO THE

COMPANY.

BY

LIONEL JAMES TROTTER,

Late of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The first volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment in 1844 to the retirement of the Marquis of Dalhousie in 1856.

The second volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

"Captain Trotter has done good service in providing the public with the sequel to a standard work. . . . And in every way his performance is worthy to take rank with that of his predecessor. . . . The thoroughly satisfactory manner in which the task has been performed is greatly to the author's credit. . . . We take our leave of the work, congratulating its author upon having produced an addition to the 'History of India' at once permanent in purpose and popular in execution; acceptable in every way to the wants of the public, and especially adapted for the enlightenment of young members of the local service, to whom the modern annals of the country which they help to administer are of far more importance than the history of remote periods having little or no relation to the present day."—Standard.

"Both the plan and execution of the work are deserving of high praise. Full of interest and animation, and narrates with clearness and brevity all that took place during the period of which it treats. . . . The second volume of Mr. Trotter's history possesses the same merits by which the first was distinguished. It is written with great animation, and often with considerable graphic power. It tells its story with perspicuity and without needless or tiresome digressions. It avoids as far as possible that controversial vein into which Indian politicians and historians are alike prone to fall, and it is as impartial as any work is likely to be which deals with times so near our own. . . . The narrative of the spirit-stirring events of the mutiny will of course have the greatest attraction for most readers, and it is in truth the best, as it is the principal part of the present volume. . . . It appears to us that Mr. Trotter has been eminently successful in his treatment of a very exciting and interesting period of recent history."—London Review.

"The volume is full of interesting matter comprising every event of importance during the exciting period of the rebellion, told in a concise, straightforward, and impartial manner, unnumbered by those copious extracts from documentary evidence which often serve no other purpose than increasing the bulk without adding to the usefulness of a work of this description."—Observer.

"Captain Trotter's reflections are few. . . . He has his own views, though he does not force them upon us in detail. . . . All this proves him to be far above the narrowness of the average Anglo-Indian. He speaks out boldly, too, in defence of Lord Gough. . . . A word as to our author's descriptive powers; they are such as his lighter writings would lead us to expect. . . . Whatever he has to tell Captain Trotter tells it in an animated and picturesque style. The night on the field at Perozeahur . . . is admirably painted; so is the grand success of Goojat. The disarming of the veterans of the Khalsa . . . is a striking scene. Captain Trotter's book opens up many other interesting questions; it is full of notices of social changes; it points out the specially unfortunate way in which the annexation of Oudh was managed."—Fortnightly Review, May 15.

"Here we have before us the first volume of an eminently readable history. . . . The arrangement of the matter, the style, and, above all, the spirit which pervades his pages, are worthy of great commendation. Mr. Trotter is singularly free from the faults of a partisan writer. . . . The volume concludes with a masterly criticism on Lord Dalhousie's character and services."—Calcutta Englishman, March 17.

"We cannot say that he has dealt unjustly by Lord Canning's memory. . . . A well-considered volume, in which the heartiest acknowledgments are paid to Lord Canning for his temperate wisdom at a time when there was no man more abused than he. . . . He writes thoughtfully, yet with a soldier's sense of the stir of a brisk military narrative. His history of this great struggle is full and impartial. We need not follow him through his vigorous rehearsal of the well-known incidents. It forms a very lucid history, the several parts being well planned and well grouped, and no important point being omitted or misrepresented."—Examiner, September 15.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail brings us our usual papers, from Calcutta to the 7th of February, Madras to the same date, and Bombay to the 13th February. It will be seen that the new postal arrangements give us direct communication with Madras, as well as with the other Presidencies, by every mail.

Sir Cecil Beadon's defence of his dealing with the famine in Bengal, after having been published without leave by the Englishman, has been officially communicated to the Friend of India, and reproduced by that journal with a clear conscience. An abstract of the document will be found in another column. This, and Sir Cecil's speech upon the subject to the Bengal Council, have excited much interest, but very little controversy; for most people are of the same opinion—that the revelations are in a very high degree damaging to the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal. It is noticeable that in the speech Sir Cecil clears up one point which was, as a matter of form, open to question. Everybody understood at the time that it was the Lieutenant-governor who had told Lord Cranborne that the local resources were sufficient for the relief of the afflicted districts, and induced his lordship to discountenance the measures which the Lord Mayor proposed to take for the purpose. But the fact was not officially announced. Now we find Sir Cecil saying:—"The Calcutta committee, in addition to the funds they raised for local distress, placed about two and a-half lakhs at the disposal of the Board of Revenue for relief in the provinces. It was during that time that an appeal was made by the Calcutta committee to the Lord Mayor of London, asking him to raise subscriptions in England for the relief of the sufferers. He came to the conclusion that no aid from England was necessary, and that the liberality of the Indian public would suffice for the emergency." Acting on that opinion, the Secretary of State for India told the Lord Mayor that it was not necessary to raise subscriptions in England; but, to make sure that the distress should be amply relieved, Lord Cranborne said he had given instructions that whatever sums were wanted should be furnished by the Government of India.

A public meeting has been held at Calcutta, at which the Viceroy presided, to concert measures for supporting the children who have been made orphans by the famine. Government have determined to surrender the whole of the land revenue of Orissa due last year, except in the few permanently settled estates, which are to be treated with consideration. The Province of Orissa is now suffering from a virulent attack of small-pox. The Famine Commissioners have commenced their sittings at Calcutta.

We learn that the Imperial and Bengal Legislatures, like that of Bombay last session, have been engaged in considering Bills for the suppression of public gambling. Since the establishment of the new police the vice has spread with alarming rapidity, for, to prevent the oppression of their predecessors, the new constables are not allowed to interfere with gamblers except in places like Calcutta and Howrah, which have local Acts. The Penal Code is silent on the subject, though Mr. Maine promises that it will be discussed whenever that Code is revised. Meanwhile the local authorities of all Northern and Central India will be able to put these Bills, when passed into law, in force whenever they choose. Police officers above a certain grade will have power to enter public gaming houses and arrest offenders. No measure would so fully combine the support of all respectable Hindoos and Mussulmans as one which would go further and prohibit private gambling. When we have a better police even that may be done.

Boothan reminded us of its existence the other day in a rather satisfactory manner. It was reported that the country was quiet, and that the Penlows and the Deb Rajah were doing all in their power to induce the inhabitants to conform to the institutions of more civilised countries. Now, however, information has reached us that a revolution has been carried out, though without the usual accompaniment of bloodshed. The causes assigned are, that the British Government had lately sent several communications to the Deb Rajah, instead of to the Dhurm Rajah, and this roused the anger and jealousy of the latter. Finally, the Council and the Dhurm Rajah decided to abolish altogether the office of Deb Rajah, which has accordingly been done, and the two Rajahships are now united in the person of the Dhurm Rajah.

The Mofussilite publishes news, from a native point of view, from Russian Turkestan up to 2nd December last. Besides the lower classes the officials and respectable residents of Bokhara have gone over to the Commander of the Russian army by hundreds, although the Ghazees still adhere to the Ameer. His mercenaries are deserting to their villages. Mosques are becoming empty of the fervent Mollahs who used to deliver lectures to the rural population to unite in the holy war. The Ameer is stationed with his distracted and much reduced troops in a village between Samurkhund and Bokhara, and pays visits to the former city, although with much timidity. His great defeat at Jazuk, and breaking his word with General Kryjanovski, which resulted ultimately in the fall of the citadel, will make him remember long the power of Russia.

The state of affairs in Afghanistan will be found described in another column. Confusion is worse confounded in Cabul, where a chronic state of anarchy seems to be the natural order of things.

At Bombay everybody was on the alert to welcome the coming and speed the parting Governor. Minor festivities in honour of the latter were continual, and the great farewell banquet was to take place on the day after the departure of the mail.

Colonel Merewether had returned from Massowah to Aden. Letters were received at the former port from the captives, who were all well but still prisoners. The rebels on the frontier were making communication with the interior difficult.

The Murree tribe committed a raid on the 29th January at Goranee, but the Sind Horse intercepted and killed fifty of them and took one prisoner, one sowar only being wounded. They have also committed another raid on the Punjab frontier, about 1,200 of them attacked the village of Wurrud on the Punjab side on the 26th ult. The villagers, assisted by the 5th Punjab Cavalry, repulsed the raiders, killing between 100 and 150 of them, amongst whom was Goolam Hussein, the most warlike of their chiefs. British loss not known.

At Madras there had been an Investiture of the Star of India, by the Governor, in favour of several distinguished persons.

Lord Napier had been scandalising public opinion by making another unpopular appointment. There can, however, be no ground for complaint if the present favourite be found to bear the test of efficiency as well as the former one.

The next arrival from India will be the Calcutta Mail, which is due in London on Wednesday next.

THE QUESTION OF FUEL SUPPLY FOR THE RAILWAY is one that has long occupied the attention of the company and the Government. Some interesting official papers have recently been published, showing the results of inquiries that have been made by Government as to the possibility of extending fire-wood cultivation in different parts of the Presidency, and especially in those districts through which the railway runs. It is stated that the railway company have proved that the substitution of wood for coal saves more than one-half the cost of fuel. At the present rates, fire-wood costs the company Rs. 4½ per ton, while coal, delivered at the Jollapet Junction, costs Rs. 25 per ton, and as one ton of coal is found to be equivalent to three tons of fire-wood, the saving to the company is obvious. But, as Captain Beddome, the officiating Conservator of Forests, points out, at the present rate of consumption there must in a few years be a great difficulty about the supply of wood without the aid of artificial planting. The problem to solve, therefore, is how to keep up the present supplies. The Government requested its collectors to ascertain how far private enterprise was likely to meet the emergency, and what aid would be required from Government to assist private speculation, and in the event of private enterprise not sufficing, what measures could advantageously be adopted by Government. The collectors who have reported on the subject seem to be unanimous in the opinion that there is not the "slightest chance" of private enterprise meeting our requirements; the Government and the railway are accordingly left to their own resources. The measures that have so far been adopted are these. The Home Government has permitted the railway company to commence two experimental plantations, and the results of these, it is thought, will afford valuable data for future guidance. In the meantime the local Government has directed that certain jungle tracts situated near the lines of railway are to be taken in charge by the Forest Department, with a view to their being preserved from the ravages of fire and the incursions of cattle. Thus six tracts, aggregating twelve square miles, have been reserved in the Salem District, 6,000 acres near the Walliar tract in Coimbatore, and large tracts in North Arcot. The Board of Revenue, moreover, has been directed to consider whether the rates of seigniorage might not be advantageously raised. At present the rates appear to be somewhat arbitrarily fixed. The Government has stated that the seigniorage should be regulated with reference to the cost of production, and "whatever price may be fixed upon must be applicable to the general public as well as the railway company."

A SIGN OF THE TIMES.—A Bombay paper remarks that the invitation card issued by the chief of Jamkhundee for an entertainment to be given to Sir Bartle Frere states:—"The chief and Bae Saheb of Jamkhundee" request the pleasure of So-and-so's company. This is the first instance of a Brahmin lady having her name associated with her husband's in the interchange of social courtesies with Europeans. The Bae Saheb was lately present at Lady Frere's "At Home." The only instance of this in Calcutta was the wife of the first native civilian at Lady Lawrence's Drawing Room.

A NEW WEEKLY PAPER is to make its appearance at Ootacamund on the 24th January. It is to be called The Southern India Observer and Agricultural Times, and is to be started by a limited liability company.

THE BOMBAY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE has held a meeting to discuss the plan of Mr. Russel Aitken, Engineer to the Municipality, for the construction of wet docks in the harbour, and has referred the subject to a committee.

THE BOMBAY SHAREHOLDERS of the Indian Peninsula, London, and China Bank have resolved that that institution shall be wound up.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

FRIDAY, March 8, 1867.

THE PROPOSED FRONTIER FORTS.

We had hoped that before this some Member of Parliament acquainted with, or interested in, India would have asked the Government for information respecting the erection of the forts to which we recently alluded. The expenditure of money in India does not appear to interest the English public sufficiently. Yet the manipulation of the financial department of our Indian Government ought to be carefully watched by those who have investments in Indian securities. We know that to condemn the construction of these forts on account of the apparent waste of money which such a course involves is to take a very low ground of argument. Unfortunately, it is necessary to adopt this line when we wish to arouse the British Parliamentary lion. We cannot believe that Lord Cranborne ever sanctioned this "defence" folly. His acts bear the stamp of statesmanship, and surely this stroke has none of that firmness and character which mark the acts of a wise administrator. Not only are forts to be erected at Peshawur and other places in the Punjab, but we hear that the fort of Gwalior is to be repaired and utilised. Of whatever nature these forts may be we hold there is no necessity for them. The public money ought to be spent in making a network of railways, in works of irrigation, and in educating and improving the people.

Were we to argue the matter from a military point of view we doubt much whether these stray forts, unsupported by any accumulation of military strength in their vicinity, would be considered advantageous defences. Besides, the erection of forts now, in the height of our power, is a sign rather of weakness than of strength. If this idea of defence has been sanctioned at the recommendation of the Governor-general, the sooner he returns to England the better it will be for the European soldiers in India, and the holders of Indian securities everywhere.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF SIR CHARLES WOOD.

THOMAS CARLYLE has said that if no man is a hero to his valet, it is the valet's fault, not that of his master. It is certain that in the case of a gentleman of culture and refinement intellectual familiarity with a superior does not breed contempt. Nothing seems more common than for men to be heroes to their private secretaries, whose natural business in such a case is to become their biographers. Without going back to instances which have become historical, we find within a few months of each other the private secretaries of a Viceroy of India and a Secretary for India respectively, not exactly writing biographies of their principals, but putting forth reviews of their administrations in the most friendly possible spirit. The danger of course is that the friendly spirit, by misleading the writer, will mislead the reader also; and Mr. Hovell-Thurlow the other day certainly abused the privilege accorded in such cases. It is the more satisfactory therefore to find Mr. West* doing his spiriting comparatively gently, and placing the events of Sir Charles Wood's administration before the public with at least no oppressive partiality. Mr. West, indeed, is content for the most part to allow his facts to speak for themselves, and where he pauses to praise the principal actor it is at least not at the expense of other persons of the drama. He is in fact as cautious in his criticism as Mr. Thurlow was free, and as careful to afford favourable consideration as Mr. Thurlow was to give general offence.

A writer who, enjoying so many advantages, can employ them with so much discretion, has claims upon public confidence which will not be denied in the present case. We must confess that we expected a more bureaucratic style of performance, bound more tightly with the red tape, stamped more decidedly with the seal of office;—one in which the men of action would be comparatively ignored, and every good done during the seven years under review laid at the door of the Indian Secretary—with a great deal of laudatory rattling to call his attention to the tribute. But there is nothing of the kind to complain of in the reality. We may guess that the part of Hamlet is not omitted from the political drama; but there is no undue "starring," the other characters having a share of prominence, even down to the Rosencrantzes and the Guildensterns. The work in fact is a very careful summary of the events of Sir Charles Wood's administration, divided, not chronologically, but according to subject matter. Thus we have chapters devoted respectively to Home Government, Government of India and Parliamentary Legislation, Law and Justice, Indigo and Contract Law and Rent, Finance, Currency, Land Revenue, Public Works, Cotton, Education, Political, Military, Police, and Navy.

If for whatever beneficial results have been attained in these departments the lion's share of praise be given to Sir Charles Wood, it is only his official due, just as the lion's share of prize-money is given to the Commander of the Forces. And Mr. West's personal attachment to his chief appears sufficient to have excused a more partial estimate of his services. Alluding to the accident which was the real cause of Sir Charles Wood's retirement from office, the writer says:—"It was impossible that Sir Charles Wood could have witnessed without some feeling of pride and satisfaction the sincere regret caused by his retirement from the field of Indian politics. To him the enforced relinquishment of a life's pursuit must have been inevitably a source of much regret. To those associated with him in official business it was a matter of deep sorrow, and at the Council table, when he announced his retirement, there were few who could trust their voices to express the emotion which they felt. Though Sir Charles Wood had frequently differed from individual councillors, his masterly conduct of business, his quick appreciation of merit, his experience and knowledge, his frank manners, and his liberal consideration for the feelings and opinions of others, had won a place in every heart, and those who differed from him the most were not those who regretted his loss the least."

It is due to Mr. West to add that his book is marked by an easy, accurate style, with a pleasant absence of pretentiousness or official affectation.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—With reference to the recent order of the Indian Government, issued with the view of encouraging officers to study the native languages, by allowing them to count their leave while studying as service, to the extent of two years, toward a degree of honour, I hope you will allow one who understands the subject as I do to make a few remarks. First of all I am convinced that the order will prove a mere flash in the pan, because no officer can, in my opinion, reasonably expect to pass for a degree in any of the native languages in the prescribed time, unless he already knows the language well, or possesses an extraordinary genius for the task. The fact is, that the Indian Government were not so well advised as they might have been, regarding the different orders which they have issued during the last fifteen years, with the intention of stirring up the officers to study the native languages. That this is the case is shown by the trifling results which have followed; for the Indian officers, with very few exceptions, are averse to going to the expense and trouble of studying without knowing that they will really get something by it. About fifteen years ago Government offered a prize of a thousand rupees to officers passing a certain very high examination in two languages; on which about a dozen officers in the Bengal Presidency passed the test; and then two facts became apparent, showing that the encouragement held out amounted de facto to nil. One of these was, that it did not follow because an officer passed in the test, that he would be taken away from his regiment and provided with a staff appointment; and the other, that the money prize only just covered the studying expenses, leaving quite a trifling balance by way of profit. After this officers were not long in discovering that the road to advancement lay in other channels rather than in the studying of the black classics, and that it was quite sufficient for the purpose of most officers to pass merely in the lower standard in Hindoostanee, if they had only interest to profit by it. The only other inducement was the hope of becoming interpreter and quartermaster to his regiment; but the mutiny and the amalgamation scheme entirely stopped all advancement in this quarter, leaving the officers with no inducement to study except for the lower standard, as, under the present system, the native regiments have no interpreters. In lieu of the old system, a new and saving system was adopted, of appointing interpreters to stations instead of to native regiments, on the slender staff pay of £10 per month, part of which went to keeping up a moonshee, if he was required. Lastly, in 1865 these appointments were knocked on the head, and an order was issued for interpreters on a small scale of pay to be appointed to every European regiment; but this proved to be a mere flash in the pan, for the interpreters were not forthcoming who were willing to accept the appointment, in proof of which I have only to state that according to my Indian Army List of last year I find that out of forty-one of Hill European regiments there are only nine interpreters (instead of forty-one, the authorised complement), of which number more than half are disqualified by not having passed the required examination. Sir W. Mansfield, in his Circular to Regiments, admitted the inadequateness of the pay attached to the appointment, but his Excellency provided, as he considered, for this inadequateness by proposing or directing (for I forget the exact words) that interpreters should make up for it by teaching their brother officers, the teacher's fee not to exceed Rs. 30 a month!!! This was received with great disfavour and made matters worse. If Government really want to have their orders correctly explained to the native soldiers, and the proceedings of Courts-martial, &c., properly translated, they must retain the services of properly qualified officers, and to obtain these and a future supply they must give a substantial inducement by making the appointment worth holding. And this could be effected by appointing an interpreter to every native regiment on a salary at least equal to that of the adjutant of a native regiment, viz., Rs. 200, to be held by officers of any rank, as there are not many subalterns who have passed the full examination.—Yours truly,

AN OLD OFFICER.

THE HIGH COURT v. THE "SUDDER."

So admirable is that law of Providence under which past pain and sorrow are forgotten, that we have nowhere seen in public any expression of satisfaction that the Company's Courts of Sudder Dewanny and Nizamut Adawlut have ceased to exist. In no part of India, however remote or obscure, can a relic of one of the four Sudder Courts be found. The past cycles of the earth's history have left fossil deposits to mark the kind of life and organisation which preceded the creation of man. We can picture with almost absolute accuracy the state of the world during any geological period. Even in the time of man one species, the Dodo, has ceased to exist. But that singular variety of mankind, the Company's Sudder Judge, is not to be found in India at least. Four High Courts and one Chief Court have transformed the last specimens as completely, let us hope, as fiery convulsions changed the metamorphic rocks into their present condition. On something like the principle of natural selection the High Court judges who once presided in the Sudder have been developed into a higher form, and play a part as useful in life as their former existence was objectless or positively baneful. No longer, or not to such an extent, do the murderer and the forger, the perjured and the corrupt litigant, look upon the once Sudder judge as their warmest friend. No longer is he a terror to honest men, and, if not a praise, at least a protection to them that do ill. Developed, metamorphosed, he frequents better company, and fulfils higher functions. With a barrister chief justice and barrister colleagues, with new codes and new methods, he has become a useful member of the body politic.

We showed about this time last year the great improvement wrought by the Bengal High Court in civil litigation. But, bad as the late Sudder was on its civil side, and especially in its decisions affecting the tenure and rent of land, it was on the criminal side that the highest tribunal so often called forth the wrath of the subordinate courts and the laughter or indignation of the public. We remember one of the most weighty of the old judges announcing at dinner the important fact that he had sanctioned the hanging of a murderer, and so rare or impossible was this considered by himself and his friends that he was warmly congratulated for once preferring justice to a kind of mercy very fatal to society. Has the High Court of Bengal shown itself as great an improvement on the criminal as on the civil side? We have compiled a little table of criminal appeals with the view of discovering this:—

SUDDER—
1850 ...	208	33	98	339
1855 ...	253	53	69	375
HIGH COURT—
1865 ...	561	63	52	676

As the Sudder drew near dissolution or transformation the wheezy old court seems to have improved. But these figures show how greatly convictions have increased under its successor, and how largely reversals of the decisions of the lower courts have diminished. In 1850 the Sudder admitted nearly one third of the appeals. And these, be it remembered, were from criminals of the deepest dye against the sentences of magistrates and judges who knew the facts, had in many cases visited the scene of the crime, and had in all enjoyed the advantage of that best guide to the value of evidence in courts, where lying and perjury are the rule—the presence of the prisoner, the accusers and the witnesses.

The High Court of Bengal—and the same will be found true of those of Madras, Bombay, Agra, and even Lahore—has done a ser-
